

e 10/14.

A T A L E O F A T U B.

Written for the Universal IMPROVEMENT
O F
M A N K I N D.

Dis multumque desideratum.

To which is added,
An Account of a BATTLE between the Antient and Modern Books in St. James's Library.

A L S O
A DISCOURSE concerning the Mechanical Operation of the SPIRIT, in a LETTER to a FRIEND. A Fragment.

Basima eacabasa eanaa irrausitta, diarba da caeotaba fobor camelanthi. Iren. Lib. . C. 18.

— *Juvantque novos decerpere flores,
Insignemque meo capiti petere inde coronam,
Unde prius nulli velarunt tempora Musa.* Lucr.

The Ninth EDITION: With the AUTHOR'S Apology and Explanatory Notes.
By W. WOTTON, B. D. and Others.

D U B L I N :

Printed for G. FAULKNER in Essex-street. MDCCLVI.

Otto Friedrich Swoboda Dublin 5 Octbr 1788. cost - 1-7 1/2

A N

A P O L O G Y, &c.

IF good and ill Nature equally operated upon Mankind, I might have saved myself the Trouble of this Apology; for it is manifest by the Reception the following Discourse hath met with, that those who approve it are a great Majority among the Men of Taste; yet, there have been two or three Treatises written expressly against it, besides many others that have flirted at it occasionally, without one Syllable having been ever published in its Defence, or even Quotation to its Advantage, that I can remember, except by the Polite Author of a late Discourse between a Deist and a Socinian.

THEREFORE, since the Book seemeth calculated to live at least as long as our Language and our Taste admit no great Alterations, I am content to convey some Apology along with it.

THE greatest Part of that Book was finished above Thirteen Years since, (1696) which is Eight Years before it was published. The Author was then Young, his Invention at the Height, and his Reading fresh in his Head. By the Assistance of some Thinking, and much Conversation, he had endeavoured to strip himself of as many real Prejudices as he could: I say real ones, because, under the Notion of Prejudices, he knew to what dangerous Heights some Men have proceeded. Thus prepared, he thought the numerous and gross Corruptions in Religion and Learning might furnish Matter for a Satyr, that would be useful and diverting: He resolved to proceed in a Manner that should be altogether new, the World having been already too long nauseated with endless Repetitions upon every Subject. The Abuses in Religion he proposed to set forth in the Allegory of the Coats, and the three Brothers, which was to make up the Body of the Discourse. Those in Learning he chose to introduce by way of Digressions. He was then a young Gentleman, much in the World, and wrote to the Taste of those who were like himself; therefore, in order to allure them, he gave a Liberty to his Pen, which might not suit with maturer Years, or graver Characters, and which he could have easily corrected with a very few Blots, had he been Master of his Papers for a Year or Two before their Publication.

NOT that he would have governed his Judgment by the ill-placed Cavils of the Sour, the Envious, the Stupid, and the Tasteless, which he mentions with Disdain. He acknowledges there are several youthful Sallies, which from the Grave and the Wise may deserve a Rebuke. But he desires to be answerable no farther than he is guilty, and that his Faults may not be multiplyed by the ignorant, the unnatural, and uncharitable Applications of those who have neither Candor to suppose good Meanings, nor Palate to distinguish true Ones. After which, he will forfeit his Life, if any one Opinion can be fairly deduced from that Book, which is contrary to Religion or Morality.

Why should any Clergyman of our Church be angry to see the Follies of Fanaticism and Superstition exposed, although in the most ridiculous Manner? Since that is perhaps the most probable Way to cure them, or at least to hinder them from farther spreading. Besides, although it was not intended for their Perusal, it rallieth nothing but what they preach

preach against. It containeth nothing to provoke them by the least Scurrility upon their Persons or their Functions. It celebrates the Church of England as the most perfect of all others in Discipline and Doctrine; it advanceth no Opinion they reject, nor condemneth any they receive. If the Clergy's Resentments lay upon their Hands, in my humble Opinion, they might have found more proper Objects to employ them on: * Nondum tibi desuit Hostis; I mean those heavy, illiterate Scriblers, prostitute in their Reputations, vicious in their Lives, and ruined in their Fortunes; who, to the Shame of good Sense as well as Piety, are greedily read, meerly upon the Strength of bold, false, impious Assertions, mixed with unmannerly Reflections upon the Priesthood, and openly intended against all Religion; in short, full of such Principles as are kindly received, because they are levelled to remove those Terrors that Religion telleth Men will be the Consequence of immoral Lives. Nothing like which is to be met with in this Discourse, although some of them are pleased so freely to censure it. And I wish there were no other Instance of what I have too frequently observed, that many of that Reverend Body are not always very nice in distinguishing between their Enemies and their Friends.

HAD the Author's Intentions met with a more candid Interpretation from some, whom out of Respect he forbeareth to name, he might have been encouraged to an Examination of Books written by some of those Authors above-described, whose Errors, Ignorance, Dulness, and Villainy, he thinketh he could have detected and exposed in such a Manner, that the Persons, who are most conceived to be infected by them, would soon lay them aside and be ashamed: But he hath now given over those Thoughts, since the weightiest Men in the weightiest Stations are pleased to think it a more dangerous

Point to laugh at those Corruptions in Religion, which they themselves must disapprove, than to endeavour pulling up those very Foundations, wherein all Christians have agreed.

He thinketh it no fair Proceeding, that any Person should offer determinately to fix a Name upon the Author of this Discourse, who hath all along concealed himself from most of his nearest Friends :

Yet several have gone a farther Step, and pronounced another Book to have been the Work of the * Letter of Step, and pronounced another Book Enthusiasm. to have been the Work of the * same Hand with this, which the Author directly affirmeth to be a thorough Mistake ; he having yet never so much as read that Discourse ; a plain Instance how little Truth there often is in general Surmises, or in Conjectures drawn from a Similitude of Style, or Way of Thinking.

HAD the Author writ a Book to expose the Abuses in Law, or in Physick, he believes the Learned Professors in either Faculty would have been so far from resenting it, as to have given him Thanks for his Pains ; especially, if he had made an honourable Reservation for the true Practice of either Science : But Religion, they tell us, ought not to be ridiculed, and they tell us Truth ; yet surely, the Corruptions in it may ; for we are taught by the tritest Maxim in the World, that Religion being the best of Things, its Corruptions are likely to be the worst.

THERE is one Thing which the judicious Reader cannot but have observed, that some of those Passages in this Discourse, which appear most liable to Objection, are what they call Parodies, where the Author personates the Style and Manner of other Writers, he hath a Mind to expose. I shall produce one Instance ; it is towards the latter End of the Introduction. Dryden, L'Estrange, and some others I shall not name, are here levelled at, who, having spent their Lives in Faction, and Apostasies, and all manner of Vice, pretended to be Sufferers for Loyalty and Religion. So Dryden telleth us in one of his Prefaces of his Merits and Sufferings, thanks God that he possesseth his Soul in Patience : In other Places he talketh at the same Rate, and L'Estrange often useth the like Style ; and I believe the Reader may find more Persons to give that Passage an Application : But this is enough to direct those who may have overlooked the Author's Intention.

* See Shaftesbury's Characteristics.

THERE are Three or Four other Passages, which prejudiced or ignorant Readers have drawn, by great Force, to hint at ill Meanings, as if they glanced at some Tenets in Religion ; in Answer to all which, the Author solemnly protesteth he is entirely Innocent, and never had it once in his Thoughts, that any Thing he said would in the least be capable of such Interpretations, which he will engage to deduce full as fairly from the most innocent Book in the World. And it will be obvious to every Reader, that this was not any Part of his Scheme or Design, the Abuses he noteth being such as all Church of England Men agree in ; nor was it proper for his Subject to meddle with other Points, than such as have been perpetually controverted since the Reformation.

To instance only in that Passage about the three wooden Machines mentioned in the Introduction : In the Original Manuscript, there was a Description of a Fourth, which those who had the Papers in their Power blotted out, as having something in it of Satyr, that I suppose they thought was too particular, and therefore they were forced to change it to the Number Three, from whence some have endeavoured to squeeze out a dangerous Meaning that was never thought on. And indeed the Conceit was half spoiled by changing the Numbers ; that of Four being much more Cabalistical, and therefore better exposing the pretended Virtue of Numbers, a Superstition there intended to be ridiculed.

ANOTHER Thing to be observed is, that there generally runs an Irony through the Thread of the whole Book, which the Men of Taste will observe and distinguish, and which will render some Objections, that have been made, very weak and insignificant.

THIS Apology being chiefly intended for the Satisfaction of future Readers, it may be thought unnecessary to take any Notice of such Treatises as have been writ against this ensuing Discourse; which are already sunk into waste Paper and Oblivion, after the usual Fate of common Answerers to Books, which are allowed to have any Merit. They are indeed like Annuals that grow about a young Tree, and seem to vye with it for a Summer, but fall and die with the Leaves in Autumn, and are never heard of any more. When Dr. Eachard writ his Book about the Contempt of the Clergy, Numbers of those Answerers immediately started up, whose Memory if he had not kept alive by his Replies, it would now be utterly unknown that he was ever answered at all. There is an indeed an Exception, when any great Genius thinketh it worth his while to expose a foolish Piece; so we still read Marvell's Answer to Parker with Pleasure, altho' the Book it answereth be sunk long ago: So the * Earl of Orrery's Remarks will be read with Delight, when the Dissertation he exposeth will neither be sought nor found; but these are no Enterprises for common Hands, nor to be hoped for above once or twice in an Age. Men would be more cautious of losing their Time in such an Undertaking, if they did but consider, that to answer a Book effectually requireth more Pains, and Skill, more Wit, Learning, and Judgment than were employed in the Writing of it. And the Author assureth those Gentlemen who have given themselves that Trouble with him, that his Discourse is the Product of the Study, the Observation, and the Invention of several Years; that he often blotted out much more than he left; and if his Papers had not been a long Time out of his Possession, they must have still undergone more severe Corrections: And do they think such a Building is to be battered with Dirt-Pellets, however envenomed the Mouths may be that discharge them? He hath seen the Productions but of two Answerers; One of which first appeared as from an unknown Hand, but since avowed by a Person, who upon some Occasions hath discovered no ill Vein of Humour. It is a Pity any Occasions should put him under a Necessity of being so hasty in his Productions, which otherwise might often be entertaining. But there were other Reasons obvious enough for his Miscarriage in this; he writ against the Conviction of his Talent, and entered upon one of the wrongest Attempts in Nature, to turn into Ridicule by a Week's Labour a Work which had cost so much Time, and met with so much Success in ridiculing others: The Manner how he hath handled his Subject, I have now forgot, having just looked it over when it first came out, as others did, meerly for the Sake of the Title.

course

THE other Answer is from a Person of a graver Character, and is made up of half Invective, and half Annotation. In the latter of which, he hath generally succeeded well enough; and the Project at that Time was not amiss, to draw in Readers to his Pamphlet, several having appeared desirous that there might be some Explication of the more difficult Passages. Neither can he be altogether blamed for offering at the Invective Part, because it is agreed on all Hands, that the Author had given him sufficient Provocation. The great Objection is against his Manner of treating it, very unsuitable to one of his Function. It was determined by a fair Majority, that this Answerer had, in a way not to be pardoned, drawn his Pen against a certain Great Man then alive, and universally revered for for every good Quality that could possibly enter into the Composition of the most accomplished Person. It was observed, how he was pleased and affected to to have that noble Writer called his Adversary, and it was a Point of Satyr well directed; for I have been told, Sir William Temple was sufficiently mortified at the Term. All the Men of Wit and Politeness were immediately up in Arms, through Indignation, which prevailed over their Contempt by the Consequences they apprehended from such an Example, and it grew to be Porfenna's Case; Idem trecenti juravimus. In short, Things were ripe for a general Insurrection, till my † Lord Orrery had a little laid the Spirit, and settled the Ferment. But his Lordship being principally engaged with another ‡ Antagonist, it was thought necessary, in order to quiet the Minds of Men, that this Opposer should receive a Reprimand; which partly occasioned that Discourse of the Battle of the Books; and the Author was farther at the Pains to insert one or two Remarks on him in the Body of the Book.

THIS Answerer hath been pleased to find Fault with above a Dozen Passages, which the Author will not be at the Trouble of defending, farther, than by assuring the Reader, that for the greater Part the Reflector is entirely mistaken, and forceth Interpretations which never once entered into the Writer's Head, nor will (he is sure) into that of any Reader of Taste and Candor; he alloweth Two or Three at most there produced to have been delivered unwarily, for which he desireth to plead the Excuse offered already, of his Youth, and Frankness of Speech, and his Papers being out of his Power at the Time they were published.

But this Answerer insuteth, and saith, what he chiefly disliketh is the Design; what that was I have already told, and I believe there is not a Person in England

† Charles Boyle, Inventor of the Machine called the Orrery.

‡ Dr. Bentley.

England who can understand that Book, that ever imagined it to have been any Thing else, but to expose the Abuses and Corruptions in Learning and Religion.

BUT it would be good to know what Design this Reflector was serving, when he concludeth his Pamphlet with a Caution to the Readers, to beware of thinking the Author's Wit was entirely his own: Surely this must have had some Allay of Personal Animosity, at least mixed with the Design of serving the Publick by so useful a Discovery; and it indeed toucheth the Author in a very tender Point, who insisteth upon it, that through the whole Book he hath not borrowed one single Hint from any Writer in the World; and he thought, of all Criticisms, that would never have been one. He conceived it was never disputed to be an Original, whatever Faults it might have. However, this Answerer produceth three Instances to prove this Author's Wit is not his own in many Places. The first is, that the Names of Peter, Martin, and Jack, are borrowed from a Letter of the late Duke of Buckingham. Whatever Wit is contained in those three Names, the Author is content to give it up, and desireth his Readers will subtract as much as they placed upon that Account; at the same Time protesting solemnly, that he never once heard of that Letter, except in this Passage of the Answerer: So that the Names were not borrowed as he affirmeth, although they should happen to be the same, which however is odd enough, and what he hardly believes, that of Jack being not quite so obvious as the other two. The second Instance, to shew the Author's Wit is not his own, is Peter's Banter (as he calls it in his Alsatia Phrased) upon Transubstantiation, which is taken from the same Duke's Conference with an Irish Priest, where a Cork is turned into a Horse. This the Author confesseth to have seen, about ten Years after his Book was writ, and a Year or two after it was published. Nay, the Answerer overthroweth this himself, himself; for he allows the Tale was writ in 1697, and, I think, that Pamphlet was not printed in many Years after. It was necessary, that Corruption should have some Allegory, as well as the rest; and the Author invented the properest he could, without enquiring what other People had writ, and the commonest Reader will find, there is not the least Resemblance between the two Stories. The third Instance is in these Words: I have been assured, that the Battle in St. James's Library is, mutatis mutandis, taken out of a French Book, intitled, Combat des livres, if I misremember not. In which Passage there are two Clauses observable: I have been assured; and, if I misremember not. I desire first to know, whether, if that Conjecture proveth an utter Falseness, those two Clauses will be a sufficient Excuse for this worthy Critick. The Matter is a Trifle; but would he venture to pronounce at this Rate upon one of greater moment! I know nothing more contemptible in a Writer than the Character of a Plagiary, which he here fixeth at a Venture; and this, not for a Passage, but a whole Discourse, taken out from another Book, only mutatis mutandis. The Author is as much in the Dark about this as the Answerer, and will imitate him by an Affirmation at Random; that if there be a Word of Truth in this Reflection, he is a poultry, imitating Pedant, and the Answerer is a Person of Wit, Manners, and Truth. He taketh his Boldness, from never having seen any such Treatise in his Life, nor heard of it before; and he is sure it is impossible for two Writers of different Times and Countries to agree in their Thoughts after such a Manner, that two continued Discourses shall be the same, only mutatis mutandis. Neither will he insist upon the Mistake of the Title: but let the Answerer and his Friend produce any Book they please, he defies them to shew one single Particular, where the judicious Reader will affirm he hath been obliged for the smallest Hint; giving only Allowance for the accidental encountering of a single Thought, which he knoweth may sometimes happen; although he hath never yet found it in that Discourse, nor hath heard it objected by any body else.

singl

So that if ever any Design was unfortunately executed, it must be that of this Answerer, who, when he would have it observed that the Author's Wit is not his own, is able to produce but Three Instances, Two of them meer Trifles, and all Three manifestly false. If this be the Way these Gentlemen deal with the World in those Criticisms, where we have not Leisure to defeat them, their Readers had need be cautious how they rely upon their Credit; and whether this Proceeding can be reconciled to Humanity or Truth, let those, who think it worth their while, determine.

It is agreed, this Answerer would have succeeded much better, if he had stuck wholly to his Business as a Commentator upon the Tale of a Tub, wherein it cannot be denied that he hath been of some Service to the Publick, and hath given very fair Conjectures towards clearing up some difficult Passages; but it is the frequent Error of those Men (otherwise very commendable for their Labours) to make Excursions beyond their Talent and their Office, by pretending to point out the Beauties and the Faults, which is no Part of their Trade, which they always fail in, which the World never expected from them, nor gave them any Thanks for endeavouring at. The Part of Minellius, or Farnaby would have fallen in with his Genius, and might have been serviceable to many Readers who cannot enter into the abstruser Parts of that Discourse; but Optat ephippia bos piger. The dull, unweildy, ill-shaped Ox would needs put on the Furniture of a Horse; not considering he was born to Labour, to plow the Ground for the Sake of superior Beings; and that he hath neither the Shape, Mettle, nor Speed of that nobler Animal he would affect to personate.

IT is another Pattern of this Answerer's fair Dealing, to give us Hints that the Author is dead, and yet to lay the Suspicion upon somebody, I know not who, in the Country ; to which can be only returned, that he is absolutely mistaken in all his Conjectures ; and surely Conjectures are at best too light a Pretence to allow a Man to assign a Name in Publick. He condemneth a Book, and consequently the Author, of whom he is utterly ignorant ; yet, at the same Time fixeth in Print, what he thinks a disadvantageous Character upon those who never deserved it. A Man who receiveth a Buffet in the dark may be allowed to be vexed ; but it is an odd kind of Revenge to go to Cuffs in broad Day with the first he meets, and lay the last Night's Injury at his Door. And thus much for this discreet, candid, pious, and ingenious Answerer.

How the Author came to be without his Papers, is a Story not proper to be told, and of very little Use, being a private Fact, of which the Reader would believe as little or as much as he thought good. He had however a blotted Copy by him, which he intended to have writ over, with many Alterations ; and this the Publishers were well aware of, having put it into the Booksellers Preface, that they apprehended a surreptitious Copy, which was to be altered, &c. This, although not regarded by Readers, was a real Truth, only the surreptitious Copy was rather that which was printed, and they made all Haste they could, which indeed was needless, the Author not being at all prepared ; but he hath been told, the Bookseller was in much Pain, having given a good Sum of Money for the Copy.

In the Author's Original Copy there were not so many Chasms as appear in the Book ; and why some of them were left he knoweth not ; had the Publication been trusted to him, he should have made several Corrections of Passages against which nothing hath been ever objected. He should likewise have altered a few of those that seem with any Reason

Reason to be excepted against : But to deal freely, the greatest Number he should have left untouched, as never suspecting it possible any wrong Interpretations could be made of them.

THE Author observeth, at the End of the Book there is a Discourse called a Fragment ; which he more wondered to see in Print than all the rest. Having been a most imperfect Sketch with the Addition of a few loose Hints, which he once lent a Gentleman who had designed a Discourse of somewhat the same Subject, he never thought of it afterwards, and it was a sufficient Surprize to see it pieced up together, wholly out of the Method and Scheme he had intended ; for it was the Ground-work of a much larger Discourse, and he was sorry to observe the Materials so foolishly employed.

THERE is one farther Objection made by those who have answered this Book, as well as by some others, that Peter is frequently made to repeat Oaths and Curses. Every Reader observeth it was necessary to know that Peter did Swear and Curse. The Oaths are not pointed out, but only supposed, and the Idea of an Oath is not immoral, like the Idea of a prophane or immodest Speech. A Man may laugh at the Popish Folly of cursing People to Hell, and imagine them Swearing, without any Crime ; but lewd Words, or dangerous Opinions, although printed by Halves, fill the Reader's Mind with ill Ideas ; and of these the Author cannot be accused : For the judicious Reader will find, that the severest Strokes of Satyr in his Book are levelled against the modern Custom of employing Wit upon those Topics ; of which there is a remarkable Instance in the Seventh Section, as well as in several others, although perhaps once or twice expressed in too free a Manner, excusable only for the Reasons already alledged. Some Overtures have been made by a third Hand to the Bookseller for the Author's altering those Passages which he thought might require it. But, it seemeth, the Bookseller will not hear of any such Things, being apprehensive it might spoil the Sale of the Book.

THE Author cannot conclude this Apology, without making this one Reflection; that, as Wit is the noblest and most useful Gift of human Nature, so Humour is the most agreeable: and where these two enter far into the Composition of any Work, they will render it always acceptable to the World. Now, the great Part of those who have no Share or Taste of either, but by their Pride, Pedantry, and ill Manners, lay themselves bare to the Lashes of both, think the Blow is weak, because they are insensible; and, where Wit hath any Mixture of Raillery, it is but calling it Banter, and the Work is done. This polite Word of theirs was first borrowed from the Bullies in White-Fryars; then fell among the Footmen; and at last retired to the Pedants, by whom it is applied as properly to the Productions of Wit, as if I should apply it to Sir Isaac Newton's Mathematicks: But, if this Bantering, as they call it, be so despiseable a Thing, whence cometh it to pass they have such a perpetual Itch towards it themselves? To instance only in the Answerer already mentioned; it is grievous to see him in some of his Writings at every Turn going out of his Way to be waggish, to tell us of a Cow that pricked up her Tail; and, in his Answer to this Discourse, he says, it is all a Farce and a Ladle; with other Passages equally shining. One may say of these Impedimenta Literarum, that Wit owes them a Shame; and they cannot take wiser Counsel than to keep out of Harms-way, or at least not to come until they are sure they are called.

To conclude. With those Allowances above-required, this Book should be read; after which, the Author conceiveth, few Things will remain, which may not be excused in a young Writer. He wrote only to the Men of Wit and Taste; and he thinketh he is not mistaken in his Accounts, when he

he says they have been all of his Side, enough to give him the Vanity of telling his Name, wherein the World, with all its wise Conjectures, is yet very much in the dark; which Circumstance is no disagreeable Amusement either to the Publick or himself.

THE Author is informed, That the Bookseller hath prevailed on several Gentlemen to write some explanatory Notes; for the Goodness of which he is not to answer, having never seen any of them, nor intendeth it, until they appear in Print; when it is not unlikely he may have the Pleasure to find Twenty Meanings which never entered into his Imagination.

June 3. 1709.

P O S T S C R I P T.

SINCE the Writing of this, which was about a Year ago, a prostitute Bookseller published a foolish Paper, under the Name of Notes on the Tale of a Tub, with some Account of the Author; and with an Insolence, which I suppose is punishable by Law, hath presumed to assign certain Names. It will be enough for the Author to assure the World, that the Writer of that Paper is utterly wrong in all his Conjectures upon that Affair. The Author further asserts, that the whole Work is entirely of one Hand, which every Reader of Judgment will easily discover: The Gentleman who gave the Copy to the Bookseller being a Friend of the Author, and using no other Liberties beside that of expunging certain certain Passages where now the Chasms appear under the Name of Desiderata. But, if any Person will prove his Claim to three Lines in the whole Book, let him step forth, and tell his Name and Titles; upon which the Bookseller shall have Orders to prefix them to the next Edition, and the Claimant shall from henceforward be acknowledged the undisputed Author.

T O

The Right Honourable

JOHN Lord SOMMERS.

MY LORD,

ALTHOUGH the Author hath written a large Dedication, yet that being addressed to a Prince, whom I am never likely to have the Honour of being known to; a Person besides, as far as I can observe, not at all regarded, or thought on by any of our present Writers; and being wholly free from that Slavery, which Booksellers usually lie under to the Caprices of Authors; I think it a wise Piece of Presumption to inscribe these Papers to your Lordship, and to implore your Lordship's Protection of them. God and your Lordship know their Faults, and their Merits; for, as to my own Particular, I am altogether a Stranger to the Matter; and, although every Body else should be equally ignorant, I do not fear the Sale of the Book, at all the worse upon that Score. Your Lordship's Name on the Front, in Capital Letters, will at any Time get off one Edition: Neither would

would I desire any other Help to grow an Alderman, than a Patent for the sole Privilege of Dedicating to your Lordship.

I should now, in Right of a Dedicator, give your Lordship a List of your own Virtues, and at the same Time be very unwilling to offend your Modesty; but chiefly I should celebrate your Liberality towards Men of great Parts and small Fortunes, and give you broad Hints, that I mean myself. And I was just going on in the usual Method, to peruse a Hundred or Two of Dedications, and transcribe an Abstract, to be applied to your Lordship; but I was diverted by a certain Accident. For, upon the Covers of these Papers, I casually observed, written in large Letters, the two following Words, DETUR DIGNISSIMO; which, for ought I knew, might contain some important Meaning: But it unluckily fell out, that none of the Authors I employ understood Latin. (although I have them often in Pay to translate out of that Language,) I was therefore compelled to have Recourse to the Curate of our Parish, who Englished it thus, Let it be given to the Worthiest: And his Comment was, That the Author meant, his Work should be dedicated to the sublimest Genius of the Age, for Wit, Learning, Judgment, Eloquence, and Wisdom. I called at a Poet's Chamber (who works for my Shop) in an Alley hard by, shewed him the Translation, and desired his Opinion, who it was that the Author could mean? He told me, after some Consideration, that Vanity was a Thing he abhorred; but by the Description he thought Himself to be the Person aimed at: And, at the same time, he very kindly offered his own Assistance gratis, towards penning a Dedication to himself. I desired him, however, to give a second Guess; Why then, said he, It must be I, or my Lord Sommers. From thence I went to several other Wits of my Acquaintance, with no small Hazard and Weariness to my Person, from a prodigious Number of dark, winding Stairs; but found found them all in the same Story, both of your Lordship and themselves. Now, your Lordship is to understand, that this Proceeding was not of my own Invention; for, I have somewhere heard, it is a Maxim, that those, to whom every Body allows the second Place, have an undoubted Title to the First.

THIS infallibly convinced me, that your Lordship was the Person intended by the Author. But, being very unacquainted in the Style and Form of Dedications, I employed those Wits aforesaid to furnish me with Hints and Materials, towards a Panegyrick upon your Lordship's Virtues.

IN Two Days, they brought me Ten Sheets of Paper, filled up on every Side. They swore to me that they had ransacked whatever could be found in the Characters of Socrates, Aristides, Epaminondas, Cato, Tully, Atticus, and other hard Names, which I cannot now recollect. However, I have Reason to believe they imposed upon my Ignorance; because, when, I came to read over their Collections, there was not a Syllable there, but what I and every body else knew as well as themselves: Therefore I grievously suspect a Cheat, and that these Authors of mine stole and transcribed every Word, from the universal Report of Mankind. So that I look upon myself as Fifty Shillings out of Pocket, to no Manner of Purpose.

IF, by altering the Title, I could make the same Materials serve for another Dedication (as my Betters have done) it would help to make up my Loss: But I have made several Persons dip here and there in those Papers, and, before they read three Lines, they have all assured me, plainly, that they cannot possibly be applied to any Person besides your Lordship.

I EXPECTED, indeed, to have heard of your Lordship's Bravery at the Head of an Army; of your undaunted Courage, in mounting a Breach, or scaling a Wall; or to have had your Pedigree traced traced in a Lineal Descent from the House of Austria; or of your wonderful Talent at Dress and Dancing; or your profound Knowledge in Algebra, Metaphysics, and the Oriental Tongues. But to ply the World with an old beaten Story of your Wit, and Eloquence, and Learning, and Wisdom, and Justice, and Politeness, and Candor, and Evenness of Temper in all Scenes of Life; of that great Discernment in discovering, and Readiness in Favouring deserving Men; with forty other common Topicks; I confess I have neither Conscience, nor Countenance to do it. Because there is no Virtue, either of a Publick or Private Life, which some Circumstances of your own have not often produced upon the Stage of the World; and those few, which, for want of Occasions to exert them, might otherwise have passed unseen or unobserved by your Friends, your Enemies have at length brought to Light.

It is true, I should be very loth, the Bright Example of your Lordship's Virtues should be lost to After-Ages, both for their Sake and your own; but chiefly, because they will be so very necessary to adorn the History of a * late Reign: And that is another Reason, why I could forbear to make a Recital of them here; because I have been told by Wise Men, that as Dedications have run for some Years past, a good Historian will not be apt to have Recourse thither in search of Characters.

THERE is one Point, wherein I think we Dedicators would do well to change our Measures; I mean, instead of running on so far upon the Praise of our Patron's Liberality, to spend a Word or two in admiring their Patience. I can put no greater Compliment on your Lordship's, than by giving you so ample an Occasion to exercise it at present; although, perhaps, I shall not be apt to reckon much

Merit

DEDICATION.

xxiii

Merit to your Lordship upon that Score ; who have-ing been formerly used to tedious Harangues, and sometimes to as little Purpose, will be the readier to pardon this ; especially, when it is offered by one, who is with all Respect and Veneration,

My LORD,

Your Lordship's most Obedient,

and most Faithful Servant,

The Bookseller.

THE

T H E
B O O K S E L L E R
T O T H E
R E A D E R.

IT is now Six Years since these Papers came first to my Hand, which seemeth to have been about a Twelvemonth after they were written: For the Author telleth us in his Preface to the first Treatise, that he hath calculated it for the Year 1697, and in several Passages of that Discourse, as well as the Second, it appeareth, they were written about that Time.

AS to the Author, I can give no Manner of Satisfaction: However, I am credibly informed, that this Publication is without his Knowledge; for he concludeth the Copy is lost, having lent it to a Person, since Dead, and being never in Possession of it after: So that, whether the Work received his last Hand, or whether he intended to fill up the defective Places, is like to remain a Secret.

IF I should go about to tell the Reader by what Accident I became Master of these Papers, it would, in this unbelieving Age, pass for little more than the Cant, or Jargon of the Trade. I therefore gladly spare both him and myself so unnecessary a Trouble. There yet remaineth a difficult Question, why I published them no sooner. I forbore upon two Accounts: First, because I thought I had better Work upon my Hands; and Secondly, because I was not without some Hope of hearing from the Author, and receiving his Directions. But I have been lately alarmed with Intelligence of a surreptitious Copy, which a certain great Wit had new polished and refined; or, as our present Writers express themselves, fitted to the Humour of the Age; as they have already done, with great Felicity, to Don Quixot, Boccacini, la Bruyere, and other Authors. However, I thought it fairer Dealing, to offer the Whole Work in its Naturals. If any Gentleman will please to furnish me with a Key, in order to explain the more difficult Parts, I shall very gratefully acknowledge the Favour, and print it by itself.

T H E
Epistle Dedicatory,
T O
His Royal Highness
PRINCE POSTERITY.

S I R,

I HERE present Your Highness with the Fruits of a very few leisure Hours, stolen from the short Intervals of a World of Business, and of an Employment quite alien from such Amusements as this; the poor Production of that Reserve of Time, which hath lain heavy upon my Hands, during a long Prorogation of Parliament, a great Dearth of Foreign News, and a tedious Fit of rainy Weather: For which, and other Reasons, it cannot chuse extremely to deserve such Patronage as that of Your Highness, whose numberless Virtues in so few Years make the World look upon You as the future Example to all Princes: For, although Your Highness is hardly got clear of Infancy, yet has the universal learned World already resolved upon appealing

c 2

to

The Citation out of Irenæus, in the Title-page, which seemeth to be all Gibberish, is a Form of Intimation used antiently by the Marcolian Hereticks. W. Wotton.

to Your future Dictates with the lowest and most resigned Submission: Fate having decreed You sole Arbitrer of the Productions of human Wit, in this polite and most accomplished Age. Methinks, the Number of Appellants were enough to shock and startle any Judge of a Genius less unlimited than Yours: But, in order to prevent such glorious Tryals, the Person (it seemeth) to whose Care the Education of Your Highness is committed, hath resolved (as I am told) to keep you in almost an universal Ignorance of our Studies, which it is Your inherent Birth-right to inspect.

It is amazing to me, that this Person should have Assurance, in the Face of the Sun, to go about persuading Your Highness, that our Age is almost wholly illiterate, and hath hardly produced one Writer upon any Subject. I know very well, that when Your Highness shall come to riper Years, and have gone through the Learning of Antiquity, you will be too curious to neglect inquiring into the Authors of the very Age before You: And to think that this Insolent, in the Account he is preparing for Your View, designeth to reduce them to a Number so insignificant as I am ashamed to mention; it moveth my Zeal and my Spleen for the Honour and Interest of our vast flourishing Body, as well as of myself, for whom, I know by long Experience, he hath professed, and still continueth a peculiar Malice.

It is not unlikely, that when Your Highness will one Day peruse what I am now writing, You may be ready to expostulate with your Governor upon
the

It is the usual Style of decryed Writers to appeal to Posterity, who is here represented as a Prince in his Nonage,, and Time as his Governor; and the Author begins in a Way very frequent with him, by personating other Writers, who sometimes offer such Reasons and Excuses for publishing their Works, as they ought chiefly to conceal and be ashamed of.

the Credit of what I here affirm, and command Him to shew You some of our Productions. To which he will answer, (for I am well informed of his Designs) by asking Your Highness, where they are? And what is become of them? And pretend it a Demonstration, that there never were any, because they are not then to be found! Not to be found? Who hath mislaid them? Are they sunk in the Abyss of Things? It is certain, that in their own Nature they were light enough to swim upon the Surface for all Eternity. Therefore the Fault is in Him who tied Weights so heavy to their Heels, as to depress them to the Center. Is their very Essence destroyed? Who hath annihilated them? Were they drowned by Purges, or martyred by Pipes? Who administered them to the Posteriors of -----? But that it may no longer be a Doubt with Your Highness, who is to be the Author of this universal Ruin; I beseech You to observe that large and terrible Scythe which your Governor affects to bear continually about him. Be pleased to remark the Length and Strength, the Sharpness and Hardness of his Nails and Teeth: Consider his baneful abominable Breath, Enemy to Life, and Matter infectious and corrupting: And then reflect, whether it be possible for any mortal Ink and Paper of this Generation to make a suitable Resistance. Oh, that Your Highness would one Day resolve to disarm this Usurping * Maire du Palais of his furious Engines, and bring Your Empire † hors d'Etat.

It were endless to recount the several Methods of Tyranny and Destruction, which your Governor is pleased to practise upon this Occasion. His inveterate Malice is such to the Writings of our Age, that of several Thousands produced yearly from this renowned City, before the next Revolution of the Sun, there is not one to be heard of: Unhappy Infants! many of them barbarously destroyed, before they have so much as learned their Mother-Tongue to beg for Pity ! Some he stifeth in their Cradles, others he frighteth into Convulsions, whereof they suddenly die ; some he slayeth alive, others he tear-eth Limb from Limb. Great Numbers are offered to Moloch ; and the rest, tainted by his Breath, die of a languishing Consumption.

* Contrôleur.† Out of Guardship.

Dedication to

BUT the Concern I have most at Heart is for our Corporation of Poets, from whom I am preparing a Petition to Your Highness, to be subscribed with the Names of One Hundred Thirty Six of the first Rate, but whose immortal Productions are never likely to reach your Eyes, although each of them is now an humble and an earnest Appellant for the Laurel, and hath large comely Volumes ready to shew for a Support to his Pretensions. The newer-dying Works of these illustrious Persons, Your Governor, Sir, hath devoted to unavoidable Death, and Your Highness is to be made believe, that our Age hath never arrived at the Honour to produce one single Poet.

We confess Immortality to be a great and powerful Goddess, but in vain we offer up to her our Devotions and our Sacrifices, if Your Highness's Governor, who hath usurped the Priesthood, must by an unparalleled Ambition and Avarice wholly intercept and devour them.

To affirm that our Age is altogether unlearned, and devoid of Writers in any Kind, seemeth to be an Assertion so bold and so false, that I have been sometime thinking, the contrary may almost be proved by uncontrollable Demonstration. It is true indeed, that although their Numbers be vast, and their Productions numerous in Proportion, yet are they hurried so hastily off the Scene, that they escape our Memory, and delude our Sight. When I first thought of this Address, I had prepared a copious List of Titles to present Your Highness, as an undisputed Argument for what I affirm. The Originals were posted fresh upon all Gates and Corn-ners

ners of Streets ; but returning in a very few Hours to take a Review, they were all torn down, and fresh ones in their Places : I enquired after them among Readers and Booksellers ; but I enquired in vain ; the Memorial of them was lost among Men, their Place was no more to be found ; and I was laughed to scorn for a Clown and a Pedant, without all Taste and Refinement, little versed in the Course of present Affairs, and that knew nothing of what had passed in the best Companies of Court and Town. So that I can only avow in general to Your Highness, that we do abound in Learning and Wit ; but to fix upon Particulars, is a Task too slippery for my slender Abilities. If I should venture in a windy Day to affirm to Your Highness, that there is a large Cloud near the Horizon in the Form of a Bear, another in the Zenith with the Head of an Ass, a third to the Westward with Claws like a Dragon ; and Your Highness should in a few Minutes think fit to examine the Truth ; it is certain, they would all be changed in Figure and Position, new ones would arise, and all we could agree upon would be, that Clouds there were, but that I was grossly mistaken in the Zoography and Topography of them.

BUT Your Governor, perhaps, may still insist, and put the Question: What is then become of those immense Bales of Paper, which must needs have been employed in such Numbers of Books ? Can these also be wholly annihilate, and so of a sudden, as I pretend ? What shall I say in Return of so invidious an Objection ? It ill befits the Distance between Your Highness and Me, to send you for ocular Conviction to a Jakes, or an Oven ; to the Windows of a Barboly-House, or to a sordid Lanthorn. Books, like Men their Authors, have no more than one Way of coming into the World, but there are ten thousand to go out of it, and return no more.

I PROFESS to Your Highness, in the Integrity of my Heart, that what I am going to say is literally true this Minute I am writing: What Revolutions may

may happen, before it shall be ready for your Perusal, I can by no means warrant: However, I beg you to accept it as a Specimen of our Learning, our Politeness, and our Wit. I do therefore affirm upon the Word of a sincere Man, that there is now actually in being a certain Poet called John Dryden, whose Translation of Virgil was lately printed in a large Folio, well bound; and if diligent Search were made, for ought I know, is yet to be seen. There is another called Nahum Tate, who is ready to make Oath, that he hath caused many Rheams of Verse to be published, whereof both himself and his Bookseller (if lawfully required) can still produce authentick Copies; and therefore wonders why the World is pleased to make such a Secret of it. There is a Third, known by the Name of Tom Durfey, a Poet of a vast Comprehension, an universal Genius, and most profound Learning. There are also one Mr. Rymer, and one Mr. Dennis, most profound Criticks. There is a Person styled Dr. Bentley, who hath written near a Thousand Pages of immense Erudition, giving a full and true Account of a certain Squabble of wonderful Importance between himself and Bookseller: He is a Writer of infinite Wit and Humour; no Man rivalleth with a better Grace, and in more sprightly Turns. Farther, I avow to Your Highness, that with these Eyes I have beheld the Person of William Wotton, B. D. who hath written a good sizeable Volume against a Friend of Your Governor (from whom, alas! he must therefore look for little Favour) in a most gentlemanly Style, adorned with the utmost Politeness and Civility; replete with Discoveries, equally valuable for their Novelty and Use; and embellished with Traits of Wit so poignant and so apposite, that he is a worthy Yekemate to his forementioned Friend.

Why should I go upon farther Particulars, which might fill a Volume with the just Elogies of my contemporary Brethren? I shall bequeath this Piece of Justice to a larger Work; wherein I intended to write a Character of the present Set of Wits in our Nation : Their Persons I shall describe particularly, and at Length ; their Genius and Understandings in Miniature.

IN the mean time, I do here make bold to present Your Highness with a faithful Abstract, drawn from the Universal Body of all Arts and Sciences, intended wholly for your Service and Instruction: Nor do I doubt in the least, but Your Highness will peruse it as carefully, and make as considerable Improvements, as other young Princes have already done, by the many Volumes of the late Years written for a Help to their Studies.

THAT Your Highness may advance in Wisdom and Virtue, as well as Years, and at last outshine all Your Royal Ancestors, shall be the daily Prayer of,

S I R,

Decemb.
1697.

Your Highness's

Most devoted, &c.

T H E

2

E

T

de
A In pic ver mu Pro for ing fix we ho po and dra po
ed ent bro

T H E
P R E F A C E.

THE Wits of the present Age being so very numerous and penetrating, it seemeth the Grantees of Church and State begin to fall under horrible Apprehensions, lest these Gentlemen, during the Intervals of a long Peace, should find Leisure to pick Holes in the weak Sides of Religion and Government. To prevent which, there hath been much Thought employed of late, upon certain Projects, for taking off the Force and Edge of those formidable Enquirers, from canvassing and reasoning upon such delicate Points. They have at length fixed upon one, which will require some Time, as well as Cost, to perfect. Mean while, the Danger hourly increasing by new Levies of Wits, all appointed (as there is Reason to fear) with Pen, Ink, and Paper, which may, at an Hour's Warning, be drawn out into Pamphlets, and other offensive Weapons, ready for immediate Execution; it was judged of absolute Necessity, that some present Expedient be thought on, till the main Design can be brought to Maturity. To this End, at a Grand Committee some Days ago, this important Discovery was made by a certain curious and refined Observer, That Seamen have a Custom when they meet a Whale, to fling him out an empty Tub, by Way of Amusement, to divert him from laying violent Hands upon the Ship. This Parable was immediately mythologized: The Whale was interpreted to be Hobbes's Leviathan, which tosseth and playeth with all other Schemes of Religion and Government, whereof a great many are hollow, and dry, and empty, and noisy, and wooden, and given to Rotation. This is the Leviathan from whence the terrible Wits of our Age are said to borrow their Weapons. The Ship in Danger is easily understood to be its old Antitype, the Commonwealth. But, how to analyze the Tub, was a Matter of Difficulty; when, after long Enquiry and Debate, the literal Meaning was preserved: And it was decreed, that in order to prevent these Leviathans from tossing and sporting with the Commonwealth, (which of itself is too apt to fluctuate) they should be diverted from that Game by a Tale of a Tub. And my Genius being conceived to lye not unhappily that Way, I had the Honour done me to be engaged in the Performance.
Com-

THIS is the sole Design in publishing the following Treatise, which I hope will serve for an Interim of some Months, to employ those unquiet Spirits, until the perfecting of that great Work: Into the Secret of which it is reasonable the courteous Reader should have some little Light.

It is intended, that a large Academy be erected, capable of containing nine Thousand seven hundred forty and three Persons; which, by modest Computation, is reckoned to be pretty near the current Number of Wits in this Island. These are to be disposed into the several Schools of this Academy.

demey, and there pursue those Studies to which their Genius most inclineth them. The Undertaker himself will publish his Proposals with all convenient Speed, to which I shall refer the curious Reader for a more particular Account ; mentioning at present only a few of the Principal Schools. There is first, a large Pederastick School, with French and Italian Masters. There is also the Spelling School, a very spacious Building : The School of Looking-Glasses : The School of Swearing : The School of Criticks : The School of Salivation : The School of Hobby-Horses : The School of Poetry : * The School of Tops : The School of Spleen : The School of Gaming : With many others too tedious to recount. No Person to be admitted Member into any of these Schools, without an Attestation under two sufficient Persons Hands, certifying him to be a Wit.

BUT, to return. I am sufficiently instructed in the Principal Duty of a Preface, if my Genius were capable of arriving at it. Thrice have I forced my Imagination to make the Tour of my Invention, and thrice it hath returned empty ; the latter having been wholly drained by the following Treatise. Not so, my more successful Brethren, the Moderns, who will by no Means let slip a Preface or Dedication, without some notable distinguishing Stroke, to surprize the Reader at the Entry, and kindle a wonderful Expectation of what is to ensue. Such was that of a most ingenious Poet, who, soliciting

VOL. XI.

d

his

* This I think the Author should have omitted, it being of the very same Nature with the School of Hobby-Horses, if one may venture to censure one who is so severe a Censurer of others, perhaps with too little Distinction.

his Brain for something new, compared himself to the Hangman, and his Patron to the Patient : This was † Insigne recens indigum ore alio. When I went thro'

† Hor. that necessary and noble † Course of † Reading Prefaces, Study, I had the Happiness to observe many such egregious Touches, which

I shall not injure the Authors by transplanting ; because I have remarked, that nothing is so very tender as a Modern Piece of Wit, and which is apt to suffer so much in the Carriage. Some Things are extremely witty To-Day, or jesting, or in this Place, or at eight o'Clock, or over a Bottle, or spoke by Mr. What d'y'call um, or in a Summer's Morning : Any of which, by the smallest Transposal or Misapplication, is utterly annihilate. Thus, Wit hath it Walks and Purlicus, out of which it may not stray the Breadth of an Hair, upon Peril of being lost. The Moderns have actually fixed this Mercury, and reduced it to the Circumstances of Time, Place, and Person. Such a Jest there is, that will not pass out of Covent-Garden, and such a one, that is no where intelligible but at Little-Park Corner. Now, although it sometimes tenderly affecteth me to consider, that all the tow'ardly Passages I shall deliver in the following Treatise, will grow quite out of Date and Relish with the first striking of the present Scheme ; yet I must needs submit to the Justice of this Proceeding : Because I cannot imagine why we should be so desirous to furnish Wit for succeeding Ages, when the former have made no sort of Provision for ours ; when I speak the Sentiment of the newest, and consequently the most Orthodox Readers, as well as my own. However, being extremely desirous, that every accomplished Person, who hath got into the Taste of Wit, † Something extraneous, new, and not to be seen before.

Wit, calculated for this present Month of August, 1697, should descend to the very Bottom of all the Sublime, throughout this Treatise; I hold it fit to lay down this general Maxim. Whatever Reader desireth to have a thorough Comprehension of an Author's Thoughts, cannot take a better Method than by putting himself into the Circumstances and Postures of Life, that the Writer was in, upon every important Passage as it flowed from his Pen; for this will introduce a Parity and strict Correspondence of Ideas between the Reader and the Author. Now to assist the diligent Reader in so delicate an Affair, as far as Brevity will permit, I have recollected, that the shrewdest Pieces of this Treatise were conceived in Bed, in a Garret: At other Times (for a Reason best known to my self) I thought fit to sharpen my Invention with Hunger; and, in general, the whole Work was begun, continued, and ended, under a long Course of Physick, and a great Want of Money. Now I do affirm, it will be absolutely impossible for the candid Peruser to go along with me in a great many bright Passages, unless, upon the several Difficulties emergent, he will please to capacitate and prepare himself by these Directions. And this I lay down as my Principal Populatum.

BECAUSE I have professed to be a most devoted Servant of all Modern Forms, I apprehend some curious Wits may object against me, for proceeding thus far in a Preface, without declaiming, according to the Custom, against the Multitude of Writers, whereof the whole Multitude of Writers most reasonably complains. I am just come from perusing some Hundreds of Prefaces, wherein the Authors do, at the very beginning, address the gentle Reader concerning this enormous Grievance. Of these I have preserved a few Examples, and shall set them down as near as my Memory hath been able to retain them.

ONE begins thus :

For a Man to set up for a Writer, when the Press swarms with, &c.

ANOTHER ;

The Tax upon Paper does not lessen the Number of Scriblers, who daily pester, &c.

ANOTHER ;

When every little Would-be-writ takes Pen in Hand, 'tis in vain to enter the Lists, &c.

ANOTHER ;

To observe what Trash the Press swarms with, &c.

ANOTHER ;

SIR, It is merely in Obedience to your Commands, that I venture into the Publick; for who upon a less Consideration would be of a Party with such a Rabble of Scriblers ? &c.

Now, I have two Words in my own Defence against this Objection. First, I am far from granting the Number of Writers a Nuisance to our Nation, having strenuously maintained the contrary in several Parts of the following Discourse. Secondly, I do not well understand the Justice of this Proceeding, ceeding, because I observe many of these Polite Prefaces to be not only from the same Hand, but from those who are most voluminous in their several Productions. Upon which I shall tell the Reader a short Tale.

*A Mountebank in Leicester-Fields had drawn a huge Assembly about him. Among the rest, a fat un-weillily Fellow, half stifled in the Press, would be every Fit crying out, Lord! What a filthy Crowd is here?
Pray, good People, give Way a little. Bless me! What a Devil has raked this Rabble together? Z-----ds, what squeezing is this! Honest Friend, remove your Elbow.
At last, a Weaver that stood next him could hold no longer: A Plague confound you (said he) for an overgrown Slown; and who (in the Devil's Name) I wonder, helps to make up the Crowd half so much as yourself? Don't you consider (with a Pox) that you take up more Room with that Carcase than any Five here? Is not the Place as free for us as for you? Bring your own Guts to a reasonable Compass (and be d---d) and then I'll engage we shall have Room enough for us all.*

There are certain common Privileges of a Writer, the Benefit whereof, I hope, there will be no Reason to doubt: particularly, that where I am not understood, it shall be concluded, that something very useful and profound is couched underneath. And again, that whatever Word or Sentence is printed in a different Character shall be judged to contain something extraordinary either of Wit or Sublime.

As for the Liberty I have thought fit to take of praising myself, upon some Occasions or none; I am sure it will need no Excuse, if a Multitude of great Examples be allowed sufficient Authority: For it is here to be noted, that Praise was originally

nally a Pension paid by the World: But the Moderns, finding the Trouble and Charge too great in collecting it, have lately bought out the Fee-simple; since which Time, the Right of Presentation is wholly in ourselves. For this Reason it is, that when an Author maketh his own Elogy, he useth a certain Form to declare and insist upon his Title, which is commonly in these or the like Words, I speak without Vanity; which I think plainly sheweth it to be a Matter of Right and Justice. Now I do here once for all declare, that in every Encounter of this Nature, through the following Treatise, the Form aforesaid is implied; which I mention, to save the Trouble of repeating it on so many Occasions.

It is a great Ease to my Conscience, that I have written so-elaborate and useful a Discourse, without one Grain of Satyr intermixed; which is the sole Point wherein I have taken Leave to dissent from the famous Originals of our Age and Country. I have observed some Satyrists to use the Publick much at the Rate that Pedants do a naughty Boy ready Horfed for Discipline; first expostulate the Case, then plead the Necessity of the Rod from great Provocations, and conclude every Period with a Lath. Now, if I know any Thing of Mankind, these Gentlemen might very well spare their Reproof and Correction; for there is not, through all Nature, another so callous and insensible a Member as the World's Posteriors, whether you apply to it the Toe or the Bitch. Besides, most of our late Satyrists seem to lye under a Sort of Mistake, that because Nettles have the Prerogative to sting, therefore all other Weeds must do so too. I make not this Comparison out of the least Design to detract from these worthy Writers: For it is well known among Mythologists, that Weeds have the Preeminence over all other Vegetables; and therefore the first * Monarch of this Island, whose Taste and Judgment were so acute and refined, did very wisely root out the Roses from the Collar of the Order, and plant the Thistles in their Stead, as the nobler Flower of the Two. For which Reason, it is conjectured by profounder Antiquaries, that the Satyrical Itch, so prevalent in this Part of our Island, was first brought among us from beyond the Tweed. Here may it long flourish and abound; may it survive and neglect the Scorn of the World with as much Ease and Contempt, as the World is insensible to the Lashes of it. May their own Dulness, or that of this Party, be no Discouragement for the Authors to proceed; but let them remember, it is with Wits as with Razors, which are never so apt to cut those they are employed on, as when they have lost their Edge. Besides, those whose Teeth are too rotten to bite are best of all others qualified to revenge that Defect with their Breath.

first

I AM not like other Men, to envy or undervalue the Talents I cannot reach; for which Reason I must needs bear a true Honour to this large eminent Sect of our British Writers. And I hope, this little Panegyrick will not be offensive to their Ears, since it hath the Advantage of being only designed for themselves. Indeed, Nature herself hath taken Order, that Fame and Honour should be purchased at a better Pennyworth by Satyr, than by any other Productions of the Brain; the World being soonest provoked to Praise by Lashes, as Men are to Love. There is a Problem in an ancient Author, why Dedications, and other Bundles of Flattery run all upon stale musty Topicks, without the smallest Tincture of any Thing new; not only to the Torment and Nauseating of the Christian Reader, but (if not suddenly prevented) to the universal

* James I. styled King of Great Britain.

tal spreading of that Pestilent Disease, the Lethargy, in this Island: Whereas, there is very little Satyr which hath not something in it untouched before. The Defects of the former are usually imputed to the Want of Invention among those who are Dealers in that Kind: But, I think, with a great deal of Injustice; the Solution being easy and natural. For, the Materials of Panegyrick, being very few in Number, have been long since exhausted: For, as Health is but one Thing, and hath been always the same, whereas Diseases are by Thousands, besides new and daily Additions; so, all the Virtues that have been ever in Mankind are to be counted upon a few Fingers, but his Follies and Vices are innumerable; and Time adds hourly to the Heap. Now, the utmost a poor Poet can do, is to get by Heart a List of the Cardinal Virtues, and deal them with his utmost Liberality to his Hero or his Patron: He may ring the Changes as far as it will go, and vary his Phrase, until he hath talked round; but the Reader

* Plutarch. quickly findeth, it is all * Pork, with a little Variety of Sauce: For there is no inventing Terms of Art beyond our Ideas; and when Ideas are exhausted, Terms of Art must be to too

BUT, although the Matter for Panegyrick were as fruitful as the Topicks of Satyr, yet would it not be hard to find out a sufficient Reason, why the latter will be always better received than the first. For this, being bestowed only upon one or a few Persons at a Time, is sure to raise Envy, and consequently ill Words from the rest, who have no Share in the Praise: But Satyr, being levelled at all, is never resented for an Offence by any, since every individual Person maketh bold to understand it of others, and every one committeth his particular Part of the Censure upon the Shoulders of the

the

the World, which are broad enough, and able to bear it. To this Purpose, I have sometimes reflected upon the Difference between Athens and England, with Respect to the Point before us. In the Attick * Common-wealth it was the Privilege and Birth-right of every Citizen and Poet to rail aloud and in Publick, or to expose upon the Stage, by Name, any Person they pleased, although of the greatest Figure, whether a Creon, an Hyperbolus, an Alcibiades, or a Demofibenes. But, on the other Side, the least reflecting Word let fall against the People in general was immediately caught up and revenged upon the Authors, however considerable for their Quality or their Merits. Whereas in England it is just the Reverse of all this. Here you may securely display your utmost Rhetorick against Mankind in the Face of the World; tell them, “That all are gone astray; that there is none that doeth good, no not one; that we live in the very Dregs of Time; that Knavery and Atheism are Epidemick as the Pox; that Honesty is fled with Astrea;” with any other Common-places equally new and eloquent, which are furnished by the * Splendida bilis. And when * Horat. you have done, the whole Audience, far from being offended, shall return you Thanks, as a Deliverer of precious and useful Truths. Nay farther, It is but to venture your Lungs, and you may preach in Corvent-Garden against Foppery, and Fornication, and something else: Against Pride, and Dissimulation, and Bribery, at White-Hall: You may expose Rapine and Injustice in the Iuns of Court Chappel: And in a City Pulpit be as fierce as you please against Avarice, Hypocrisy, and Extortion. It is but a Ball bandied to and fro, and every Man carrieth a Racket about him to strike it from himself among the rest of the Company. But, on the other Side, whoever should mistake the Nature

Nature of Things so far, as to drop but a single Hint in publick, How such a one starved half the Fleet, and half-poisoned the rest : How such a one, from a true Principle of Love and Honour, payeth no Debts but for Wenches and Play : How such a one hath got a Clap, and runs out of his Estate : * How Paris, bribed by Juno and Venus, loth to offend either Party, slept out the whole Cause on the Bench : Or, how such an Orator maketh long Speeches in the Senate, with much Thought, little Sense, and to no Purpose : Whoever, I say, should venture to be thus particular, must expect to be imprisoned for Scandalum Magnatum, to have Challenges sent him, to be sued for Defamation, and to be brought before the Bar of the House.

BUT I forgot that I am expatiating on a Subject, wherein I have no Concern, having neither a Talent nor an Inclination for Satyr. On the other Side, I am so entirely satisfied with the whole present Procedure of human Things, that I have been for some Years preparing Materials towards A Panegyrick upon the World ; to which I intended to add a Second Part, entitled, A modest Defence of the Proceedings of the Rabble in all Ages. Both these I had Thoughts to publish, by Way of Appendix to the following Treatise ; but, finding my Common-Place-Book fill much slower than I had Reason to expect, I have chosen to defer them to another Occasion. Besides, I have been unhappily prevented in that Design by a certain Domestick Misfortune ; in the Particulars whereof, although it would be very seasonable, and much in the Modern Way, to inform inform the gentle Reader ; and would also be of great Assistance towards extending this Preface into the Size now in Vogue, which, by Rule, ought to be large, in Proportion, as the subsequent Volume is small : Yet I shall now dismiss our impatient Reader from any farther Attendance at the Porch ; and having duly prepared his Mind by a preliminary Discourse, shall gladly introduce him to the sublime Mysteries that ensue.

* Juno and Venus are Money and a Mistress, very powerful Bribes to a Judge, if Scandal says true. I remember such Reflections were cast about that Time, but I cannot fix the Person intended here.

A

TALE of a TUB.

SECTION I.

The INTRODUCTION.

WHOEVER hath an Ambition to be heard in a Crowd, must press, and squeeze, and thrust, and climb with indefatigable Pains, until he hath exalted himself to a certain Degree of Altitude above them. Now, in all Assemblies, although you wedge them ever so close, we may observe this peculiar Property; that over their Heads there is Room enough; but how to reach it, is the difficult Point; it being as hard to get quit of Number as of Hell;

* ---- *Evadere ad auras,
Hoc opus, hic labor est.*

To this End, the Philosopher's Way in all Ages hath been by erecting certain Edifices in the Air; but, whatever Practice and Reputation these Kinds of Structures have formerly possessed, or may still continue in, not excepting even that of Socrates, when he was suspended in a Basket to help Contemplation; I think, with due Submission, they seem to labour under two Inconveniencies. First,
That

* *But to return and view the chearful Skies;
In this the Task and mighty Labour lies.*

That the Foundations being laid too high, they have been often out of Sight, and ever out of Hearing. Secondly, That the Materials, being very transitory, have suffered much from Inclemencies of Air, especially in these North-West Regions.

THEREFORE, towards the just Performance of this great Work, there remain but three Methods that I can think on; whereof the Wisdom of our Ancestors being highly sensible, hath, to encourage all aspiring Adventurers, thought fit to erect three wooden Machines, for the Use of those Orators who desire to talk much without Interruption. These are, the Pulpit, the Ladder, and the Stage-Itinerant. For, as to the Bar, although it be compounded of the same Matter, and designed for the same Use, it cannot however be well allowed the Honour of a fourth, by reason of its level or inferior Situation, exposing it to perpetual Interruption from Collaterals. Neither can the Bench itself, although raised to a proper Eminency, put in a better Claim, whatever its Advocates insist on. For, if they please to look into the original Design of its Erection, and the Circumstances or Adjuncts subservient to that Design, they will soon acknowledge the present Practice exactly correspondent to the primitive Institution, and both to answer the Etymology of the Name, which in the Phœnician Tongue is a Word of great Signification, importing, if literally interpreted, The Place of Sleep; but in common Acceptation, A Seat well cushioned and cushioned, for the Repose of old and gouty Limbs: Senes ut in otia tuta recedant. Fortune being indebted to them this Part of Retaliation, that, as formerly, they have long Talked, whilst others Slept, so now they may Sleep as long whilst others Talk.

BUT, if no other Argument could occur to exclude the Bench and the Bar from the List of Oratorical Machines, it were sufficient, that the Admission of them would overthrow a Number, which I was resolved to establish, whatever Argument it might cost me; in Imitation of that prudent Method,

t i f s r e
e s l.
2.
a.
ne
ne
eon ltor, its bge he y-ue limmin em ney
ney
ex-ra-milch I t it Me-rod,

Introduction

Page 3.

thod, observed by many other Philosophers and great Clerks, whose chief Art in Division hath been, to grow fond of some proper mystical Number, which their Imaginations have rendered Sacred to a Degree, that they force common Reason to find Room for it in every Part of Nature; reducing, including, and adjusting every Genus and Species within that Compass, by coupling some against their Wills, and banishing others at any Rate. Now, among all the rest, the profound Number THREE is that which hath most employed my sublimest Speculations, nor ever without wonderful Delight. There is now in the Press, (and will be published next Term) a panegyrical Essay of mine upon this Number; wherein I have, by most convincing Proofs, not only reduced the Senses and the Elements under its Banner, but brought over several Deserters from its two great Rivals SEVEN and NINE.

Now, the first of these Oratorical Machines in Place, as well as Dignity, is the Pulpit. Of Pulpits, there are in this Island several Sorts; but I esteem only That made of Timber from the Sylva Caledonia, which agrees very well with our Climate. If it be upon its Decay, it is the better, both for Conveyance of Sound, and for other Reasons to be mentioned by-and-by. The Degree of Perfection in Shape and Size, I take to consist in being extremely narrow, with little Ornament, and best of all without a Cover; (for by antient Rule, it ought to be the only uncovered Vessel in every Assembly where it is rightfully used) by which means, from its near Resemblance to a Pillory, it will ever have a mighty Influence on human Ears.

OF Ladders I need say nothing: It is observed by Foreigners themselves, to the Honour of our Country, that we excel all Nations in our Practice and Understanding of this Machine. The ascending Orators do not only oblige their Audience in the agreeable Delivery, but the whole World in their early Publication of their Speeches; which I look upon as the choicest Treasury of our British Eloquence, and whereof I am informed, that worthy Citizen and Bookseller, Mr. John Dunton, hath made a faithful and a painful Collection, which he shortly designeth to publish in twelve Volumes in Folio, illustrated with Copper-Plates. A Work highly useful and curious, and altogether worthy of such a Hand.

THE last Engine of Orators is the * Stage Itinerant erected with much Sagacity, † sub Jove pluvio, in triviis & quadrivis. It is the great Seminary of the two former, and its Orators are sometimes preferred to the one, and sometimes to the other, in Proportion to their Deservings; there being a strict and perpetual Intercourse between all three.

FROM this accurate Deduction, it is manifest, that for obtaining Attention in Publick, there is of Necessity required a superior Position of Place. But although this Point be generally granted, yet the Cause is little agreed in; and it seemeth to me, that very few Philosophers have fallen into a true, natural Solution of this Phænomenon. The deepest Account, and the most fairly digested of any I have yet met with, is this, That Air being a heavy

Body, and therefore (according to the * Lucret. System of * Epicurus) continually descending, must needs be more so, when loaden and pressed down by Words; which are also Bodies of much Weight and Gravity, as it is manifest from those deep Impressions they make and leave upon us; and therefore must be delivered from a due Altitude, or else they

* Is the Mountebank's Stage, whose Orators the Author determineth either to the Gallows, or a Conventicle.

† In the open Air, and in Streets where the greatest Resort is.

they will neither carry a good Aim, nor fall down with a sufficient Force.

* Corpoream quoque enim vocem constare fatendum est, Et sonitum, quoniam possunt impellere Sensus.

Lucr. Lib. 4.

AND I am the readier to favour this Conjecture, from a common Observation, That, in the several Assemblies of these Orators, Nature itself hath instructed the Hearers, to stand with their Mouths open, and erected parallel to the Horizon, so as they may be intersected by a perpendicular Line from the Zenith to the Center of the Earth. In which Position, if the Audience be well compact, every one carries Home a Share, and little or nothing is lost.

I CONFESS, there is something yet more refined in the Contrivance and Structure of our modern Theatres. For, first, the Pit is sunk below the Stage, with due Regard to the Institution above deduced; that whatever weighty Matter shall be delivered thence (whether it be Lead or Gold) may fall plum into the Jaws of certain Criticks (as I think they are called) which stand ready open to devour them. Then, the Boxes are built round, and raised to a Level with the Scene, in Deference to the Ladies; because, that large Portion of Wit, laid out in raising Pruriences and Protuberances, is observed to run much upon a Line, and ever in a Circle. The whining Passions, and little starved Conceits, are gently wafted up by their own extreme Levity, to the middle Region, and there fix, and are frozen by the frigid Understandings of the Inhabitants. Bombastry and Buffoonry, by Nature lofty and light, soar highest of all, and would be lost in the Roof, if the prudent Architect had not (with much Forefight)

* It is certain then, that Voice that thus can wound, Is all material; Body every Sound.

Forefight) contrived for them a fourth Place, called The Twelve-penny Gallery, and there planted a suitable Colony, who greedily intercept them in their Passage.

Now this Physico-logical Scheme of Oratorical Receptacles or Machines containeth a great Mystery; being a Type, a Sign, an Emblem, a Shadow, a Symbol, bearing Analogy to the spacious Commonwealth of Writers, and to those Methods by which they must exalt themselves to a certain Eminency above the inferior World. By the Pulpit are adumbrated the Writings of our Modern Saints in Great Britain, as they have spiritualized and refined them from the Dross and Grossness of Sense and Human Reason. The Matter, as we have said, is of rotten Wood, and that upon two Considerations: Because it is the Quality of rotten Wood to give Light in the Dark; and, secondly, because its Cavities are full of Worms: Which is a * Type with a Pair of Handles, having a Respect to the two principal Qualifications of the Orator, and the two different Fates attending upon his Works.

THE Ladder is an adequate Symbol of Faction and of Poetry, to both of which so noble a Number of Authors are indebted for their Fame. † Of Faction, because

Hiatus in MS.

* * * * *

Of Poetry, because its Orators do perorare with a Song; and because

* The two principal Qualifications of a Fanatic Preacher are, his Inward Light, and his Head full of Maggots; and the two different Fates of his Writings are, to be burnt or Worm-eaten.

† Here is a pretended Defect in the Manuscript; and this is very frequent with our Author, either when because climbing up by slow Degrees, Fate is sure to turn them off before they can reach within many Steps of the Top : And because it is a Preferment, attained by transferring of Propriety, and a confounding of Meum and Tuum.

UNDER the Stage-Itinerant are couched those Productions designed for the Pleasure and Delight of mortal Man ; such as Six Penny-worth of Wit, Westminster Drolleries, Delightful Tales, Compleat Jesters, and the like ; by which the Writers of and for GRUB-STREET, have in these latter Ages so nobly triumphed over Time ; have clipped his Wings, pared his Nails, filed his Teeth, turned back his Hour-glass, blunted his Scythe, and drawn the Hob-Nails out of his Shoes. It is under this Class I have presumed to list my present Treatise, being just come from having the Honour conferred upon me, to be adopted a Member of that illustrious Fraternity.

Now, I am not unaware, how the Productions of the Grub-street Brotherhood have, of late Years, fallen under many Prejudices ; nor how it hath been the perpetual Employment of two junior start-up Societies to ridicule them and their Authors, as unworthy their established Post in the Commonwealth of Wit and Learning. Their own Consciences will easily inform them, whom I mean : Nor has the World been so negligent a Looker-on, as not to observe the continual Efforts made by the Societies of * Gresham and of he thinketh he cannot say any Thing worth reading ; or, when he hath no Mind to enter on the Subject ; or, when it is a Matter of little Moment ; or, perhaps, to amuse his Reader (whereof he is frequently very fond) ; or, lastly, with some satyrical Intention.

* Gresham College, founded by Sir THOMAS GRESHAM, in London, in the Year 1575, for divers Persons (unmarried Men) duly qualified to read Lectures of *Will's, to edify a Name and Reputation upon the Ruin of OURS. And this is yet a more feeling Grief to Us, upon the Regards of Tenderness as as well as of Justice, when we reflect on their Proceedings, not only as unjust, but as ungrateful, undutiful, and unnatural. For, how can it be forgot by the World or themselves, (to say nothing of our own Records, which are full and clear in the Point) that they both are Seminaries, not only of our Planting, but our Watering too? I am informed, our two Rivals have lately made an Offer to enter into the Lists, with united Forces, and challenge us to a Comparison of Books, both as to Weight and Number. In return to which, (with Licence from our President) I humbly offer two Answers: First,

We say, the Proposal is like that which † Viz. A- Archimedes made upon a † smaller About moving fair, including an Impossibility in the the Earth. Practice: For, where can they find Scales of Capacity enough for the first, or an Arithmetician of Capacity enough for the second Point. Secondly, We are ready to accept the Challenge, but with this Condition, that a third indifferent Person be assigned, to whose impartial Judgment it shall be left to decide, which Society each Book, Treatise or Pamphlet, doth most properly belong to. This Point, God knoweth, is very far from being fixed at present: For, we are ready to produce a Catalogue of some thousands, which in all common Justice ought to be entitled to our Fraternity; but by the revolted and new-fangled Writers, Lectures therein daily, in Divinity, Astronomy, Musick, Geometry, Law, Physick, and Rhetoric, with a Salary of fifty Pounds a Year to each, and magnificent Apartments in the said House.

* WILL's Coffee-House was formerly the Place where the Poets usually met; which, although it be yet fresh in Memory, yet in some Years it may be forgot, and want this Explanation.

Write
Upon Prud
ed to ries b verfa our S neare half-Th ungr are e whof of us cably our S with retur
lots;
Cour perly
and, nue
Bless
B cept form all f amo by r Surf is a you how lier, ciou posse
the mus
an

Writers, most perfidiously ascribed to the others. Upon all which, we think it very unbecoming our Prudence, that the Determination should be remitted to the Authors themselves; when our Adversaries by Briguing and Caballing have caused so universal a Defection from us, that the greatest Part of our Society hath already deserted to them, and our nearest Friends begin to stand aloof, as if they were half-ashamed to own us.

THIS is the utmost I am authorized to say upon so ungrateful and melancholy a Subject; because we are extremely unwilling to inflame a Controversy, whose Continuance may be so fatal to the Interests of us all, desiring much rather that Things be amicably composed; and we shall so far advance on our Side, as to be ready to receive the two Prodigals with open Arms, whenever they shall think fit to return from their Husks and their Harlots; which I think, from the * present * Virtuoso Course of their Studies, they most properly may be said to be engaged in; and modern and, like an indulgent Parent, continue Comedies.
nue to them our Affection and our Blessing.

BUT the greatest Maim given to that general Reception, which the Writings of our Society have formerly received, (next to the transitory Estate of all sublunary Things) hath been a superficial Vein among many Readers of the present Age, who will by no means be persuaded to inspect beyond the Surface and the Rind of Things; whereas, Wisdom is a Fox, who, after long hunting, will at last cost you the Pains to dig out: It is a Cheese, which, by how much the richer, has the thicker, the homelier, and the coarser Coat; and whereof, to a judicious Palate, the Maggots are the best: It is a Sack-posset, wherein the deeper you go, you will find it the sweeter. Wisdom is a Hen, whose Cackling we must value and consider, because it is attended with an Egg: But then, lastly, it is a Nut, which, unless you choose with Judgment, may cost you a Tooth, and pay you with nothing but a Worm. In Consequence of these momentous Truths, the Grubben Sages have always chosen to convey their Precepts and their Arts, shut up within the Vehicles of Types and Fables, which having been perhaps more careful and curious in adorning, than was altogether necessary, it has fared with these Vehicles after the usual Fate of Coaches over-finely painted and gilt; that the transitory Gazers have so dazzled their Eyes, and filled their Imaginations with the outward Lustre, as neither to regard or consider the Person or the Parts of the Owner within. A Misfortune we undergo with somewhat less Reluctancy, because it hath been common to us with Pythagoras, Æsop, Socrates, and others of our Predecessors.
you

HOWEVER, that neither the World nor our selves may any longer suffer by such Misunderstandings, I have been prevailed upon, after much Importunity from my Friends, to travel in a compleat and laborious Dissertation upon the prime Productions of our Society; which, besides their beautiful Externals for the Gratification of superficial Readers, have darkly and deeply couched under them the most finished and refined Systems of all Sciences and Arts; as I do not doubt to lay open, by untwisting or unwinding; and either to draw up by Exantlation, or display by Incision.

THIS great Work was entered upon, some Years ago, by one of our most eminent Members: He began with the History of * Reynard the Fox, but neither lived to publish his Essay, nor to proceed farther in so useful an Attempt, which is very much lamented, because the Discovery he made, and communicated

* The Author seems here to be mistaken; for I have seen a Latin Edition of Reynard the Fox, above an hundred Years old, which I take to be the Original; for the rest, it has been thought by many People to contain some Satyrical Design in it.

communicated with his Friends, is now universally received ; nor do I think any of the Learned will dispute that famous Treatise to be a compleat Body of Civil Knowledge, and the Revelation or rather the Apocalypse of all State Arcana. But the Progress I have made is much greater, having already finished my Annotations upon several Dozens ; from some of which, I shall impart a few Hints to the candid Reader, as far as will be necessary to the Conclusion at which I aim.

THE first Piece I have handled, is that of Tom Thumb, whose Author was a Pythagorean Philosopher. This dark Treatise contains the whole Scheme of the Metempsychosis, deducing the Progress of the Soul through all her Stages.

The next is Dr. Faustus, penned by Artephius, an Author bonæ notæ, and an Adeptus : He published it in the * Nine Hundred * He lived Eighty-fourth Year of his Age. This a Thousand. Writer proceeds wholly by Reincarnation, or in the via humida : and the Marriage between Faustus and Helen, doth most conspicuously dilucidate the fermenting of the Male and Female Dragon.

WHITTINGTON and his Cat, is the Work of that mysterious Rabbi, Jehuda Hannasi, containing a Defence of the Gemara of the Jerusalem Mijna, and its just Preference to that of Babylon, contrary to the vulgar Opinion.

THE Hind and Panther. This is the Master-piece of a famous Writer † now † Viz. in living, intended for a compleat Ab- the Year-stract of Sixteen Thousand School- 1698. men from Scotus to Bellarmin.

TOMMY POTTS. Another Piece, supposed by the same Hand, by way of Supplement to the former.

THE Wise Men of Gotham, cum Appendice. This is a Treatise of immense Erudition, being the great Original and Fountain of those Arguments, bandy- dyed dyed about both in France and England, for a just Defence of the Moderns Learning and Wit, against the Presumption, the Pride, and the Ignorance of the Ancients. This unknown Author hath so exhausted the Subject, that a penetrating Reader will easily discover whatever hath been written since upon that Dispute, to be little more than Repetition. * An Abstract of this Treatise hath been lately published by a worthy Member of our Society.

THESE Notices may serve to give the learned Reader an Idea, as well as a Taste, of what the whole Work is likely to produce; wherein I have now altogether circumscribed my Thoughts and my Studies; and if I can bring it to a Perfection before I die, shall reckon I have well employed the † poor Remains of an unfortunate Life. This, indeed, is more than I can justly expect from a Quill worn to the Pith in the Service of the State, in Pro's and Con's upon Popish Plots and † Meal-Tubs, and Exclusion Bills, and Passive Obedience, and Addresses of Lives and Fortunes; and Prerogative and Property, and Liberty of Conscience, and Letters to a Friend; from an Understanding, and a Conscience, thread-bare and ragged with perpetual Turning; from a Head broken in an hundred Places, by the Malignants of the opposite Factions; and from a Body spent with Poxes ill cured, by trusting to Bawds and Surgeons, who (as it afterwards appeared) were professed Enemies to Me and the Government, and revenged their Party's Quarrel upon my

* This I suppose to be understood of Mr. Wotton's Discourse of antient and modern Learning.

† Here the Author seems to personate L'Estrange, Dryden, and some others, who after having passed their Lives in Vice, Faction and Falshood, have the Impudence to talk of Merit, and Innocence, and Sufferings.

‡ In King Charles the Second's Time, there was an Account of a Presbyterian Plot, found in a Tub, which then made much Noise.

my Nose and Shins. Fourscore and Eleven Pamphlets have I written under Three Reigns, and for the Service of Six and Thirty Factions. But finding the State hath no farther Occasion for me and my Ink, I retire willingly to draw it out into Speculations more becoming a Philosopher, having, to my unspeakable Comfort, passed a long Life, with a Conscience void of Offence.

BUT to return. I am assured, from the Reader's Candor, that the brief Specimen I have given will easily clear all the rest of our Society's Productions from an Aspersion, grown, as it is manifest, out of Envy and Ignorance: That they are of little farther Use or Value to Mankind, beyond the common Entertainments of their Wit and their Stile: For these, I am sure, have never yet been disputed by our keenest Adversaries: In both which, as well as the more profound and mystical Part, I have throughout this Treatise closely followed the most applauded Originals. And to render all compleat, I have with much Thought and Application of Mind, so ordered, that the chief Title prefixed to it, (I mean That under which I design it shall pass in the common Conversations of Court and Town) is modelled exactly after the Manner peculiar to Our Society.

I CONFESS to have been somewhat liberal in the Business of * Titles, having observed the Humour of multiplying them to bear great Vogue among certain Writers, whom I exceedingly reverence. And, indeed, it seemeth not unreasonable, that Books, the Children of the Brain, should have the Honour to be christened with Variety of Names, as well as other Infants of Quality. Our famous Dryden has ventured to proceed a Point farther, endeavouring endeavouring to introduce also a Multiplicity of † God-fathers; which is an Improvement of much more Advantage, upon a very obvious Account, &c.

* The Title Page in the Original was so torn, that it was not possible to recover several Titles which the Author here speaks of.

It is a Pity this admirable Invention hath not been better cultivated, so as to grow by this Time into general Imitation, when such an Authority serveth it for a Precedent. Nor have my Endeavours been wanting to second so useful an Example: But, it seems, there is an unhappy Expence usually annexed to the calling of a God-father, which was clearly out of my Head, as it is very reasonable to believe. Where the Pinch lay, I cannot certainly affirm; but having employed a World of Thoughts and Pains, to split my Treatise into Forty Sections, and having entreated Forty Lords of my Acquaintance, that they would do me the Honour to stand; they all made it a Matter of Conscience, and sent me their Excuses.

S E C T.

SECTION II.

ONCE upon a Time there was a Man who had Three * Sons by one Wife, and all at a Birth, neither could the Midwife tell certainly which was the Eldest. Their Father died while they were young; and upon his Death-Bed, calling the Lads to him, spoke thus:

SONS, because I have purchased no Estate, nor was born to any, I have long considered of some good Legacies to bequeath you; and at last, with much Care as well as Expence, have provided each of you (here they are) a new † Coat. Now, you are to understand, that these Coats have two Virtues contained in them: One is, that with good wearing, they will last you fresh and sound as long as you live: The other is, that they will grow in the same Proportion with your Bodies, lengthening and widening of themselves, so as to be always fit. Here, let me see them on you before I die. So, very well! Pray, Children, wear them clean, and brush them often. You will find in my ‡ Will (here it is) full Instructions in every Particular concerning the Wearing and Management of your Coats; wherein you must be very exact, to avoid the Penalties I have appointed for every Transgression or Neglect, upon which your future Fortunes will entirely depend. I have also commanded in my Will, that you should live together in one

C 2

* By these three Sons, Peter, Martin, and Jack, Popery, the Church of England, and our Protestant Dissenters are designed. W. Wotton.

† By his Coats which he gave his Sons, the Garments of the Israelites. W. Wotton.

An Error (with Submission) of the learned Commentator; for by the Coats are meant the Doctrine and Faith of Christianity, by the Wisdom of the Divine Founder fitted to all Times, Places and Circumstances.

Lambin.

‡ The New Testament.

one House like Brethren and Friends, for then you will be sure to thrive, and not otherwise.

HERE the Story says, this good Father died, and the Three Sons went all together to seek their Fortunes.

I SHALL not trouble you with recounting what Adventures they met for the first seven Years, any further than by taking Notice, that they carefully observed their Father's Will, and kept their Coats in very good Order; that they travelled through several Countries, encountered a reasonable Quantity of Giants, and slew certain Dragons.

BEING now arrived at the proper Age for producing themselves, they came up to Town, and fell in Love with the Ladies, but especially Three, who about that Time were in chief Reputation: The * Dutchess d'Argent, Madame de Grands Titres, and the Countess de Orgueil. On their first Appearance, our three Adventurers met with a very bad Reception; and soon with great Sagacity guessing out the Reason, they quickly began to improve in the good Qualities of the Town: They Writ, and Rallied, and Rhimed, and Sung, and Said, and said Nothing: They Drank, and Fought, and Whored, and Slept, and Swore, and took Snuff: They went to new Plays on the first Night, haunted the Chocolate-Houses, beat the Watch, lay on Bulks, and got Claps: They bilked Hackney-Coachmen, ran in Debt with Shop-keepers, and lay with their Wives: They killed Bailiffs, kicked Fiddlers down Stairs, eat at Locket's, loitered at Will's: They talked of the Drawing-Room, and never came there: Dined with Lords they never saw: Whispered

* Their Mistresses are the Dutchess d'Argent, Mademoiselle de Grands Titres, and the Countess de Orgueil, i. e. Covetousness, Ambition and Pride, which were the three great Vices that the ancient Fathers inveighed against, as the first Corruptions of Christianity. W. Wotton.

pered a Dutcheſs, and ſpoke never a Word : Expoſed the Scrawls of their Laundreſs for Billet-doux of Quality : Came ever juſt from Court, and were never ſeen in it : Attended the Levee ſub dio : Got a Liſt of Peers by Heart in one Company, and with great Familiarity retailed them in another.
Above all, they conſtantly attended thoſe Committees of Senators who are ſilent in the House, and loud in the Coffee-house, where they nightly adjourn to chew the Cud of Politicks, and are encompassed with a Ring of Diſciples, who lye in wait to catch up their Droppings. The Three Brothers had acquired forty other Qualifications of the like Stamp, too tedious to recount ; and, by conſequence, were juſtly reckoned the moſt accompliſhed Perſons in the Town : But all would not ſuffice, and the Ladies aforeſaid continued ſtill inflexible : To clear up which Difficulty, I muſt with the Reader's good Leave and Patience have Recourſe to ſome Points of Weight, which the Authors of that Age have not ſufficiently illuſtrated.

FOR * about this Time it happened a Sect aroſe, whoſe Tenets obtained and ſpread very far, eſpecially in the Grand Monde, and among every Body of good Faſhion. They worſhipped a Sort of † Idol, who, as their Doctrine delivered, did daily create Men, by a kind of Manuſactory Operation. This Idol they placed in the higheſt Parts of the House, on an Altar erected about three Foot : He was ſhewn in the Poſture of a Persian Emperor, ſitting on a Superſicies, with his Legs interwoven under him.
This God had a Goſe for his Enſign ; whence it is that ſome learned Men pretend to deduce his Original from Jupiter Capitolinus. At his left Hand, beneath the Altar, Hell ſeemed to open, and catch at the Animals the Idol was creating ; to prevent C 3 which,

* This is an occaſional Satyr upon Dreſs and Faſhion, in order to introduce what follows.

† By this Idol is meant a Taylor.

which, certain of his Priests hourly flung in Pieces of the uninformed Mass of Substance, and sometimes whole Limbs already enlivened, which that horrid Gulph insatiably swallowed, terrible to behold. The Goose was also held a subaltern Divinity, or Deus minorum Gentium, before whose Shrine was sacrificed that Creature, whose hourly Food is human Gore, and who is in so great Renown abroad, for being the Delight and Favourite of the * Ægyptian Cercopithecus. Millions of these Animals were cruelly slaughtered every Day, to appease the Hunger of that confounding Deity. The chief Idol was also worshipped, as the Inventor of the Yard and the Needle; whether as the God of Seamen, or on Account of certain other mystical Attributes, hath not been sufficiently cleared.

THE Worshippers of this Deity had also a System of their Belief, which seemed to turn upon the following Fundamental: They held the Universe to be a large Suit of Cloaths, which investeth every Thing: That the Earth is invested by the Air; the Air is invested by the Stars; and the Stars are invested by the Primum Mobile. Look on this Globe of Earth, you will find it to be a very compleat and fashionable Dress. What is that which some call Land, but a fine Coat faced with Green? or the Sea, but a Waistcoat of Water-Tabby? Proceed to the particular Works of the Creation, you will find how curious a Journeyman Nature hath been, to trim up the vegetable Beaux: Observe how sparkish a Periwig adorns the Head of a Beech, and what a fine Doublet of white Satin is worn by the Birch. To conclude from all, what is Man himself but a † Micro-Coat, or rather a compleat Suit of Cloaths with

* The Ægyptians worshipped a Monkey, which Animal is very fond of eating Lice, filed here Creatures that feed on Human Gore.

† According to the Word Microcosm, or a little World, as Man hath been called by Philosophers.

with all its Trimmings? As to his Body, there can be no Dispute; but examine even the Acquirements of his Mind, you will find them all contribute, in their Order, towards furnishing out an exact Dress: To instance no more; is not Religion a Cloak, Honesty a Pair of Shoes, worn out in the Dirt, Self-love a Surtout, Vanity a Shirt, and Conscience a Pair of Breeches, which, although a Cover for Lewdness as well as Nastiness, is easily slipt down for the Service of both?

THE Posulata being admitted, it will follow in due Courte of Reasoning, that those Beings which the World calleth improperly Suits of Cloaths, are in reality the most refined Species of Animals; or, to proceed higher, that they are rational Creatures, or Men. For, is it not manifest, that they live, and move, and talk, and perform all other Offices of Human Life? Are not Beauty, and Wit, and Mien, and Breeding, their inseparable Proprieties? In short, we see nothing but them, hear nothing but them. Is it not they who walk the Streets, fill up Parliament----, Coffee----, Play----, Bawdy-Houses? It is true, indeed, that these Animals, which are vulgarly called Suits of Cloaths, or Dresses, do according to certain Compositions receive different Appellations. If one of them be trimmed up with a Gold Chain, and a red Gown, and a white Rod, and a great Horse, it is called a Lord-Mayor; if certain Ermins and Furs be piaced in a certain Position, we stile them a Judge, and so, an apt Conjuaction of Lawn and black Sattin, we intitule a Bishop.

OTHERS of these Professors, although agreeing in the main System, were yet more refined upon certain Branches of it; and held that Man was an Animal compounded of two Dresses, the Natural and the Celestial Suit, which were the Body and the Soul: That the Soul was the outward, and the Body the inward Cloathing; that the latter was extraduce; but the former of daily Creation and Circumfusion.

Circumfusion. This last they proved by Scripture; because, in them we Live, and Move, and have our Being: As likewise by Philosophy, because they are All in All, and All in every Part. Besides, said they, separate these two, and you will find the Body to be only a senseless unfavoury Carcass. By all which it is manifest, that the outward Dress must needs be the Soul.

To this System of Religion were tagged several subaltern Doctrines, which were entertained with great Vogue: As particularly, the Faculties of the Mind were deduced by the Learned among them in this Manner: Embroidery was Sheerwit; Gold Fringe was agreeable Conversation; Gold Lace was Repartee; a huge long Perruwig was Humour, and a Coat full of Powder was very good Raillery: All which required Abundance of Finesse and Delicatsse to manage with Advantage, as well as a strict Observance after Times and Fashions.

I HAVE with much Pains and Reading collected, out of antient Authors, this short Summary of a Body of Philosophy and Divinity, which seemeth to have been composed by a Vein and Race of Thinking, very different from any other Systems, either Ancient or Modern. And it was not merely to entertain or satisfy the Reader's Curiosity, but rather to give him Light into several Circumstances of the following Story: That, knowing the State of Dispositions and Opinions in an Age so remote, he may better comprehend those great Events which were the Issue of them. I advise therefore the courteous Reader, to peruse with a World of Application, again and again, whatever I have written upon this Matter. And leaving these broken Ends, I carefully gather up the chief Thread of my Story, and proceed:

THESE

THESE Opinions therefore were so universal, as well as the Practices of them, among the refined Part of Court and Town, that our three Brother-Adventurers, as their Circumstances then stood, were strangely at a Loss. For on the one Side, the three Ladies they addressed themselves to, (whom we have named already) were ever at the very Top of the Fashion, and abhorred all that were below it, but the Breadth of a Hair. On the other Side, their Father's Will was very precise, and it was the main Precept in it, with the greatest Penalties annexed, not to add to, or diminish from their Coats, one Thread, without a positive Command in the Will. Now, the Coats their Father had left them were, it is true, of very good Cloth, and besides, so neatly sewn, you would swear they were all of a Piece, but, at the same Time, very plain, and with little or no Ornament; and it happened, that before they were a Month in Town, great * Shoulder-knots

The first Part of the Tale is the History of Peter; thereby Popery is exposed: Every Body knows the Papists have made great Additions to Christianity; that indeed is the great Exception which the Church of England makes against them, accordingly Peter begins his Pranks, with adding a Shoulder-knot to his Coat.

W. Wotton.

His Description of the Cloth of which the Coat was made, has a farther Meaning than the Words may seem to import. "The Coats their Father had left them were of very good Cloth, and besides so neatly sewn, you would swear it had been all of a Piece, but at the same time very plain, with little or no Ornament." This is the distinguishing Character of the Christian Religion. Christiana Religio absoluta & simplex, was Ammianus Marcellinus's Description of it, who was himself a Heathen. W. Wotton.

* By this is understood the first introducing of Pageantry, and unnecessary Ornaments in the Church, such der-knots came up; strait, all the World was Shoul-der-knots; no approaching the Ladies Ruelles without the Quota of Shoulder-knots: That Fellow, cries one, has no Soul; where is his Shoulder-knot? Our three Brethren soon discovered their Want, by sad Experience, meeting in their Walks with forty Mortifications and Indignities. If they went to the Play-house, the Door-keeper shewed them into the Twelve-penny Gallery. If they called a Boat, says a Waterman, I am first Sculler: If they stept to the Rose to take a Bottle, the Drawer would cry, Friend, we sell no Ale. If they went to visit a Lady, a Footman met them at the Door with, Pray send up your Message. In this unhappy Case, they went immediately to consult their Father's Will, read it over and over, but not a Word of the Shoulder-knot. What should they do? What Temper should they find? Obedience was absolutely necessary, and yet Shoulder-knots appeared extremely requisite. After much Thought, one of the Brothers, who happened to be more Book-learned than the other two, said he had found an Expedient. It is true, said he, *there is nothing here in this Will, totidem verbis, making mention of Shoulder-knots, but I dare conjecture, we may find them inclusive, or totidem syllabis. This Distinction was immediately approved by all; and so they fell again to examine the Will. But their evil Star had so directed the Matter, that the first Syllable was not to be found as were neither for Convenience nor Edification, as a Shoulder-knot, in which there is neither Symmetry nor Use.

* When the Papists cannot find any thing which they want in Scripture, they go to Oral Tradition; thus Peter is introduced satisfied with the tedious Way of looking for all the Letters of any Word, which he has occasion for in the Will, when neither the constituent Syllables, nor much less the whole Word, were there in Terminus. W. Wotton.

in the whole Writing. Upon which Disappointment, he, who found the former Evasion, took Heart, and said, Brothers, there is yet Hopes; for, although we cannot find them totidem verbis, nor totidem syllabis, I dare engage we shall make them out tertio modo, or totidem literis. This Discovery was also highly commended, upon which they fell once more to the Scrutiny, and picked out S, H, O, U, L, D, E, R; when the same Planet, Enemy to their Repose, had wonderfully contrived, that a K was not to be found. Here was a weighty Difficulty! But the distinguishing Brother (for whom we shall hereafter find a Name) now his Hand was in, proved by a very good Argument, that K was a modern illegitimate Letter, unknown to the learned Ages, nor any where to be found in ancient Manuscripts, Calenda hath in * Q. V. C. been sometimes writ * Quibusdam with a K, but erroneously, for in the Veteribus Co-best Copies it is ever spelt with a C. dicibus
And by Consequence it was a gross
Mistake in our Language to spell Knot with a K, but that, from henceforward, he would take Care it should be writ with a C; upon this, all farther Difficulty vanished; Shoulder-knots were made clearly out to be jure Paterno, and our three Gentlemen swaggered with as large and as slanting ones as the best.

BUT, as human Happiness is of a very short Duration, so in those Days were human Fashions, upon which it entirely dependeth. Shoulder-knots had their Time, and we must now imagine them in their Decline; for a certain Lord came just from Paris, with fifty Yards of Gold-Lace upon his Coat, exactly trimmed after the Court-Fashion of that Month. In two Days, all Mankind appeared closed up in Bars of † Gold-Lace: Whoever durst peep abroad

* Some ancient Manuscripts.

† I cannot tell whether the Author means any new Invention

abroad without his Complement of Gold-Lace, was as scandalous as a ----; and as ill received among the Women. What should our Three Knights do in this momentous Affair? They had sufficiently strained a Point already, in the Affair of Shoulder-knots: Upon Recourse to the Will, nothing appeared there but altum silentium. That of the Shoulder-knots was a loose, flying, circumstantial Point; but this of Gold-Lace seemed too considerable an Alteration without better Warrant; it did aliquo modo essentialæ adherere, and therefore required a positive Precept. But about this Time, it fell out that the learned Brother aforesaid had read Aristotelis Dialectica, and especially that wonderful Piece de Interpretatione, which has the Faculty of teaching its Readers to find out a Meaning in every Thing but itself; like Commentators on the Revelations, who proceed Prophets without understanding a Syllable of the Text. Brothers, said he, * You are to be informed, that of Wills duo sunt Genera, † Nuncupatory and Scriptorio: That in the Scriptorio Will here before us, there is no Precept or Mention about Gold-lace, conceditur: But, si idem affirmetur de nuncupatorio, negatur; for, Brothers, if you remember, we heard a Fellow say when we were Boys, that he heard my Father's Man say, that he heard my Father say, that he would advise his Sons to get Gold-Lace on their Coats, as soon as ever they could procure Money to buy it. By G--- that is very true, cries the other; I remember it perfectly well, said the Third. And to without Innovation by this Word, or whether it be only to introduce the new Methods of forcing and perverting Scripture.

* The next Subject of our Author's Wit, is the Glosses and Interpretations of Scripture, very many absurd ones of which are allowed in the most authentick Books of the Church of Rome. W. Wotton.

† By this is meant Tradition, allowed to have equal Authority with the Scripture, or rather greater.

abroad without his Complement of Gold-Lace, was as scandalous as a ----; and as ill received among the Women. What should our Three Knights do in this momentous Affair? They had sufficiently strained a Point already, in the Affair of Shoulder-knots: Upon Recourse to the Will, nothing appeared there but altum silentium. That of the Shoulder-knots was a loose, flying, circumstantial Point; but this of Gold-Lace seemed too considerable an Alteration without better Warrant; it did aliquo modo essentia adherere, and therefore required a positive Precept. But about this Time, it fell out that the learned Brother aforesaid had read Aristotelis Dialectica, and especially that wonderful Piece de Interpretatione, which has the Faculty of teaching its Readers to find out a Meaning in every Thing but itself; like Commentators on the Revelations, who proceed Prophets without understanding a Syllable of the Text. Brothers, said he, * You are to be informed, that of Wills duo sunt Genera, † Nuncupatory and Scriptory: That in the Scriptory Will here before us, there is no Precept or Mention about Gold-lace, conceditur: But, si idem affirmetur de nuncupatorio, negatur; for, Brothers, if you remember, we heard a Fellow say when we were Boys, that he heard my Father's Man say, that he heard my Father say, that he would advise his Sons to get Gold-Lace on their Coats, as soon as ever they could procure Money to buy it. By G--- that is very true, cries the other; I remember it perfectly well, said the Third. And so without

Innovation by this Word, or whether it be only to introduce the new Methods of forcing and perverting Scripture.

* The next Subject of our Author's Wit, is the Glossa and Interpretations of Scripture, very many absurd ones of which are allowed in the most authentick Books of the Church of Rome. W. Wotton.

† By this is meant Tradition, allowed to have equal Authority with the Scripture, or rather greater.

wi th

pr an
to (f ou an W on ca ce to th
ex
†

ci v e h

in in to t
e
P P t o
C
J

without more ado they got the largest Gold-Lace in the Parish, and walked about as fine as Lords.

A while after, there came up all in Fashion, a pretty Sort of * Flame-coloured Sattin for Linings, and the Mercer brought a Pattern of it immediately to our Three Gentlemen; An't please your Worships (said he) † My Lord C---, and Sir J. W. had Linings out of this very Piece last Night; it takes wonderfully, and I shall not have a Remnant left, enough to make my Wife a Pin-cushion by To-morrow at Ten o'Clock. Upon this, they fell again to rumage the Will, because the present Case also required a positive Precept, the Lining being held by orthodox Writers to be of the Essence of the Coat. After long Search, they could fix upon nothing to the Matter in hand, except a short Advice of their Father's in the Will, † to take Care of Fire, and put out out their Candles

D

before

* This is Purgatory, whereof he speaks more particularly hereafter, but here only to shew how Scripture was perverted to prove it, which was done by giving equal Authority with the Canon to Apocrypha, called hers a Codicil annexed.

It is likely the Author, in every one of these Changes in the Brother's Dresses, refers to some particular Error in the Church of Rome; although it is not easy, I think, to apply them all; but by this of Flame-coloured Sattin is manifestly intended Purgatory; by Gold-Lace may perhaps be understood, the lofty Ornaments and Plate in the Churches. The Shoulder-knots and Silver Fringe are not so obvious, at least to me; but the Indian Figures of Men, Women, and Children, plainly relate to the Pictures in the Romish Churches, of God like an old Man, of the Virgin Mary, and our Saviour as a Child.

† This shews the Time the Author writ, it being about Fourteen Years since those two Persons were reckoned the fine Gentlemen of the Town.

‡ That is, to take care of Hell; and, in order to do that, to subdue and extinguish their Lusts.

before they went to sleep. This, although a good deal for the Purpose, and helping very far towards Self-Conviction, yet not seeming wholly of Force to establish a Command; and being resolved to avoid farther-Scruple, as well as future Occasion for Scandal, says He that was the Scholar; I remember to have read in Wills; of a Codicil annexed, which is indeed a Part of the Will, and what it contains hath equal Authority with the rest. Now, I have been considering of this same Will here before us, and I cannot reckon it to be compleat for want of such a Codicil. I will therefore fasten one in its proper Place very dexterously; I have had it by me some time; it was written by a † Dog-keeper of my Grandfather's, and talks a great deal (as good Luck would have it) of this very Flame-coloured Sattin. The Project was immediately approved by the other Two; an old Parchment Scroll was tagged on according to Art, in the Form of a Codicil annex, and the Sattin bought and worn.

NEXT Winter, a Player, hired for the Purpose by the Corporation of Fringe-makers, acted his Part in a new Comedy, all covered with † Silver-Fringe, and according to the laudable Custom, gave Rise to that Fashion. Upon which the Brothers consulting the Father's Will, to their great Astonishment found these Words; Item, I charge and command my said Three Sons, to wear no sort of Silver-Fringe upon or about their said Coats, &c. with a Penalty in case of Disobedience, too long here to insert. However, after some Pause, the Brother so often mentioned for his Erudition, who was well skilled in Criticisms, had found in a certain Author, which he said should be nameless, that the same Word, which in the Will is called Fringe, doth also signify a Broomstick; and doubtless ought to have the same Interpretation in this this Paragraph. This another of the Brothers disliked, because of that Epithet Silver, which could not, he humbly conceived, in Propriety of Speech, be reasonably applied to a Broomstick: But it was replied upon him, that this Epithet was understood in a Mythological and Allegorical Sense. However, he objected again, why their Father should forbid them to wear a Broomstick on their Coats, a Caution that seemed unnatural and impertinent: Upon which, he was taken up short, as one that spoke irreverently of a Mystery, which doubtless was very useful and significant, but ought not to be over curiously pryed into, or nicely reasoned upon. And in short, their Father's Authority being now considerably sunk, this Expedient was allowed to serve as a lawful Dispensation, for wearing their full Proportion of Silver-Fringe.

† I believe this refers to that Part of the Apocrypha, where mention is made of Tobit and his Dog.

‡ This is certainly the farther introducing the Point of Habit and Ornament.

A WHILE after was revived an old Fashion, long antiquated, of Embroidery, with * Indian Figures of Men, Women, and Children. Here they remembered but too well, how their Father had always abhorred this Fashion; that he made several Paragraphs on Purpose, importing his utter Detestation of it, and bestowing his everlasting Curse to his Sons whenever they should wear it. For all this, in a few Days, they appeared higher in the Fashion than any Body else in the Town. But they solved the Matter by saying, that these Figures were not at all the same with those that were formerly worn, and were meant in the Will. Besides, they did not wear them in that Sense, as forbidden by their Father, but as they were a commendable Custom, and of great Use to the Publick. That these rigorous Clauses in the Will did therefore require some Al-

D 2

lozance,

* The Images of Saints, the blessed Virgin, and our Saviour an Infant.

Ibid. Images in the Church of Rome give him but too fair a Handle. The Brothers remembered, &c. The Allegory here is direct. W. Wotton.

lowance, and a favourable Interpretation, and ought to be understood cum grano Salis.

BUT, Fashions perpetually altering in that Age, the Scholastick Brother grew weary of searching farther Evasions, and solving everlasting Contradictions. Resolved therefore at all Hazards to comply with the Modes of the World, they concerted Matters together, and agreed unanimously to * lock up their Father's Will in a Strong Box, brought out of Greece or Italy (I have forgot which) and trouble themselves no farther to examine it, but only refer to its Authority whenever they thought fit. In Consequence whereof, a while after, it grew a general Mode to wear an infinite Number of Points, most of them tagged with Silver: Upon which the Scholar pronounced † ex Cathedra, that Points were absolutely Jure Paterno, as they might very well remember. It is true indeed, the Fashion prescribed somewhat more than was directly named in the Will; however, that they, as Heirs general of their Father, had Power to make and add certain Clauses for publick Emolument, though not deducible totidem verbis, from the Letter of the Will,

* The Papists formerly forbid the People the Use of Scripture in a Vulgar Tongue; Peter therefore locks up his Father's Will in a strong Box, brought out of Greece or Italy. Those Countries are named, because the New Testament is written in Greek; and the Vulgar Latin, which is the authentick Edition of the Bible in the Church of Rome, as in the Language of old Italy. W. Wotton.

† The Popes, in their Decretals and Bulls, have given their Sanction to many very gainful Doctrines, which are now received in the Church of Rome, that are not mentioned in Scripture, and are unknown to the Primitive Church. Peter accordingly pronounces, ex Cathedra, That Points tagged with Silver were absolutely Jure Paterno, and so they wore them in great Numbers. W. Wotton.

Will, or else, Multa absurda sequerentur. This was understood for Canonical, and therefore on the following Sunday they came to Church all covered with Points.

THE learned Brother, so often mentioned, was reckoned the best Scholar in all that or the next Street to it; insomuch as, having run something behind-hand with the World, he obtained the Favour from a † certain Lord, to receive him into his House, and to teach his Children. A while after, the Lord died, and he, by long Practice of his Father's Will, found the Way of contriving a Deed of Conveyance of that House to himself and his Heirs; upon which he took Possession, turned the young Squires out, and received his Brothers in their Stead.

† This was Constantine the Great, from whom the Popes pretend a Donation of St. Peter's Patrimony, which they have never been able to produce.

Ibid. The Bishops of Rome enjoyed their Privileges in Rome at first by Favour of the Emperors, whom at last they shut out of their own Capital City, and then forged a Donation from Constantine the Great, the better to justify what they did. In Imitation of this, Peter, having run something behind-hand in the World, obtained Leave of a certain Lord, &c.

W. Wotton.

S E C T. III.

A DIGRESSION concerning CRITICKS.

ALTHOUGH I have been hitherto as cautious as I could, upon all Occasions, most nicely to follow the Rules and Methods of Writing laid down by the Example of our illustrious Moderns; yet has the unhappy Shortness of my Memory led me into an Error, from which I must immediately extricate myself, before I can decently pursue my principal Subject. I confess with Shame, it was an unpardonable Omission to proceed so far as I have already done, before I had performed the due Discourses, Expostulatory, Supplicatory, or Deprecatory, with my good Lords the Criticks. Towards some Atone-ment for this grievous Neglect, I do here make humbly bold to present them with a short Account of themselves and their Art, by looking into the Original and Pedigree of the Word, as it is generally understood among us, and very briefly considering the antient and present State thereof.

By the Word Critick, at this Day so frequent in all Conversations, there have sometimes been distinguished Three very different Species of mortal Men, according as I have read in ancient Books and Pamphlets. For, first, by this Term was understood such Persons as invented or drew up Rules for themselves and the World; by observing which, a careful Reader might be able to pronounce upon the Productions of the Learned, form his Taste to a true Relish of the Sublime and the Admirable; and divide every Beauty of Matter or of Style from the Corruption that apeth it. In their common Perusal of Books, singling out the Errors and Defects, the Nauseous, the Fulsome, the Dull, and the Impertinent, with the Caution of a Man that walks through Edinburgh Streets in a Morning, who is indeed as careful as he can to watch diligently, and spy out the Filth in his Way; not that he is curious to observe the Colour and Complexion of the Ordure, or take its Dimensions, much less to be paddling in, or tasting it; but only with a Design to come out as cleanly as he may. These Men seem, although very erroneously, to have understood the Appellation of Critick in a literal Sense; that one principal Part of his Office was to Praise and Acquit; and, that a Critick, who setteth up to read, only for an Occasion of Censure and Reproof, is a Creature as barbarous as a Judge, who should take up a Resolution to hang all Men that came before him upon a Trial.

AGAIN; by the Word Critick have been meant, the Restorers of antient Learning, from the Worms, and Graves, and Dust of Manuscripts.

Now, the Races of these two have been for some Ages utterly extinct; and, besides, to discourse any farther of them would not be at all to my Purpose.

THE Third, and Noblest Sort, is that of the TRUE CRITICK, whose Original is the most ancient of all. Every True Critick is a Hero born, descending in a direct Line from a Celestial Stem, by Momus and Hybris, who begat Zoilus, who begat Pigellius, who begat Etcætera the Elder, who begat Bently, and Rymer, and Watton, and Perrault, and Dennis, who begat Etcætera the Younger.

AND these are the Criticks from whom the Commonwealth of Learning hath in all Ages received such immense Benefits, that the Gratitude of their Admirers placed their Origin in Heaven, among those of Hercules, Theseus, Perseus, and other great Deservers of Mankind. But Heroick Virtue itself hath not been exempt from the Obloquy of evil Tongues. For it hath been objected, that those ancient Heroes, famous for their combating so many Giants, and Dragons, and Robbers, were in their own Persons a greater Nuisance to Mankind, than any of those Monsters they subdued; and therefore, to render their Obligations more com-

pleat, when all other Vermin were destroyed, should in Conscience have concluded with the same Justice upon themselves; Hercules most generously did; and hath, upon that Score, procured to himself more Temples and Votaries than the best of his Fellows. For these Reasons, I suppose it is why some have conceived, it would be very expedient for the publick Good of Learning, that every True Critick, as soon as he had finished his Task assigned, should immediately deliver himself up to Ratsbane or Hemp, or from some convenient Altitude, and that no Man's Pretensions to so illustrious a Character should by any means be received, before that Operation were performed.

Now, from this Heavenly Descent of Criticisim, and the close Analogy it bears to Heroick Virtue, it is easy to assign the proper Employment of a True Ancient Genuine Critick; which is, to travel through this vast World of Writings; to pursue and hunt those monstrous Faults bred within them; to drag out the lurking Errors like Cacus from his Den; to multiply them like Hydra's Heads; and rake them together like Augea's Dung; or else drive away a Sort of dangerous Fowl, who have a perverse Inclination to plunder the best Branches of the Tree of Knowledge, like those Stymphalian Birds that eat up the Fruit.

THESE Reasonings will furnish us with an adequate Definition of a true Critick; that he is a Discoverer and Collector of Writers Faults. Which may be farther put beyond Dispute by the following Demonstration: That whoever will examine the Writings in all Kinds, wherewith this ancient Sect hath honoured the World, shall immediately find, from the whole Thread and Tenour of them, that the Ideas of the Authors have been altogether conversant, and taken up with the Faults and Blemishes, and Oversights, and Mistakes of other Writers; and let the Subject treated on be whatever it will, their Imaginations are so entirely possessed and replete

plete with the Defects of other Pens, that the very Quintessence of what is bad, doth of Necessity distil into their own; By which means the whole appear-eth to be nothing else but an Abstract of the Criticisms themselves have made.

HAVING thus briefly considered the Original and Office of a Critick, as the Word is understood in its most noble and universal Acceptation, I proceed to refute the Objections of those who argue from the Silence and Pretermission of Authors; by which they pretend to prove, that the very Art of Criticism, as now exercised, and by me explained, is wholly Modern; and consequently, that the Criticks of Great Britain and France have no Title to an Original so Antient and Illustrious as I have deduced. Now, if I can clearly make out the contrary, that the most antient Writers have particularly described, both the Person and the Office of a true Critick, agreeable to the Definition laid down by me; their grand Objection, from the Silence of Authors, will fall to the Ground.

I CONFESS to have, for a long Time, borne a Part in this general Error; from which I should never have acquitted myself, but through the Assistance of our Noble Moderns; whose most edifying Volumes I turn indefatigably over Night and Day, for the Improvement of my Mind, and the Good of my Country: These have with unwearied Pains made many useful Searches into the weak Sides of the Antients, and given us a comprehensive List of them. * Besides, they have * See Wot-proved beyond Contradiction, that the ton of Antient and Modern very finest Things delivered of old, Antient and Modern have been long since invented, and Modern Learn-brought to Light by much later Pens; ing.

and that the noblest Discoveries those Antients ever made, of Art or of Nature, have all been produced by the transcending Genius of the present Age. Which clearly shews, how little Merit those Antients can justly pretend to; and takes off that that blind Admiration paid them by Men in a Corner, who have the Unhappiness of conversing too little with present Things. Reflecting maturely upon all this, and taking in the whole Compass of Human Nature, I easily concluded, that these Antients, highly sensible of their many Imperfections, must needs have endeavoured from some Passages in their Works, to obviate, soften, or divert the censorious Reader, by Satyr, or Panegyrick upon the true Criticks, in Imitation of their Masters the Moderns.

Now, in the Common - Places of * Satyr and * both these, I was plentifully instructed, by a long Course of useful Studies upon Criticks. in Prefaces and Prologues; and therefore immediately resolved to try what I could discover of either, by a diligent Perusal of the most antient Writers, and especially those who treated of the earliest Times. Here I found to my great Surprize, that although they all entered, upon Occasion, into particular Descriptions of the true Critick, according as they were governed by their Fears or their Hopes; yet whatever they touched of that kind was with Abundance of Caution, adventuring no farther than Mythology and Hieroglyphick. This, I suppose, gave Ground to superficial Readers, for urging the Silence of Authors, against the Antiquity of the true Critick; although the Types are so apposite, and the Applications so necessary and natural, that it is not easy to conceive, how any Reader of a modern Eye and Taste could overlook them, I shall venture from a great Number to produce a few, which, I am very confident, will put this Question beyond Dispute.

It well deserves considering, that these antient Writers, in treating Enigmatically upon the Subject, have generally fixed upon the very same Hieroglyph, varying only the Story according to their Affections or their Wit. For, first, Pausanias is of Opinion, that the Perfection of Writing correct, was entirely owing to the Institution of Criticks; and, that he can possibly mean no other than the True Critick, is, I think, manifest enough from the following Description. He says, They were a Race of Men, who delighted to nibble at the Superfluities and Excrescencies of Books; which the Learned at length observing, took Warning of their own Accord, to lop the Luxuriant, the Rotten, the Dead, the Sapless, and the Overgrown Branches from their Works. But, now, all this he cunningly shades under the following Allegory, *That the * Nauplians * Lib. --- in Argia learned the Art of Pruning their Vines, by observing, that when an Ass had browsed upon one of them, it thrived the better, and bore fairer Fruit.* But † Herodotus holding the very same Hieroglyph, speaks much plainer, † Lib. 4. and almost in Terminis. He hath been so bold as to tax the true Criticks of Ignorance and Malice; telling us openly, for I think nothing can be plainer, that in the Western Part of Libya, there were ASSES with HORNS: Upon which Relation * Ctesias yet refines, mentioning the * Vide every same Animal about India; adding,cerpta ex eo That whereas all other ASSES wanted a apud Pho-Gall, these horned ones were so redundant in that part, that their Flesh was not to be eaten, because of its extream Bitterness.

Now, the Reason why those antient Writers treated this Subject only by Types and Figures was, because they durst not make open Attacks against a Party so potent and so terrible, as the Criticks of those Ages were; whose very Voice was so dreadful, that a Legion of Authors would tremble, and drop their Pens at the Sound: For so † Herodotus tells us expressly in another † Lib. 4. Place, how a vast Army of Scythians was put to Flight in a panick Terror by the Braying of an Ass. From hence it is conjectured by certain profound Philologers, that the great Awe and Reverence paid to a true Critick, by the Writers of Britain, have been derived to us from those our Scythian

Scythian Ancestors. In short, this Dread was so universal, that in Process of Time, those Authors who had a Mind to publish their Sentiments more freely, in describing the true Criticks of their several Ages, were forced to leave off the Use of the former Hieroglyph, as too nearly approaching the Prototype, and invented other Terms instead thereof that were more cautious and mystical;

 * Lib. so * Diodorus speaking to the same Purpose, ventures no farther than to say, That in the Mountains of Helicon there grows a certain Weed, which bears a Flower of so damned a Scent, as to poison those who offer to smell it. Lucretius gives exactly the same Relation.

† Est etiam in magnis Heliconis montibus arbor, Floris odore hominem tetro consueti necare. Lib. 6.

BUT Ctesias, whom we lately quoted, hath been a great deal bolder: He had been used with much Severity by the true Criticks of his own Age, and therefore could not forbear to leave behind him, at least one deep Mark of his Vengeance against the whole Tribe. His Meaning is so near the Surface, that I wonder how it possibly came to be overlooked by those who deny the Antiquity of true Criticks. For pretending to make a Description of many strange Animals about India, he hath set down these remarkable Words: Amongst the rest, says he, there is a Serpent that wants Teeth, and consequently cannot bite; but if its Vomit (to which it is much addicted) happens to fall upon any Thing, a certain Rottenness or Corruption ensues: These Serpents are generally found among the Mountains where Jewels grow, and they frequently emit a poisonous Juice, whereof whoever drinks, that Person's Brains fly out of his Nostrils.

THESE

† *Near Helicon, and round the learned Hill,
 Grow Trees, whose Blossoms with their Odour kill.*

THERE was also among the Antients a Sort of Critick, not distinguished in Specie from the former; but in Growth or Degree, who seem to have been only the Tiros or junior Scholars; yet, because of their different Employments, they are frequently mentioned as a Sect by themselves. The usual Exercise of these younger Students was to attend constantly at Theatres, and learn to spy out the worst Parts of the Play, whereof they were obliged carefully to take Notice, and render a rational Account to their Tutors. Fleeced at these smaller Sports, like young wolves, they grew up in Time, to be nimble and strong enough for hunting down large Game. For it hath been observed both among Antients and Moderns, that a true Critick hath one Quality in common with a Whore and an Alderman, never to change his Title or his Nature; that a Grey Critick hath been certainly a Green one, the Perfections and Acquirements of his Age being only the improved Talents of his Youth; like Hemp, which, some Naturalists inform us, is bad for Suffocations, although taken but in the Seed. I esteem the Invention, or at least the Refinement of Prologues, to have been owing to these younger Practitioners, of whom Terence maketh frequent and honourable Mention, under the Name of Malevoli.

Now, it is certain, the Institution of the true Critick was of absolute Necessity to the Commonwealth or Learning. For all human Actions seem to be divided like Themistocles and his Company: One Man canvasseth, and another can make a small Town a great City, and he that cannot do either one or the other deserveth to be kicked out of the Creation. The avoiding of which Penalty hath doubtless given the first Birth to the Nation of Criticks, and, withal, an occasion for their secret Detractors to report; that a true Critick is a Sort of Mechanick, set up with a Stock and Tools for his Trade, at as little Expence as a Taylor; and that there is much Analogy between the Utensils and Abilities of both: That the Taylor's Hell is the Type of a Critick's Common-place Book, and his Wit and Learning held forth by the Goose: That it requireth at least as many of these to the making up of one Scholar, as of the others to the Composition of a Man: That the Valour of both is equal, and their Weapons near of a Size. Much may be said in Answer to those invidious Reflections; and I can positively affirm the first to be a Falshood: For, on the contrary, nothing is more certain, than that it requireth greater Layings out to be free of the Criticks Company, than of any other you can name. For, as to be a true Beggar, it will cost the richest Candidate every Groat he is worth; so, before one can commence a true Critick, it will cost a Man all the good Qualities of his Mind: which, perhaps, for a less Purchase, would be thought but an indifferent Bargain.

HAVING thus amply proved the Antiquity of Criticism, and described the Primitive State of it: I shall now examine the present Condition of this Empire, and shew how well it agrees with its antient self. * A certain Author, whose Works have many Ages since been entirely lost, doth in his ninth Book and eighth Chapter, say of Criticks, that their Writings are the Mirrors of Learning. This I understand in a literal Sense, and suppose our Author must mean, that whoever designs to be a perfect Writer must inspect into the Books of Criticks, and correct his Invention there as in a Mirror. Now, whoever considers, that the Mirrors of the Antients were made of Brass, and sine Mercurio, may presently apply the Two principal Qualifications of a true modern Critick, and, consequently, must needs conclude, that these have always been, and must be for ever the same. For, Brass is an Emblem of Duration, and, when it is skilfully burnished, will cast cast Reflections from its own Superficies, without any Assistance of Mercury from behind. All the other Talents of a Critick will not require a particular Mention, being included in, or easily reducible to these. However, I shall conclude with three Maxims, which may serve both as Characteristicks to distinguish a true modern Critick from a Pretender, and will be also of admirable Use to those worthy Spirits, who engage in so useful and honourable an Art.

* Quotation after the Manner of a great Author. Vide Bentley's Dissertation, &c.

THE first is, That Criticism, contrary to all other Faculties of the Intellect, is ever held the truest and best, when it is the very first Result of the Critick's Mind: As Fowlers reckon the first Aim for the surest, and seldom fail of missing the Mark, if they stay not for a second.

SECONDLY; the true Criticks are known by their Talent of swarming about the noblest Writers, to which they are carried merely by Instinct, as a Rat to the best Cheese, or a Wasp to the fairest Fruit. So, when the King is on Horse-back, he is sure to be the dirtiest Person of the Company, and they that make their Court best are such as bespatter him most.

LASTLY; a true Critick, in the Perusal of a Book, is like a Dog at a Feast, whose Thoughts and Stomach are wholly set upon what the Guests fling away, and, consequently, is apt to Snarl most, when there are the fewest Bones.

THUS much, I think, is sufficient to serve by Way of Address to my Patrons, the true modern Criticks, and may very well atone for my past Silence, as well as that which I am like to observe for the future. I hope I have deserved so well of their whole Body, as to meet with generous and tender Usage at their Hands. Supported by which Expectation, I go on boldly to pursue those Adventures already so happily begun.

SECTION IV.

A TALE of a TUB.

I HAVE now with much Pains and Study, conducted the Reader to a Period, where he must expect to hear of great Revolutions. For no sooner had Our Learned Brother, so often mentioned, got a warm House of his own over his Head, than he began to look big, and to take mightily upon him; insomuch, that unless the gentle Reader out of his great Candour, will please a little to exalt his Idea, I am afraid he will henceforth hardly know the Hero of the Play, when he happeneth to meet Him; his Part, his Drefs, and his Mien being so much altered.

He told his Brothers, he would have them to know, that he was their Elder, and, consequently, his Father's sole Heir: Nay, a while after, he would not allow them to call Him Brother, but Mr. PETER. And then he must be styled, Father PETER, and sometimes, My Lord PETER. To support this Grandeur, which he soon began to consider could not be maintained without a better Fonde than what he was born to: After much Thought, he cast about, at last, to turn Projector and Virtuoso, wherein he so well succeeded, that many famous Discoveries, Projects, and Machines, which bear great Vogue and Practice at present in the World, are owing entirely to Lord Peter's Invention. I will deduce the best Account I have been able to collect of the Chief amongst them, without considering much the Order they came out in; because, I think, Authors are not well agreed as to that Point.

I hope, when this Treatise of mine shall be translated into foreign Languages, (as I may without Vanity affirm, That the Labour of collecting, the Faithfulness in recounting, and the great Usefulness of the Matter to the Publick, will amply deserve that Justice) that the worthy Members of the several Academies abroad, especially those of France and Italy, will favourably accept these humble Offers, for the Advancement of Universal Knowledge. I do also advertise the most Reverend Fathers the Eastern Missionaries, that I have, purely for their Sakes, made Use of such Words and Phrases, * as will best admit an easy Turn into any of the Oriental Languages, especially the Chinese. And so I proceed with great Content of Mind, upon reflecting, how much Emolument this whole Globe of Earth is like to reap by my Labours.
the

THE first undertaking of Lord Peter, was to purchase a * large Continent, lately said to have been discovered in Terra Australis incognita. This Tract of Land he bought at a very great Penny-worth from the Discoverers themselves, (although some pretended to doubt whether they had ever been there) and then retailed it into several Cantons to certain Dealers, who carried over Colonies, but were all Shipwreckt in the Voyage. Upon which, Lord Peter sold the said Continent to other Customers again, and again, and again, and again, with the same Success.

THE second Project I shall mention, was his † Sovereign Remedy for the Worms, especially those in the Spleen. ‡ The Patient was to eat nothing after Supper for three Nights. As soon as he went

L. 3

to

* That is Purgatory.

† Penance and Resolution are paid upon under the Notion of a Sovereign Remedy for the Worms, especially in the Spleen, which by observing Peter's Prescription would go off insensibly by Perspiration ascending thro' the Brain, &c. W. Wotton.

‡ Here the Author ridicules the Penances of the Church of Rome, which may be made as easy to the Sinner as he pleases, provided he will pay for them accordingly.

to Bed, he was carefully to lye on one Side, and when he grew weary, to turn upon the other: He must also duly confine his two Eyes to the same Object; and by no Means to break Wind at both Ends together, without manifest Occasion. These Prescriptions diligently observed, the Worms would void insensibly by Perspiration, ascending through the Brain.

A THIRD Invention was the erecting of a Whispering-Office, for the publick Good and Ease of all such as are Hypochondriacal, or troubled with the Cholick; as Midwives, small Politicians, Friends fallen out, repeating Poets, Lovers, happy, or in Despair, Bawds, Privy-counsellors, Pages, Parasites, and Buffoons: In short, of all such as are in Danger of bursting with too much Wind. An Ass's Head was placed so conveniently, that the Party affected might easily with his Mouth accost either of the Animal's Ears; which he was to apply close for a certain Space, and by a fugitive Faculty, peculiar to the Ears of that Animal, receive immediate Benefit, either by Eructation, or Expiration, or Evomition.

ANOTHER very beneficial Project of Lord Peter's was an Office of Insurance, for Tobacco pipes, Martyrs of the Modern Zeal: Volumes of Poetry, Shadows, - - - and Rivers: That these, nor any of these shall receive Damage by Fire. From whence our Friendly Societies may plainly find themselves, to be only Transcribers from this Original; although the one and the other have been of great Benefit to the Undertakers, as well as of equal to the Publick.

LORD

* Py the Whispering-Office, for the Relief of Eyes-droppers, Physicians, Bawds, and Privy-counsellors, he ridiculeth auricular Controversy, and the Priest who takes it is described by the ap. s. Head. W. Wotton.

† This I take to be the Office of Indulgences, the gross abuses whereof first gave Occasion for the Reformation.

LORD Peter was also held the original Author of * Puppets and Rarce-Skates; the great Utelulness whereof being so generally known, I shall not enlarge farther upon this Particular.

BUT, another Discovery for which he was much renowned, was his famous Universal † Pickle. For having remarked how your † common Pickle in Use among Housewives, was of no farther Benefit than to preserve dead Flesh, and certain Kinds of Vegetables; Peter, with great Cost as well as Art, had contrived a Pickle proper for Houses, Gardens, Towns, Men, Women, Children, and Cattle; wherein he could preserve them as sound as Insects in Amber. Now, this Pickle to the Taste, the Smell, and the Sight, appeared exactly the same, with what is in common Service for Beef, and Butter, and Herrings, (and hath been often that Way applied with great Success) but for its many sovereign Virtues was a quite different Thing. For Peter would put in a certain Quantity of his † Powder-Pimperlimpimp, after which it never failed of Success. The Operation was performed by Spargation in a proper Time of the Moon. The Patient who was to be pickled, as it were a House, would infallibly be preserved from all Spiders, Rats, and Weazles;

* I believe are the Morteries and ridiculous Practises, &c. among the Papists.

† Holy Water he calleth an Universal Pickle to preserve Houses, Gardens, Towns, Men, Women, Children and Cattle, wherein he could preserve them as sound as Insects in Amber. W. Wotton.

‡ This is easily understood to be Holy Water, composed of the same Ingredients with many other Pickles.

¶ And because Holy Water differs only in Consecration from common Water, therefore he tells us that his Pickle by the Powder of Pimperlimpimp receives new Virtues, although it differs not in Sight, nor Smell from the common Pickles, which preserves Beef, and Butter, and Herrings. W. Wotton.

Weazles; If the Party affected were a Dog, he should be exempt from Mange, and Madness, and Hunger. It also infallibly took away all Scabs and Lice, and scalled Heads from Children, never hindering the Patient from any Duty, either at Bed or Board.

BUT of all Peter's Rarities, he most valued a certain Set of * Bulls, whose Race was by great Fortune preserved in a lineal Descent from those that guarded the Golden Fleece: Although some, who pretended to observe them curiously, doubted the Breed had not been kept entirely chaste; because they had been degenerated from their Ancestors in some Qualities, and had acquired others very extraordinary, but a foreign Mixture. The Bulls of Cochos are recorded to have brazen Feet, but whether it happened by ill Pasture and Running, by an Allay from Intervention of other Parents, from stolen Intrigues; whether a Weakness in their Progenitors had impaired the seminal Virtue; or, by a Decline necessary through a long Course of Time, the Originals of Nature being depraved in these latter sinful Ages of the World; Whatever was the Cause, it is certain that Lord Peter's Bulls were extremely vitiated by the Rust of Time in the Metal of their Feet, which was now sunk into common Lead. However, the terrible roaring peculiar to their Lineage was preserved; as likewise that Faculty of breathing out Fire from their Nostrils; which notwithstanding many of their Detractors took to be a Feat of Art, to be nothing so terrible as it appeared; proceeding only from their usual Course of Diet,

* The papal Bulls are ridiculed by Name. / So that here we are at no Loss for the Author's Meaning. W. Wotton.

Ibid. Here the Author hath kept the Name, and means the Pope's Bulls, or rather his Fulminations and Excommunications of Heretical Princes, all signed with Lead and the Seal of the Fishermen.

Diet, which was of * Squibs and Crackers. However, they had two peculiar Marks which extremely distinguished them from the Bulls of Jason, and which I have not met together in the Description of any other Monster, beside that in Horace;

Varias inducere plumas,
and
Atrum definit in piscem.

For these had Fishes Tails, yet upon Occasion could out fly any Bird in the Air. Peter put these Bulls upon several Employments. Sometimes he would set them a roaring to fright † Naughty Boys, and make them quiet. Sometimes he would send them out upon Errands of great Importance; where it is wonderful to recount, and perhaps the cautious Reader may think much to believe it; An Appetitus sensibilibus, deriving itself, through the whole Family, from their noble Ancestors, Guardians of the Golden Fleece; they continued so extremely fond of Gold, that if Peter sent them Abroad, though it were only upon a Compliment, they would roar, and spit, and belch, and piss, and spout, and snivel out Fire, and keep a perpetual Coyl, till you flung them a Bit of Gold; but then, Pulveris exigui jactu, they would grow calm and quiet as Lambs. In short, whether by secret Connivance or Encouragement from their Master, or out of their own liquorish Affection to Gold, or both; it is certain they were no better than a Sort of sturdy, swaggering Beggars; and where they could not prevail to get an Alms, would make Women miscarry, and Children fall into Fits; who, to this very Day, usually call Sprites and Hobgoblins by the Name of Bull-Beggars. They grew at last so very troublesome

* These are the Fulminations of the Pope threatening Hell and Damnation to those Princes who offend him.

† That is, Kings who incur his Displeasure.

some to the Neighbourhood, that some Gentlemen of the North-west got a Parcel of right English Bull-Dogs, and baited them so terribly, that they felt it ever after.

I must needs mention one more of Lord Peter's Projects, which was very extraordinary, and discovered him to be a Master of a high Reach, and profound Invention. Whenever it happened that any Rogue of Newgate was condemned to be hanged, Peter would offer him a Pardon for a certain Sum of Money, which when the poor Caitiff had made all Shifts to scrape up and send, His Lordship would return a * Piece of Paper in this Form.

TO all Mayors, Sheriffs, Jailors, Constables, Bailiffs, Hangmen, &c. Whereas we are informed that A. B. remains in the Hands of you or any of you under the Sentence of Death. We will and command you, upon Sight hereof, to let the said Prisoner depart to his own Habitation, whether he stands condemned for Murder, Sodomy, Rape, Sacrilege, Incest, Treason, Blasphemy, &c. for which this shall be your sufficient Warrant: And if you fail hereof, G--- d---mn You and Yours to all Eternity. And so we bid you heartily Farewell.

Your most humble

Man's Man,

EMPEROR PETER.

THE Wretches, trusting to this, lost their Lives and Money too.

I DESIRE

* This is a Copy of a General Pardon signed Servus Servorum.

Ibid. Absolution in Articulo Mortis, and the Tax Camera Apostolica are jested upon in Emperor Peter's Letter. W. Wotton.

I DESIRE of those whom the Learned among Posterity will appoint for Commentators upon this elaborate Treatise; that they will proceed with great Caution upon certain dark Points, wherein all, who are not Vere adepts, may be in Danger to form rash and hasty Conclusions, especially in some mysterious Paragraphs, where certain Arcana are joined for Brevity sake, which in the Operation must be divided. And, I am certain, that future Sons of Art, will return large Thanks to my Memory, for so grateful, so useful an Innuendo.

It will be no difficult Part to persuade the Reader, that so many worthy Discoveries met with great Success in the World: although I may justly assure him that I have related much the smallest Number: My Design having been only to single out such, as will be of most Benefit for publick Imitation, or which best served to give some Idea of the Reach and Wit of the Inventor. And therefore it need not be wondered, if, by this Time, Lord Peter was become exceeding Rich. But alas! he had kept his Brain so long, and so violently upon the Rack, that at last it shock itself, and began to turn round for a little Fate. In short, what with Pride, Projects, and Knavery, poor Peter was grown distracted, and conceived the strangest Imaginations in the World. In the Height of his fits (as it is usual with those who run mad out of Pride) He would call himself * God Almighty, and sometimes Monarch of the Universe. I have seen him, (says my Author) take Three old † High-crowned Hats, and clap them all on his Head, Three Story high, with a huge Bunch of ‡ Keys at his Girdle,

* The Pope is not only allowed to be the Vicar of Christ, but by several Divines is called God upon Earth, and other blasphemous Titles.

† The triple Crown.

‡ The Keys of the Church.

Ibid. The Pope's Universal Monarchy, and his triple Crown, and Fisher's Ring. W. Wotton.

Girdle, and an Angling Rod in his Hand. In which Guile, whoever went to take him by the Hand in the Way of Salutation, Peter with much Grace, like a well educated Spaniel, would present them with his * Foot, and if they refused his Civility, then he would raise it as high as their Chops, and give them a damned Kick on the Mouth, which hath ever since been called a Salute. Whoever walked by, without paying him their Compliments, having a wonderful strong Breath, he would blow their Hats off into the Dirt. Mean time, his Affairs at home went upside down; and his two Brothers had a wretched Time; where his first † Boutade was, to kick both their ‡ Wives one Morning out of Doors, and his own too, and, in their stead, gave Orders to pick up the first Three Strolers could be met with in the Streets. A while after, he nailed up the Cellar-door; and would not allow his Brothers a || Drop of Drink to their Victuals. Dining one Day at an Alderman's in the City, Peter observed him expatiating after the Manner of his Brethren, in the Praises of his Surloin of Beef. Beef, said the sage Magistrate, is the King of Meat; Beef comprehends in it the Quintessence of Partridge, and Quail, and Venison, and Pheasants, and Plant-pudding, and Custard. When Peter came home, he would needs take the Fancy of cooking up this Doctrine into Use, and apply the Precept in Default of a Surloin to his brown Loaf: Bread, says

* Neither doth his arrogant Way of requiring Men to kiss his Slipper escape Reflection. W. Wotton.

† This Word properly signifies a sudden Jerk, or Leap of an Horse, when you do not expect it.

‡ The Celibacy of the Romish Clergy is struck at in Peter's beating his own and Brother's Wives out of Doors. W. Wotton.

|| The Pope's refusing the Cup to the Laity, persuading them that the Blood is contained in the Bread, and that the Bread is the real and entire Body of Christ.

he, Dear Brothers, is the Staff of Life; in which Bread is contained, inclusive, the Quintessence of Beef, Mutton, Veal, Venison, Partridge, Plum-pudding, and Custard: And to render all complete, there is intermingled a due Quantity of Water, whose Crudities are also corrected by Yeast or Barm, through which Means it becomes a wholesome fermented Liquor, diffused through the Mass of the Bread. Upon the Strength of these Conclusions, next Day at Dinner was the brown Loaf served up in all the Formality of a City Feast. Come Brothers, said Peter, fall to, and spare not; here is excellent good Mutton*; or hold, now my Hand is in, I will help you. At which Word, in much Ceremony, with Fork and Knife, he carves out two good Slices of a Loaf, and presenteth each on a Plate to his Brothers. The elder of the two, not suddenly entering into Lord Peter's Conceit, began with very civil Language to examine the Mystery. My Lord, said he, I doubt with great Submission, there may be some Mistake. What, says Peter, you are pleasant; Come then, let us hear this Jest, your Head is so big with. None in the World, my Lord; but unless I am very much deceived, your Lordship was pleased, a while ago, to let fall a Word about Mutton, and I would be glad to see it with all my Heart, How! said Peter, appearing in great Surprise, I do not comprehend this at all.--- Upon which, the Younger interpoling, to set the Business right; My Lord, said he, my Brother I suppose is hungry, and longs for the Mutton your Lordship hath promised us to Dinner. Pray, said Peter, take me along with you, either you are both mad, or disposed to be merrier than I approve of: If You there, do not like your Piece, I will carve you another, although

F

I should

* Transubstantiation. Peter turns his Bread into Mutton, and, according to the popish Doctrine of Concomitants, his Wine too, which, in his Way, he calleth, Pauning his damned Crusts upon the Brothers for Mutton. W. Wotton.

I should take that to be the choice Bit of the whole Shoulder, What then, my Lord, replied the first, it seems this is a Shoulder of Mutton all this while. Pray Sir, says Peter, eat your Victuals, and leave off your Impertinence, if you please, for I am not disposed to relish it at present: But the other could not forbear being over-provoked at the affected Seriousness of Peter's Countenance. By G---, my Lord, said he, I can only say, that to my Eyes, and Fingers, and Teeth, and Nose, it seems to be nothing but a Crust of Bread. Upon which the second put in his Word: I never saw a Piece of Mutton in my Life, so nearly resembling a Slice from a Twelve-penny Loaf. Look ye, Gentlemen, crieth Peter in a Rage, to convince you what a couple of blind, positive, ignorant, wilful Puppies you are, I will use but this plain Argument; By G---, it is true, good, natural Mutton as any in Leaden-hall Market; and G--- confound you both eternally, if you offer to believe otherwise. Such a thundering Proof as this left no farther Room for Objection: The two Unbelievers began to gather and pocket up their Mistake as hastily as they could. Why truly, said the First, upon more mature Consideration-----A, says the other interrupting him, now I have thought better on the Thing, your Lordship seemeth to have a great Deal of Reason. Very well, said Peter, Here Boy, fill me a Beer-Glass of Claret. Here's to you both with all my Heart. The two Brethren much delighted to see him so readily appeared returned their most humble Thanks, and said, they would be glad to pledge his Lordship: That you shall, said Peter, I am not a Person to refuse you any Thing that is reasonable; Wine, moderately taken, is a Cordial; Here is a Glass apiece for you: It is true natural Juice from the Grape, none of your damned Vintners Brewings. Having spoke thus, he presented to each of them another large dry Crust, bidding them drink it off, and not be bashful, for it would do them no Hurt. The two Brothers, after having performed the usual Office in such delicate Conjunctures,

junctures, of staring a sufficient Period at Lord Peter, and each other; and finding how Matters were like to go, resolved not to enter on a new Dispute, but let him carry the Point as he pleased; for he was now got into one of his mad Fits, and to argue or expostulate further would only serve to render him a hundred times more untractable.

I HAVE chosen to relate this worthy Matter in all its Circumstances, because it gave a principal Occasion to that great and famous * Rupture, which happened about the same Time among these Brethren, and was never afterwards made up. But, of That, I shall treat at large in another Section.

HOWEVER, it is certain, that Lord Peter, even in his lucid Intervals, was very lowly given in his common Conversation, extreme wilful and positive, and would at any Time rather argue to the Death, than allow himself to be once in an Error. Besides, he had an abominable Faculty of telling huge palpable Lies upon all Occasions; and swearing, not only to the Truth, but cursing the whole Company to Hell, if they pretended to make the least Scruple of believing him. One Time, he swore, he had a † Cow at home, which gave as much Milk at a Meal, as would fill Three Thousand Churches; and, what was yet more extraordinary, would never turn sour. Another Time he was telling of an old † Sign-post that belonged to his Father, with Nails and Timber enough on it, to build Sixteen large Men of War. Talking one Day of Chinese Waggon, which were made so light as to sail over Mountains: Zz-As, said Peter,

F 2

where

* By this Rupture is meant the Reformation.

† The ridiculous multiplying of the Virgin Mary's Milk among the Papists, under the Allegory of a Cow, which gave as much Milk at a Meal as would fill three thousand Churches. W. Wotton.

† By this Sign-post is meant the Cross of our blessed Saviour.

where is the Wonder of that? By G---, I saw a * large House of Lime and Stone travel over Sea and Land (granting that it stopped sometimes to bait) above two thousand German Leagues. And that which was the good of it, he would swear desperately all the while, that he never told a Lye in his Life; and at every Word, By G---, Gentlemen, I tell you nothing but the Truth; and the D---I broil them eternally that will not believe me.

In short, Peter grew so scandalous, that all the Neighbourhood began in plain Words to say, he was no better than a Knave. And his two Brothers, long weary of his ill Usage, resolved at last to leave him; but first, they humbly desired a Copy of their Father's Will, which had now lain by neglected, Time out of Mind. Instead of granting this Request, he called them damned Sons of Whores, Rogues, Traytors, and the rest of the vile Names he could muster up. However, while he was abroad one Day upon his Projects, the two Youngsters watched their Opportunity, made shift to come at the Will, † and took a Copia vera, by which they presently saw how grossly they had been abused:
 Their Father having left them equal Heirs, and strictly commanded, that whatever they got should lie in common among them all. Pursuant to which, their next Enterprize was to break open the Cellar Door,

* The Chappel of Loretto. He falls here only upon the ridiculous Inventions of Popery: The Church of Rome intended by these Things, to gull silly, superstitious People, and rook them of their Money; that the World had been too long in Slavery, our Ancestors gloriously redeemed us from that Yoke. The Church of Rome therefore ought to be exposed, and he deserves well of Mankind that doth expose it. W. Wotton.

Ibid. The Chappel of Loretto, which travelled from the Holy Land to Italy.

† Translated the Scriptures into the vulgar Tongues.

Door, and get a little good * Drink to spirit and comfort their Hearts. In copying the Will, they had met another Precept against Whoring, Divorce, and separate Maintenance: Upon which, their next † Work was to discard their Concubines, and send for their Wives. Whilst all this was in Agitation, there enters a Solicitor from Neuigate, desiring Lord Peter would please to procure a Pardon for a Thief that was to be hanged To-morrow. But the two Brothers told him, he was a Coxcomb to seek Pardons from a Fellow, who deserved to be hanged much better than his Client; and discovered all the Method of that Imposture, in the same Form I delivered it a while ago, advising the Solicitor to put his Friend upon obtaining a ‡ Pardon from the King. In the midst of all this Clutter and Revolution, in comes Peter with a File of || Dragoons at his Heels; and gathering from all Hands what was in the Wind, He and his Gang, after several Millions of Scurrilities and Curtes, not very important here to repeat, by main Force, very fairly § kicks them both out of Doors, and would never let them come under his Roof from that Day to this.

* Administred the Cup to the Laity at the Communion.

† Allowed the Marriages of Priests.

‡ Directed Penitents not to trust to Pardons and Absolutions procured for Money, but sent them to implore the Mercy of God, from whence alone Remission is to be obtained.

|| By Peter's Dragoons, is meant the Civil Power which those Princes, who were bigotted to the Romish Superstition, employed against the Reformers.

§ The Pope shunts all who dissent from him out of the Church.

S E C T. V.

A DIGRESSION in the MODERN KIND.

WE, whom the World is pleased to honour with the Title of Modern Authors, should never have been able to compass our great Design of an everlasting Remembrance, and never-dying Fame, if our Endeavours had not been so highly serviceable to the general Good of Mankind. This, O Universe, is the adventurous Attempt of me thy Secretary;

----- *Quemvis perferre laborem
Suadet, & inducit noctes vigilare secenas.*

To this End, I have some time since, with a World of Pains and Art, dissected the Carcase of Human Nature, and read many useful Lectures upon the several Parts, both containing and contained; until at last it smelt so strong, I could preserve it no longer. Upon which, I have been at a great Expence to fit up all the Bones with exact Contexture, and in due Symmetry; so that I am ready to shew a very compleat Anatomy thereof to all curious Gentlemen and others. But not to digress farther in the midst of a Digression, as I have known some Authors inclose Digressions in one another, like a Nest of Boxes; I do affirm, that, having carefully cut up Human Nature, I have found a very strange, new, and important Discovery; That the publick Good of Mankind is performed by two Ways, Instruction, and Diversion. And I have farther proved in my said several Readings, (which, perhaps the World may one Day see, if I can prevail on any Friend to steal a Copy, or on certain Gentlemen of my Admirers to be very importunate) that, as Mankind is now disposed, he receiveth much greater Advantage by being Diverted than our ould sign ing ghly

Instructed;

D.

his, thy

h a e of up-ned;
t no ence
and very ntle-
the Auke a fully nge, ollick ays, rther perevail
Gen-nate) veth than Fed;

Instructed; his epidemical Diseases being Fasidifity, Amorphy, and Oscitation; whereas in the present universal Empire of Wit and Learning, there seemeth but little Matter left for Instruction. However, in Compliance with a Lesson of great Age and Authority, I have attempted carrying the Point in all its Heights; and accordingly, throughout this divine Treatise, have skillfully kneaded up both together with a Layer of Utile and a Layer of Dulce.

WHEN I consider how exceedingly our illustrious Moderns have eclipsed the weak glimmering Lights of the Antients, and turned them out of the Road of all fashionable Commerce, to a Degree, that our choice * Town Wits of most refined Accomplishments are in grave Dispute, whether there have been ever any Antients or no: In which Point we are like to receive wonderful Satisfaction from the most useful Labours and Lucubrations of that worthy Modern, Dr. Bently: I say, when I consider all this, I cannot but bewail, that no famous Modern hath ever yet attempted an universal System, in a small portable Volume, of all Things that are to be Known, or Believed, or Imagined, or Practised in Life. I am, however, forced to acknowledge, that such an Enterprize was thought on some time ago by a great Philosopher of † O. Brasile. The Method he proposed was by a certain curious Receipt, a Nosstrum, which, after his untimely Death, I found among his Papers; and do here

* The learned Person here meant by our Author hath been endeavouring to annihilate so many Antient Writers, that, until he is pleased to stop his Hand, it will be dangerous to affirm, whether there have been any Antients in the World.

† This is an imaginary Island, of Kin to that which is called the Painters Wives Island, placed in some unknown Part of the Ocean, merely at the Fancy of the Map-maker.

here, out of my great Affection to the modern Learned, present them with it, not doubting, it may one Day encourage some worthy Undertaker.

YOU take fair and correct Copies, well bound in Calfs-skin, and lettered at the Back, of all modern Bodies of Arts and Sciences whatsoever, and in what Language you please. These you distil in balneo Mariæ, infusing Quintessence of Poppy, Q. S. together with three Pints of Lethe, to be had from the Apothecaries. You cleanse away carefully the Sordes and Caput Mortuum, letting all that is volatile evaporate. You preserve only the first Running, which is again to be distilled seventeen times, till what remains will amount to about two Drams. This you keep in a Glass Vial Hermetically sealed, for one and twenty Days. Then you begin your Catholick Treatise, taking every Morning fasting, (first shaking the Vial) three Drops of this Elixir, snuffing it strongly up your Nose. It will dilate itself about the Brain (where there is any) in fourteen Minutes, and you immediately perceive in your Head an infinite Number of Abstracts, Summaries Compendiums, Extracts, Collections, Medulla's, Excerpta quædam's, Florilegia's, and the like, all disposed into great Order, and reducible upon Paper.

I must needs own, it was by the Assistance of this Arcanum, that I, although otherwise impar, have adventured upon so daring an Attempt; never achieved or undertaken before, but by a certain Author called Homer, in whom, although otherwise a Person not without some Abilities, and, for an Antient, of a tolerable Genius; I have discovered many gross Errors, which are not to be forgiven his very Ashes, if by chance any of them are left. For whereas, we are assured, he designed his Work for a * complete Body of all Knowledge Human, Divine, Political, and Mechanick; it is manifest,

* Homerus omnes res humanas Poematis complexus est. Xenoph. in conviv.

manifest, that he hath wholly neglected some, and been very imperfect in the rest. For first of all, as eminent a Cabbalist as his Disciples would represent him, his Account of the Opus magnum is extremely poor and deficient; he seemeth to have read but very superficially, either Sentivogus, Behmen, * Anthroposophia Theomagica. He is also quite mistaken about the Sphæra Pyroplastica, a Neglect not to be attoned for; and (if the Reader will admit so severe a Censure) Vix crederem Autorem hunc unquam audivisse ignis vocem. His Failings are not less prominent in several Parts of the Mechanicks. For having read his Writings with the utmost Application usual among modern Wits, I could never yet discover the least Direction about the Structure of that useful Instrument a Save-all. For want of which, if the Moderns had not lent their Assistance, we might yet have wandered in the Dark. But I have still behind a Fault more notorious to tax this author with; I mean, † his gross Ignorance in the Common Laws of this Realm, and in the Doctrine as well as Discipline of the Church of England. A Defect indeed, for which both he and all the Antients stand most justly censured by my worthy and ingenious Friend Mr. W--t--n, Bachelor of Divinity, in his incomparable Treatise of Antient and Modern Learning; a Book never to be sufficiently valued, whether we consider the happy Turns and Flowings of the Author's Wit, the great Usefulness of his sublime

* A Treatise written about fifty Years ago, by a Welsh Gentleman of Cambridge, his Name, as I remember was Vaughan, as appears by the Answer to it, writ by the learned Dr. Henry Moor; it is a Piece of the most unintelligible Fusliar, that, perhaps, was ever published in any Language.

† Mr. W--t--n (in whom our Author never gives any Quarter) in his Comparison of antient and modern Learning, numbers Divinity, Law, &c. among those Parts of Knowledge wherein we excel the Antients.

sublime Discoveries upon the Subject of Flies and Spittle, or the laborious Eloquence of his Stile. And I cannot forbear doing that Author the Justice of my publick Acknowledgments, for the great Helps and Liftings I had out of his incomparable Piece, while I was penning this Treatise.

BUT, besides these Omissions in Homer already mentioned, the curious Reader will also observe several Defects in that Author's Writings, for which he is not altogether so accountable. For whereas every Branch of Knowledge hath received such wonderful Acquirements since his Age, especially within these last three Years, or thereabouts; it is almost impossible, he could be so very perfect in modern Discoveries, as his Advocates pretend. We freely acknowledge Him to be the Inventor of the Compass, of Gunpowder, and the Circulation of the Blood: But I challenge any of his Admirers to shew me in all his Writings a compleat Account of the Spleen: Doth he not also leave us wholly to seek in the Art of Political Wagering? What can be more defective and unsatisfactory than his long Dissertation upon Tea? And as to his Method of Salivation without Mercury, so much celebrated of late, it is, to my own Knowledge and Experience, a Thing very little to be relied on.

It was to supply such momentous Defects, that I have been prevailed on, after long Sollicitation, to take Pen in Hand; and I dare venture to promise, the Judicious Reader shall find nothing neglected here, that can be of Use upon any Emergency of Life. I am confident to have included and exhausted all that Human Imagination can Rise or Fall to. Particularly, I recommend to the Perusal of the Learned certain Discoveries that are wholly untouched by others, whereof I shall only mention, among a great many more, My new Help for Smatterers, or the Art of being Deep-learned and Shallow-read. A curious Invention about Mouse-traps. An Universal Rule of Reason, or, Every Man his own Carver; together with a most useful Engine for catching of Owls. All which the judicious Reader will find largely treated on, in the several Parts of this Discourse.

his

I HOLD myself obliged to give as much Light as is possible into the Beauties and Excellencies of what I am writing, because it is become the Fashion and Humour most applauded among the first Authors of this Polite and Learned Age, when they would correct the ill Nature of Critical, or inform the Ignorance of Courteous Readers. Besides, there have been several famous Pieces lately published both in Verse and Prose; wherein, if the Writers had not been pleased, out of their great Humanity and Affection to the Publick, to give us a nice Detail of the Sublime and the Admirable they contain; it is a thousand to one, whether we should ever have discovered one Grain of either. For my own particular, I cannot deny, that whatever I have said upon this Occasion had been more proper in a Preface, and more agreeable to the Mode, which usually directs it thither. But I here think fit to lay hold on that great and honourable Privilege of being the Last Writer; I claim an absolute Authority in Right, as the fresh-est Modern, which giveth me a despotick Power over all Authors before me. In the Strength of which Title, I do utterly disapprove and declare against that pernicious Custom of making the Preface a Bill of Fare to the Book. For I have always looked upon it as a high Point of Indiscretion in Monster-mongers and other Retailers of strange Sights, to hang out a fair large Picture over the Door, drawn after the Life, with a most eloquent Description underneath: This hath saved me many a Three-pence, for my Curiosity was fully satisfied, and I never offered to go in, although often invited by the urging and attending Orator, with his last moving and standing Piece of Rhetorick; Sir, Upon my Word, we are just going to begin. Such is exactly the the Fate, at this Time, of Prefaces, Epistles, Advertisements, Introductions, Prologues, Apparatuses, To-the-Readers. This Expedient was admirable at first: Our great Dryden hath long carried it as far as it would go, and with incredible Success. He hath often said to me in Confidence, that the World would have never suspected him to be so great a Poet, if he had not assured them so frequently in his Prefaces, that it was impossible they could either doubt or forget it. Perhaps it may be so; However, I much fear, his Instructions have edified out of their Place, and taught Men to grow wiser in certain Points, where he never intended they should; for, it is lamentable to behold, with what a lazy Scorn, many of the yawning Readers in our Age do now a-days twirl over Forty or Fifty Pages of Preface and Dedication, (which is the usual modern Stint) as if it were so much Latin. Although it must be also allowed on the other hand, that a very considerable Number is known to proceed Criticks and Wits, by reading nothing else. Into which Two Factions, I think, all present Readers may justly be divided. Now, for myself, I profess to be of the former Sort; and therefore having the modern Inclination to expatiate upon the Beauty of my own Productions, and display the bright Parts of my Discourse: I thought best to do it in the Body of the Work, where, as it now lies, it makes a very considerable Addition to the Bulk of the Volume, a Circumstance by no means to be neglected by a polish'd Writer.

HAVING thus paid my due Deference and Acknowledgment to an established Custom of our newest Authors, by a long and unpleasant Prologue, and an unsuccessful Censure on itself; by forcing into the Light, with modesty and Dexterity, my own Excellences, and my own Defaults, with great Justice to myself and consider to them; I now happily return me to the infinite Satisfaction both of the Reader and the Author.

S E C T.

S E C T. VI.

A T A L E of a T U B.

WE left Lord Peter in open Rupture with his two Brethren, both for ever discarded from his House, and resigned to the wide World, with little or nothing to trust to. Which are Circumstances that render them proper Subjects for the Charity of a Writer's Pen to work on; Scenes of Misery ever affording the fairest Harvest for great Adventures. And in this the World may perceive the Difference between the Integrity of a generous Author, and that of a common Friend. The latter is observed to adhere close in Prosperity, but, on the Decline of Fortune, to drop suddenly off. Whereas, the generous Author, just on the contrary, findeth his Hero on the Dunghill, and from thence by gradual Steps raiseth him to a Throne, and then immediately withdraws, expecting not so much as Thanks for his Pains: In Imitation of which Example, I have placed Lord Peter in a noble House, given him a Title to wear, and Money to spend. There I shall leave him for some Time; returning where common Charity directeth me, to the Assistance of his two Brothers, at their lowest Ebb. However, I shall by no means forget my Character of an Historian, to follow the Truth, Step by Step, whatever happens, or where-ever it may lead me.

THE two Exiles, so nearly united in Fortune and Interest, took a Lodging together; where, at their first Leisure, they began to reflect on the numberless Misfortunes and Vexations of their Life past, and could not tell, on the sudden, to what Failure in their Conduct they ought to impute them: When, after some Recollection, they called to mind the Copy of ~~their~~ their Father's Will, which they had so happily recovered. This was immediately produced, and a firm Resolution taken between them to alter whatever was already amiss, and reduce all their future Measures to the strictest Obedience prescribed therein. The main Body of the Will, (as the Reader cannot easily have forgot) consisted in certain admirable Rules about the wearing of their Coats; in the Perusal whereof, the two Brothers at every Period duly comparing the Doctrine with the Practice, there was never seen a wider Difference between two Things; horrible downright Transgressions of every Point. Upon which, they both resolved, without further Delay, to fall immediately upon reducing the Whole, exactly after their Father's Model.

BUT, here it is good to stop the hasty Reader, ever impatient to see the End of an Adventure, before We Writers can duly prepare him for it. I am to record, that these two Brothers began to be distinguished at this Time by certain Names. One of them desired to be called * MARTIN, and the other took the Appellation of † JACK. These two had lived in much Friendship and Agreement under the Tyranny of their Brother Peter, as it is the Talent of Fellow-furriers to do: Men in Misfortune, being like Men in the dark, to whom all Colours are the same. But when they came forward into the World, and began to display themselves to each other, and to the Light, their Complexions appeared extremely different; which the present Posture of their Affairs gave them sudden Opportunity to discover.

BUT, here the severe Reader may justly tax me as a Writer of short Memory, a Deficiency to which a true Modern cannot but of Necessity be a little subject: Because Memory, being an Employment of the Mind upon Things past, is a Faculty, for which the Learned, in our Illustrious Age, have no

* Martin Luther.

† John Calvin.

no Manner of Occasion; who deal entirely with Invention, and strike all Things out of themselves, or, at least, by Collision, from each other: Upon which Account we think it highly Reasonable to produce our great Forgetfulness, as an Argument unanswerable for our great Wit. I ought, in Method, to have informed the Reader, about fifty Pages ago, of a Fancy Lord Peter took, and infused into his Brothers, to wear on their Coats whatever Trimmings came up in Fashion; never pulling off any, as they went out of the Mode, but keeping on all together; which amounted in Time to a Medley, the most Antick you can possibly conceive; and this to a Degree, that, upon the Time of their falling out, there was hardly a Thread of the Original Coat to be seen, but an infinite Quantity of Lace, and Ribbons, and Fringe, and Embroidery, and Points; (I mean, only these * tagged with Silver, for the rest fell off.) Now, this material Circumstance, having been forgot in due Place, as good Fortune hath ordered, comes in very properly here, when the Two Brothers are just going to reform their Vestures into the primitive State, prescribed by their Father's Will.

THEY both unanimously entered upon this great Work, looking sometimes on their Coats, and sometimes on the Will. Martin laid the first Hand; at one Twitch brought off a large Handful of Points, and with a second Pull stripped away Ten Dozen Yards of Fringe. But when he had gone thus far, he demurred a while: He knew very well there yet remained a great deal more to be done; however, the first Heat being over, his Violence began to cool, and he resolved to proceed more moderately in the rest of the Work; having already

G 2

* Points tagged with Silver, are those Distinctions that promote the Greatness and Wealth of the Church, which have been therefore woven deep in the Body of Papery.

ready very narrowly escaped a swinging Rent in pulling off the Points, which being tagged with Silver, (as we observed before) the judicious Workman had, with much Sagacity, double sown, to preserve them from falling. Resolving therefore to rid his Coat of a huge Quantity of Gold Lace, he picked up the Stitches with much Caution, and diligently gleaned out all the loose Threads as he went, which proved to be a Work of Time. Then he fell about the Embroidered Indian Figures of Men, Women, and Children; against which, as you have heard in its due Place, their Father's Testament was extremely exact and severe: These, with much Dexterity and Application, were, after a while, quite eradicated, or utterly defaced. For the rest, where he observed the Embroidery to be worked so close, as not to be got away without damaging the Cloth, or where it served to hide or strengthen any Flaw in the Body of the Coat, contracted by the perpetual Tampering of Workmen upon it; he concluded the wisest Course was to let it remain, resolving in no Case whatsoever, that the Substance of the Stuff should suffer Injury; which he thought the best Method for serving the true Intent and Meaning of his Father's Will. And this is the nearest Account I have been able to collect of Martin's Proceedings upon this great Revolution.

BUT his Brother Jack, whose Adventures will be so extraordinary, as to furnish a great Part in the Remainder of this Discourse; entered upon the Matter with other Thoughts, and a quite different Spirit. For the Memory of Lord Peter's Injuries produced a Degree of Hatred and Spight, which had a much greater Share of inciting Him, than any Regards after his Father's Commands, since these appeared, at best, only secondary and subservient to the other. However for this Medley of Humour he made a shift to find a very plausible Name, honouring it with the Title of Zeal; which is,

is, perhaps, the most significant Word that hath been ever yet produced in any Language; as, I think, I have fully proved in my excellent Analytical Discourse upon that Subject; wherein I have deduced a Histori-theo-physi-logical Account of Zeal, shewing how it first proceeded from a Notion into a Word, and from thence, in a hot Summer, ripened into a tangible Substance. This Work, containing Three large Volumes in Folio, I design very shortly to publish by the Modern Way of Subscription, not doubting but the Nobility and Gentry of the Land will give me all possible Encouragement, having already had such a Taste of what I am able to perform.

I RECORD therefore, that Brother Jack, brimful of this miraculous Compound, reflecting with Indignation upon PETER's Tyranny, and farther provoked by the Despondency of Martin; prefaced his Resolutions to this Purpose. What, said he, A Rogue that locked up his Drink, turned away our Wives, cheated us of our Fortunes; pawned his damned Crusts upon us for Mutton; and at last kicked us out of Doors: must we be in his Fashions with a Pox? A Rascal, besides, that all the Street cries out against. Having thus kindled and enflamed himself as high as possible, and, by Consequence, in a delicate Temper for beginning a Reformation, he set about the Work immediately, and in three Minutes made more Dispatch than Martin had done in as many Hours. For, (courteous Reader) you are given to understand, that Zeal is never so highly obliged, as when you set it a Tearing: And Jack, who doated on that Quality in himself, allowed it at this Time its full Swing. Thus it happened, that stripping down a Parcel of Gold Lace, a little too hastily, he rent the main Body of his Coat from Top to Bottom; and whereas his Talent was not of the happiest in taking up a Stitch, he knew no better Way than to darn it again with Fustian and a Shaver. But the Matter was yet infinitely worse (I record it with Tears) when he proceeded to the Embroidery: For, being clumsy by Nature, and of Temper impatient, withal, beholding Millions of Stitches, that required the nicest Hand, and sedatest Constitution, to extricate; in a great Rage, he tore off the whole Piece, Cloth and all, and flung it into the Kennel, and furiously thus continuing his Career: Ah, good Brother Martin, said he, do as I do, for the Love of God; strip, tear, pull, rent, flay off all, that we may appear as unlike that Rogue Peter, as it is possible: I would not for an Hundred Pounds carry the least Mark about me, that might give Occasion to the Neighbours of suspecting I was related to such a Rascal. But Martin, who at this Time happened to be extremely flegmatick and sedate, begged his Brother of all Love not to damage his Coat by any Means; for he never would get such another. Desired him to consider, that it was not their Business to form their Actions by any Reflection upon Peter, but by observing the Rules prescribed in their Father's Will. That he should remember, Peter was still their Brother, whatever Faults or Injuries he had committed; and therefore they should by all means avoid such a Thought, as that of taking Measures for Good and Evil, from no other Rule than of Opposition to him. That it was true, the Testament of their good Father was very exact in what related to the wearing of their Coats; yet was it no less penal and strict in prescribing Agreement, and Friendship, and Affection between them. And therefore, if straining a Point were at all dispensable, it would certainly be so, rather to the Advance of Unity, than Increase of Contradiction.

MARTIN had still proceeded as gravely as he began; and, doubtless, would have delivered an admirable Lecture of Morality, which might have exceedingly contributed to my Reader's Repose, both of Body and Mind: (The true ultimate End of Ethicks;) but Jack was already gone a Flight shot beyond his Patience. And as in Scholastick Disputes

putes nothing serveth to rouse the Spleen of him that opposeth, so much as a Kind of Pedantick affected Calmness in the Respondent; Disputants being for the most Part like unequal Scales, where the Gravity of one Side advances the Lightness of the other, and causeth it to fly up and kick the Beam.
 So it happened here, that the Weight of Martin's Arguments exalted Jack's Levity, and made him fly out and spurn against his Brother's Moderation.
 In short, Martin's Patience put Jack in a Rage; but that which most afflicted him was, to observe his Brother's Coat so well reduced into the State of Innocence; while his own was either wholly rent to his Shirt; or those Places, which had escaped his cruel Clutches, were still in Peter's Livery. So that he looked like a drunken Beau, half rised by Bullies; or like a fresh Tenant of Newgate, when he hath refused the Payment of Garnish; or like a discovered Shoplifter left to the Mercy of Exchange- women; or like a Bawd, in her old Velvet-Petticoat, resigned into the secular Hands of the Mobile. Like any, or like all of these, a Medley of Rags, and Lace, and Rents, and Fringes, unfortunate Jack did now appear. He would have been extremely glad to see his Coat in the Condition of Martin's; but infinitely gladder to find that of Martin's in the same Predicament with his. However, since neither of these was likely to come to pass, he thought fit to lend the whole Business another Turn, and to dress up Necessity into a Virtue.
 Therefore, after as many of the Fox's Arguments, as he could muster up, for bringing Martin to Rea- son, as he called; or, as he meant it, into his own ragged bobtailed Condition; and observing he said all to little Purpose; what, alas! was left for the forlorn Jack to do, but, after a Million of Scurrili-ties against his Brother, to run mad with Spleen, and Spight, and Contradiction. To be short, here began a mortal Breach between these two. Jack went immediately to New Lodgings, and in a few Days

Days it was for certain reported, that he had run out of his Wits. In a short Time after, he appeared abroad, and confirmed the Report, by falling into the oddest Whimies that ever a sick Brain conceived.

AND now the little Boys in the Streets began to salute him with several Names. Sometimes they would call him, * Jack the ball; sometimes, † Jack with a Lamborn; sometimes, ‡ Dutch Jack; sometimes, || French Hugh; sometimes, § Tom the Beggar; and sometimes, ¶ Knocking Jack of the North. And it was under one, or some, or all of these Appellations (which I leave the learned Reader to determine) that he hath given Rise to the most Illustrious and Epidemick Sect of Acolists, who, with honourable Commemoration, do still acknowledge the Renowned JACK for their Author and Founder. Of whose Original, as well as Principles, I am now advancing to gratify the World with a very particular Account.

---- Mellao contingens cuncta Lepore.

* That is Calvin, from Calvus, bald.

† All those who pretend to Inward Light.

‡ Jack of Leyden, who gave Rise to the Anabaptists.

|| The Hugonots.

§ The Gueneses, by which Name some Protestants in Flanders were called.

¶ John Knox, the Reformer of Scotland.

S E C T. VII.

A DIGRESSION in Praise of DIGRESSIONS.

I HAVE sometimes heard of an Iliad in a Nut-shell; but it hath been my Fortune to have much oftener seen a Nut-shell in an Iliad. There is no doubt, that Human Life hath received most wonderful Advantages from both; but to which of the two the World is chiefly indebted, I shall leave among the curious, as a Problem worthy of their utmost Enquiry. For the Invention of the latter, I think; the Commonwealth of Learning is chiefly obliged to the great Modern Improvement of Digressions: The late Refinements in Knowledge, running parallel to those of Diet in our Nation, which among Men of a judicious Taste, are drest up in various Compounds, consisting in Soups and Ollios, *Fricassee*s and Ragoufts.

It is true, there is a Sort of morose, detracting, ill-bred People, who pretend utterly to disrelish these polite Innovations; and as to the Similitude from Dyet, they allow the Parallel, but are so bold as to pronounce the Example itself a Corruption and Degeneracy of Taste. They tell us that the Fashion of jumbling fifty Things together in a Dish was at first introduced in Compliance to a depraved and debauched Appetite, as well as to a crazy Constitution; and to see a Man hunting through an Ollio, after the Head and Brains of a Goose, a Widgeon, or a Wood-cock, is a Sign he wanteth a Stomach and Digestion for more substantial Victuals. Farther, they affirm, that Digressions in a Book are like Foreign Troops in a State, which argue the Nation to want a Heart and Hands of its own, and often either subdue the Natives, or drive them into the most unfruitful Corners.

BUT, after all that can be objected by these suspicious Censors, it is manifest, the Society of Writers

Writers would quickly be reduced to a very inconsiderable Number, if Men were put upon making Books, with the fatal Confinement of delivering nothing beyond what is to the Purpose. It is acknowledged, that were the Case the same among Us, as with the Greeks and Romans, when Learning was in its Cradle, to be reared, and fed, and cloathed by Invention; it would be an easy Task to fill up Volumes upon particular Occasions, without farther expatiating from the Subject, than by moderate Excursions helping to advance or clear the main Design. But with Knowledge, it hath fared as with a numerous Army, encamped in a fruitful Country; which for a few Days maintaineth itself by the Product of the Soil it is on; until, Provisions being spent, they send to forage many a Mile, among Friends or Enemies it matters not. Mean while, the neighbouring Fields, trampled and beaten down, become barren and dry, affording no Sustenance but Clouds of Dust.

THE whole Course of Things being thus entirely changed between Us and the Antients and the Moderns wisely sensible of it, we of this Age have discovered a shorter, and more prudent Method, to become Scholars and Wits, without the Fatigue of Reading or of Thinking. The most accomplished Way of using Books at present is twofold: Either first, to serve them as some Men do Lords, learn their Titles exactly, and then brag of their Acquaintance: Or, secondly, which is indeed the choicer, the profounder, and politer Method, to get a thorough Insight into the Index, by which the whole Book is governed and turned, like Fishes by the Tail. For, to enter the Palace of Learning at the great Gate requireth an Expence of Time and Forms; therefore Men of much Haste and little Ceremony are content to get in by the Back-door. For the Arts are all in a flying March, and therefore more easily subdued by attacking them in the Rear. Thus Physicians discover the State of the whole Body, by consulting only what cometh from behind. Thus Men catch Knowledge by throwing their Wit on the Posteriors of a Book, as Boys do Sparrows with flinging Salt upon their Tails. Thus Human Life is best understood by the wise Man's Rule of Regarding the End. Thus are the Sciences found like Hercules's Oxen, by tracing them backwards. Thus are old Sciences unravelled like old Stockings, by beginning at the Foot.

BESIDES all this, the Army of the Sciences hath been of late, with a World of Martial Discipline, drawn into its close Order; so that a View, or a Muster may be taken of it with Abundance of Expedition. For this great Blessing we are wholly indebted to Systems and Abstracts, in which the modern Fathers of Learning, like prudent Usurers, spent their Sweat for the Ease of us their Children. For Labour is the Seed of Idleness, and it is the peculiar Happiness of our Noble Age to gather the Fruit.

Now the Method of growing Wise, Learned, and sublime, having become so regular an Affair, and so established in all its Forms; the Numbers of Writers must needs have increased accordingly, and to a Pitch that hath made it of absolute Necessity for them to interfere continually with each other. Besides, it is reckoned, that there is not, at this present, a sufficient Quantity of new Matter left in Nature, to furnish and adorn any one particular Subject to the Extent of a Volume. This I am told by a very skilful Computer, who hath given a full Demonstration of it from Rules of Arithmetick.

THIS, perhaps, may be objected against, by those who maintain the Infinity of Matter, and, therefore, will not allow that any Species of it can be exhausted. For Answer to which, let us examine the noblest Branch of modern Wit or Invention, planted and cultivated by the present Age,
and,

and which, of all others, hath born the most, and the fairest Fruit. For although some Remains of it were left us by the Antients, yet have not any of those, as I remember, been translated or compiled into Systems for modern Use. Therefore We may affirm, to our own Honour, that it hath, in some sort, been both invented, and brought to a Perfection by the same Hands. What I mean is, that highly celebrated Talent among the modern Wits, of deducing Similitudes, Allusions, and Applications, very Surprizing, Agreeable, and Apposite, from the Pudenda of either Sex, together with their proper Uses. And truly, having observed how little Invention beareth any Vogue, besides what is derived into these Channels, I have sometimes had a Thought, that the happy Genius of our Age and Country was prophetically held forth by that antient * typical Description

* Ctesia fragm. of the Indian Pygmies; whose Stature apud Photium. did not exceed above two Foot; Sed quorum pudenda crassa, & ad talos usque

pertingentia. Now, I have been very curious to inspect the late Productions, wherein the Beauties of this Kind have most prominently appeared. And although this Vein hath bled so freely, and all Endeavours have been used in the Power of Human Breath, to dilate, extend, and keep † Herodot. L. 4. it open: Like the Scythians † who had a Custom, and an Instrument, to blow up the Privities of their Mares, that they might yield the more Milk: Yet I am under an Apprehension, it is near growing dry, and past all Recovery: And that either some new Fonds of Wit should, if possible, be provided, or else that we must even be content with Repetition here, as well as upon all other Occasions.

THIS will stand as an uncontestable Argument, that our modern Wits are not to reckon upon the Infinity of Matter for a constant Supply. What remains therefore, but that our last Recourse must be had to large Indexes, and little Compendiums; Quotations must be plentifully gathered, and booked in Alphabet: To this End, although Authors need be little consulted, yet Criticks, and Commentators, and Lexicons carefully must. But above all, those judicious Collectors of bright Parts, and Flowers, and Observances, are to be nicely dweilt on; by some called the Sieves and Boulters of Learning; although it is left undetermined, whether they deait in Pearls or Meal; and consequently, whether we are more to value that which passed through, or what staid behind.

By these Methods, in a few Weeks, there starteth up many a Writer, capable of managing the profoundest, and most universal Subjects. For, what although his Head be empty, provided his Common-place-Book be full: And, if you will hate him but the Circumstances of Method, and Style, and Grammar, and Ornament, allow him but the common Privilege of transferring from others, and digressing from himself, as often as he shall see Occasion: He will desire to make Ingressions towards fitting up a Treatise, that shall make a very comely Figure on a Booksellers shelf, there to be preserved neat and clean, for a long Eternity, adorned with the Heraldry of its Title, nicely inscribed on a Label; never to be thumbed or galled by Students, nor bound to ever be the Chains of Drunkenness in a Library: But, when the Fates of Time is come, shall supply unto the Trial of Purgatory, in an eternal Fire.

Without these Allowances, how is it possible, we modest Wits should ever have an Opportunity to introduce our Collections listed under so many Thousand Heads of a different Nature? For want of which the learned World would be deprived of infinite Delight, as well as Instruction, and we ourselves buried beyond Redress in an inglorious and undistinguished Oblivion.

FROM such Elements as these, I am alive to behold the Day, wherein the Corporation of Authors can outvie all its Brethren in the Guild. A Happiness derived to us, with a great many others, from our Scythian Ancestors; among whom the Number of Pens was so infinite, that the

* Heradot.

L. 4.

* Grecian Eloquence had no other Way of expressing it, than by saying, That in the Regions, far to the North, it was hardly possible for a Man to travel, the very Air was so replete with Feathers.

THE Necessity of this Digression will easily excuse the Length; and I have chosen for it as proper a Place as I could readily find. If the judicious Reader can assign a fitter, I do here empower him to remove it into any other Corner he pleaseth. And so I return with great Alacrity to pursue a more important Concern.

S E C T. VIII.

A T A L E of a T U B.

THE Learned * Æolists maintain the Original Cause of all Things to be Wind, from which Principle this whole Universe was at first produced, and into which it must at last be resolved; that the same Breath which had kindled, and blew up the Flame of Nature, should one Day blow it out.

Quod procul a nobis fleat Fortuna gubernans.

THIS is what the Adepti understand by their Anima Mundi; that is to say, the Spirit, or Breath, or Wind of the World; For examine the whole System by the Particulars of Nature, and you will find it not to be disputed For, whether you please to call the Forma informans of Man, by the Name of Spiritus, Aërius, Afflatus, or Anima; what are all these but several Appellations for Wind? which is the ruling Element in every Compound, and into which they all resolve upon their Corruption. Farther, what is Life itself, but, as it is commonly called, the Breath of our Nostrils? Whence it is very justly observed by Naturalists, that Wind still continues of great Emolument in certain Mysteries not to be named, giving Occasion for those happy Epithets of Turgidus, and Inflatus, applied either to the Emittent, or Recipient Organs.

By what I have gathered out of antient Records, I find the Compass of their Doctrine took in two and thirty Points, wherein it would be tedious to be very particular. However, a few of their most important Precepts, deducible from it, are by no means to be omitted; among which the following Maxim was of much Weight; that since Wind had the Master-share, as well as Occasion in every Compound, by Consequence those Beings must be of chief Excellence, wherein that Primum appears most prominently to abound; and, therefore, Man is in highest Perfection of all created Things, as having, by the great Bounty of Philosophers, been endued with three distinct Animas or Winds, to which the Sage Æolists, with much Liberality, have added a fourth of equal Necessity, as well as Ornament with the other three; by this quartum Principium, taking in our four Corners of the World; which gave Occasion to that renowned Cabbalist, * Bumbasius, of placing the Body of Man, in due Position to the four Cardinal Points.

* All Pretenders to Inspiration whatsoever.

In Consequence of this, their next Principle was, that Man brings with him into the World a peculiar Portion or Grain of Wind, which may be called a Quinta essentia, extracted from the other four. This Quintessence is of a Catholick Use upon all Emergencies of Life; is improveable into all Arts and Sciences, and may be wonderfully refined, as well as enlarged by certain Methods in Education. This, when blown up to its Perfection, ought not to be covetously hoarded up, stifled, or hid under a Bushel, but freely communicated to Mankind. Upon these Reasons, and others of equal Weight, the wise Æolists affirm the Gift of BELCHING to be the noblest Act of a Rational Creature. To cultivate which Art, and render it more serviceable to Mankind, they made use of several Methods. At certain Seasons of the Year, you might behold the Priests amongst them in vast Numbers, with their † Mouths gaping wide against a Storm. At other Times were to be seen several Hundreds linked

* This is one of the Names of Paracelsus; He was called Christophorus, Theophrastus, Paracelsus, Bumbasius.

† This is meant of those seditious Preachers, who blow up the Seeds of Rebellion, &c.

linked together in a circular Chain, with every Man a Pair of Bellows applied to his Neighbour's Breech, by which they blew up each other to the Shape and Size of a Tun; and for that Reason, with great Propriety of Speech, did usually call their Bodies their Vessels. When, by these and the like Performances, they were grown sufficiently replete, they would immediately depart, and disem-bogue for the Publick Good a plentiful Share of their Acquirements into their Disciples Chaps. For we must here observe, that all Learning was esteemed among them to be compounded from the same Principle. Because, First, it is generally affirmed, or confessed, that Learning puffeth Men up: And secondly, they proved it by the following Syllogism, Words are but Wind; and Learning is nothing but Words; Ergo, Learning is nothing but Wind. For this Reason, the Philosophers among them did, in their Schools, deliver to their Pupils all their Doctrines and Opinions by Eruclation, wherein they had acquired a wonderful Eloquence, and of incredible Variety. But the great Characteristick, by which their chief Sages were best distinguished, was a certain Position of Countenance, which gave undoubted Intelligence to what Degree or Proportion, the Spirit agitated the inward Mass. For, after certain Gripings, the Wind and Vapours issuing forth, having first, by their Turbulence and Convulsions within, caused an Earthquake in Man's little World; distorted the Mouth, bloated the Cheeks, and gave the Eyes a terrible kind of Relievo. At which Junctures, all their Belches were received for Sacred, the sourer the better; and swallowed with infinite Consolation by their meager Devotees. And to render these yet more complete, because the Breath of Man's Life is in his Nostrils, therefore, the choicest, most edifying, and most enlivening Belches were very wisely conveyed through that Vehicle, to give them a Tincture as they passed.

THEIR Gods were the four Winds, whom they worshipped, as the Spirits that pervade and enliven the Universe, and as those from whom alone all Inspiration can properly be said to proceed. However, the Chief of these, to whom they performed the Adoration of Latria, was the Almighty North; an ancient Deity, whom the Inhabitants of Megaleopolis in Greece, had likewise
 * Pausan. in highest Reverence. * Omnium De-
 L. 8. orum Eoræam maxime celebrant. This

God, although endued with Ubiquity, was yet supposed by the profounder Æolists to possess one peculiar Habitation, or (to speak in Form) a Cælum Empyreum, wherein he was more intimately present. This was situated in a certain Region, well known to the Ancient Celts, by them called, Exotica, (Scythia) or the Land of Darkness. And although many Controversies have arisen upon that Matter; yet so much is undisputed, that from a Region of the like Denomination the most refined Æolists have borrowed their Original; from whence, in every Age, the zealous among their Priesthood, have brought over their choicest Inspirations, fetching it with their own Hands, from the Fountain Head, in certain Bladders, and discharging it among the Sectaries in all Nations, who did, and do, and ever will, daily Gasp and Pant after it.

Now, their Mysteries and Rites were performed in this Manner. It is well known among the Learned, that the Virtuosos of former Ages had a Contrivance for carrying and preserving Winds in Casks or Barrels, which was of great Assistance upon long Sea Voyages; and the Loss of so useful an Art at present is very much to be lamented, although I know not how, with great Negligence omitted by † Pancivollus. It was an Invention ascribed ascribed to Æolus himself, from whom this Sect is denominated, and who, in Honour of their Founder's Memory, have to this Day preserved great Numbers of those Barrels, whereof they fix one in each of their Temples, first beating out the Top; into this Barrel, upon Solemn Days, the Priest enters; where, having before duly prepared himself by the Methods already described, a secret Funnel is also conveyed from his Posteriors, to the Bottom of the Barrel, which admits new Supplies of Inspiration from a Northern Chink or Crany. Whereupon, you behold him swell immediately to the Shape and Size of his Vessel. In this Posture he disembogues whole Tempests upon his Auditory, as the Spirit from beneath gives him Utterance; which, issuing ex adytis, and penetralibus, is not performed without much Pain and Gripings. And the Wind breaking forth * deals with his Face, as it doth with that of the Sea; first blackning, then swirling, and, at last, bursting it into a Foam. It is in this Guise, the Sacred Æolist delivereth his oracular Belches to his panting Disciples: Of whom some are greedily gaping after the sanctified Breatth; others are all the while hymning out the Praises of the Winds; and gently wafted to and fro by their own Humming, do thus represent the soft Breezes of their Deities appeased.

* An Author who writ De Artibus Perditis, &c. of Arts lost, and of Arts invented.

It is from this Custom of the Priests, that some Authors maintain these Æolists to have been very antient in the World. Because, the Delivery of their Mysteries, which I have just now mentioned, appeareth exactly the same with that of other antient Oracles, whose Inspirations were owing to certain subterraneous Effluvioms of Wind, delivered with the same Pain to the Priest, and much about the same Influence on the People. It is true indeed, that these were frequently managed and directed by by Female Officers, whose Organs were understood to be better disposed for the Admission of those Oracular Gists, as entering and passing up through a Receptacle of greater Capacity, and causing also a Pruriency by the Way, such as, with due Management, hath been refined from Carnal into a Spiritual Extasy. And to strengthen this profound Conjecture, it is farther insisted, that this Custom of * Female Priests is kept up still in certain refined Colleges of our modern Æolijis, who are agreed to receive their Inspiration, derived through the Receptacle aforesaid, like their Ancestors, the Sibyls.

* This is an exact Description of the Changes made in the Face by Enthusiastick Preachers.

AND, whereas the Mind of Man, when he gives the Spur and Bridle to his Thoughts, doth never stop, but naturally sallies out into both Extreams of High and Low, of Good and Evil; His first Flight of Fancy commonly transports him to Ideas of what is most perfect, finished, and exalted; until having soared out of his own Reach and Sight, not well perceiving how near the Frontiers of Height and Depth border upon each other; with the same Course and Wing, he falleth down plum into the lowest Bottom of Things; like one who travels from the East into the West, or like a straight Line drawn by its own Length into a Circle. Whether, a Tincture of Malice in our Natures maketh us fond of furnishing every bright Idea with its Reverse; Or, whether Reason, reflecting upon the Sum of Things, can, like the Sun, serve only to enlighten one half of the Globe, leaving the other half, by Necessity, under Shade and Darkness; Or, whether Fancy, flying up to the Imagination of what is Highest and Best, becometh over-short, and spent, and weary, and suddenly falls, like a dead Bird of Paradise, to the Ground; Or, whether after all these metaphysical Conjectures,

I have

* Quakers, who suffer their Women to preach and pray.

I have not entirely missed the true Reason: The Proposition however, which hath stood me in so much Circumstance, is altogether true; That, as the most uncivilized Parts of Mankind have, some way or other, climbed up into the Conception of a God, or Supreme Power, so they have seldom forgot to provide their Fears with certain ghastly Notions, which, instead of better, have served them pretty tolerably for a Devil. And this Proceeding seemeth to be natural enough; for it is with Men, whose Imaginations are lifted up very high, as with those, whose Bodies are so; that, as they are delighted with the Advantage of a nearer Contemplation upwards, so they are equally terrified with the dismal Prospect of the Precipice below. Thus, in the Choice of a Devil, it hath been the usual Method of Mankind to single out some Being, either in Act, or in Vision, which was in most Antipathy to the God they had framed. Thus also the Sect of Æolists possessed themselves with a Dread, and Horror, and Hatred of two Malignant Natures, betwixt whom, and the Deities they adored, perpetual Enmity was established. The first of these was the * Camelion, sworn Foe to Inspiration, who in Scorn devoured large Influences of the God; without refunding the smallest Blaft by Erafiation. The other was a huge terrible Monster, called Moulinavent, who, with four strong Arms, waged eternal Battle with all their Divinities, dextrously turning to avoid their Blows, and repay them with Interest.

Thus furnished, and set out with Gods, as well as Devils, was the renowned Sect of Æolists, which maketh at this Day so illustrious a Figure in the World, and whereof that Polite Nation of Laplanders

* I do not well understand what the Author aims at here, any more than by the terrible Monster, mentioned in the following Lines, called Moulinavent, which is the French Word for a Windmill.

landers are, beyond all Doubt, a most authentick Branch; of whom I therefore cannot, without Injustice, here omit to make honourable Mention; since they appear to be so closely allied in Point of Interest, as well as Inclinations, with their Brother Æolists among Us, as not only to buy their Winds by wholesale from the same Merchants, but also to retail them after the same Rate and Method, and to Customers much alike.

Now, whether the System here delivered was wholly compiled by Jack, or, as some Writers believe, rather copied from the Original at Delphos, with certain Additions and Emendations suited to Times and Circumstances, I shall not absolutely determine. This I may affirm, that Jack gave it at least a new Turn, and formed it into the same Dress and Model, as it lies deduced by me.

I have long sought after this Opportunity of doing Justice to a Society of Men, for whom I have a peculiar Honour, and whose Opinions, as well as Practices, have been extremely misrepresented, and traduced by the Malice or Ignorance of their Adversaries. For, I think it one of the greatest, and best of human Actions, to remove Prejudices, and place Things in their truest and fairest Light; which I therefore boldly undertake without any Regards of my own, beside the Conscience, the Honour, and the Thanks.

S E C T. IX.

A DIGRESSION concerning the Original, the Use, and Improvement of MADNESS in a Commonwealth.

NOR shall it any ways detract from the just Reputation of this famous Sect, that its Rise and Institution are owing to such an Author as I have described Jack to be: A Person, whose Intellectuals were overturned, and his Brain shaken out of its natural Position; which we commonly suppose to be a Distemper, and called by the Name of Madness or Phrenzy. For, if we take a Survey of the greatest Actions that have been performed in the World, under the Influence of Single Men; which are, The Establishment of New Empires by Conquest: the Advance and Progress of new Schemes in Philosophy; and the contriving, as well as the propagating of New Religions; We shall find the Authors of them all to have been Persons, whose natural Reason hath admitted great Revolutions from their Diet, their Education, the Prevalency of some certain Temper, together with the particular Influence of Air and Climate. Besides, there is something Individual in human Minds, that easily kindles at the accidental Approach and Collision of certain Circumstances, which, although of pauptry and mean Appearance, do often flame out into the greatest Emergencies of Life. For, great Turns are not always given by strong Hands, but by lucky Adaption, and at proper Seasons; and it is of no Import, where the Fire was kindled, if the Vapour hath once got up into the Brain. For, the upper Region of Man is furnished like the middle Region of the Air; the Materials are formed from Causes of the widest Difference, yet produce at last the same Substance and Effects. Mists arise from the Earth, Steams from Dunghills, Exhalations tions from the Sea, and Smoak from Fire; yet all Clouds are the same in Composition, as well as Consequences: And the Fumes, issuing from a Jakes, will furnish as comely and useful a Vapour, as Incense from an Altar. Thus far, I suppose, will easily be granted me; and then it will follow, that as the Face of Nature never produceth Rain, but when it is overcast and disturbed, so Human Understanding, seated in the Brain, must be troubled and overspread by Vapours, ascending from the lower Faculties, to water the Invention, and render it fruitful. Now, although these Vapours (as it hath been already said) are of as various Original, as those of the Skies, yet the Crops they produce, differ both in Kind and Degree, meerly according to the Soil. I will produce two Instances to Prove and Explain what I am now advancing.

* A CERTAIN Great Prince raised a mighty Army, filled his Coffers with infinite Treasures, provided an invincible Fleet, and all this, without giving the least Part of his Design to his greatest Ministers, or his nearest Favourites. Immediately the whole World was alarmed; the neighbouring Crowns, in trembling Expectations, towards what Point the Storm would burst; the small Politicians every where forming profound Conjectures. Some believed he had laid a Scheme for Universal Monarchy: Others, after much Insinuation, determined the Matter to be a Project for pulling down the Pope, and setting up the Reformed Religion, which had once been his own. Some, again, of a deeper Sagacity, sent him into Asia to subdue the Tartars, and recover Palestine. In the midst of all these Projects and Preparations, a certain † State-Surgeon, gathering the Nature of the Disease by these Symptoms,

* This was Harry the Great, of France.

† Ravillac, who stabbed Henry the Great in his Couch.

Symptoms, attempted the Cure, at one Blow performed the Operation, broke the Bag, and out flew the Vapour; nor did any Thing want to render it a compleat Remedy; only, that the Prince unfortunately happened to Die in the Performance.

Now, is the Reader exceeding curious to learn, from whence this Vapour took its Rise, which had so long set the Nations at a Gaze? What secret Wheel, what hidden Spring could put into Motion so wonderful an Engine? It was afterwards discovered, that the Movement of this whole Machine had been directed by an absent Female, whose Eyes had raised a Protuberancy, and, before Emission, she was removed into an Enemy's Country. What should an unhappy Prince do in such ticklish Circumstances as these? He tried in vain the Poet's never-failing Receipt of Corpora quæque; For,

*Illicque petit Corpus mens unde est saucia amore;
Unde feritur, eo tendit, gessitque coire. Lucr.*

HAVING to no Purpose used all peaceable Endeavours, the collected Part of the Semen, raised and enflamed, became adult, converted to Choler, turned Head upon the spinal Duët, and ascended to the Brain. The very same Principle, that influences a Bully to break the Windows of a Whore who hath silted him, naturally stirs up a great Prince to raise mighty Armies, and dream of nothing but Sieges, Battles, and Victories.

----- Teterrima belli Causa-----

THE other * Instance is, what I have read somewhere, in a very ancient Author, of a mighty King, who, for the Space of above Thirty Years,
I amused

* This is meant of the late French King, Lewis XIV.

amused himself to take and lose Towns; beat Armies, and be beaten; drive Princes out of their Dominions; fright Children from their Bread and Butter; burn, lay waste, plunder, dragoon, massacre Subject and Stranger, Friend and Foe, Male and Female. It is recorded, that the Philosophers of each Country were in grave Dispute, upon Causes Natural, Moral, and Political, to find out where they should assign an original Solution of this Phænomenon. At last, the Vespar or Spirit which animated the Hero's Brain, being in perpetual Circulation, seized upon that Region of Human Body, so renowned for furnishing the * Zibeta Occidentalis; and, gathering there into a Tumour, left the rest of the World for that Time in Peace. Of such mighty Consequence it is, where those Exhalations fix; and of so little, from whence they proceed. These same spirits, who in their superior Progress would conquer a Kingdom, descending upon the West, conclude in a Filula.

Let us next examine the great Introducers of new Schemes in Philosophy, and search until we can find, in what Faculty of the Soul the Disposition arises to the Philosophia, of taking it into his Head, to advance new Plans with such an eager Zeal, in Things agreed on all Hands impossible to be known; from what Seeds this Disposition spring, and to what Quality of Human Nature these grand Innovators have been indebted for their Number of Disciples. Because, it is plain, that several of the chief among them, both antient and Modern, were equally mistaken by their Adversaries, and indeed by all, except their own Followers,

* Paracelsus, who was so famous for Chymistry, tried an Experiment upon human Excrement to make a Perfume of it, which when he had brought to Perfection, he called Zibeta Occidentalis, or Western-Civet, the back Parts of Man (according to his Division mentioned by the Author, Page 160.) being the West.

Followers, to have been Persons Crazed, or out of their Wits, having generally proceeded in the common Course of their Words and Actions, by a Method very different from the vulgar Dictates of unrefined Reason: Agreeing for the most Part in their several Models, with their present undoubted Successors in the Academy of modern Bel-lam, (whose Merits and Principles I shall farther examine in due Place.) Of this Kind were Epicurus, Diogenes, Apollonius, Lucretius, Paracelsus, Des Cartes, and others; who, if they were now in the World, tied fast, and separate from their Followers, would, in this our undistinguishing Age, incur manifest Danger of Phlebotomy, and Whips, and Chains, and dark Chambers, and Straw. For, what Man in the natural State, or Course of Thinking, did ever conceive it in his Power, to reduce the Notions of all Mankind exactly to the same Length, and Breadth, and Height of his own; Yet this is the first humble and civil Design of all Innovators in the Empire of Reason. Epicurus modestly hoped, that, one Time or other, a certain Fortuitous Concourie of all Mens Opinion, after perpetual Jostlings, the sharp with the smooth, the light and the heavy, the round and the square, would, by certain Climaxina, unite in the Notions of All and None, as these did in the Originals of all Things. Cartesius reckoned to see before he died the Sentiments of all Philosophers, like so many lesser Stars in his Romantick System, rapt and drawn within his own Vortex. Now, I would gladly be informed, how it is possible to account for such Imaginations as these in particular Men, without Recourse to my Phænomenon of Vapours, ascending from the lower Faculties, to overshadow the Brain, and there distilling into Conceptions, for which the Narrowness of our Mother-tongue hath not yet assigned any other Name, besides that of Madness or Phrensy. Let us therefore now conjecture how it cometh to pass, that none of these great Prescribers do ever fail providing themselves and their Notions, with a Number of implicit Disciples. And, I think, the Reason is easy to be assigned: For, there is a peculiar String in the Harmony of Human Understanding, which in several Individuals is exactly of the same Tuning. This if you can dexterously skrew up to its right Key, and then strike gently upon it; whenever you have the good Fortune to light among those of the same Pitch, they will, by a secret necessary Sympathy, strike exactly at the same Time. And in this one Circumstance lies all the Skill or Luck of the Matter; for if you chance to jar the String among those who are either above or below your own Height, instead of subscribing to your Doctrine, they will tie you fast, call you mad, and feed you with Bread and Water. It is therefore a Point of the nicest Conduct to distinguish and adapt this noble Talent, with respect to the Difference of Persons and of Times. Cicero understood this very well, when writing to a Friend in England, with a Caution, among other Matters, to beware of being cheated by our Hackney-coachmen (who, it seems, in those Days were as arrant Rascals as they are now) he has these remarkable Words * Est quod

 * Epist. ad Fam. Trebatio. gaudeas te in ista loca venisse, ubi aliquid sapere viderere. For, to speak a bold Truth, it is a fatal Miscarriage, so ill to order Affairs, as to pass for a Fool in one Company, when in another you might be treated as a Philosopher. Which I desire some certain Gentlemen of my Acquaintance, to lay up in their Hearts, as a very reasonable Innuendo.

THIS, indeed, was the Fatal Mistake of that worthy Gentleman, my most ingenious Friend, Mr. Wotton; a Person, in Appearance, ordained for great Designs, as well as Performances; whether you will consider his Notions or his Looks. Surely, no Man ever advanced into the Publick with fitter Qualifications of Body and Mind, for the Propagation of a new Religion. Oh, had those happy Talents, misapplied to vain Philosophy, been turned into their proper Channels of Dreams and Visions, where Distortion of Mind and Countenance is of such Sovereign Use; the base detracting World would not then have dared to report, that something is amiss, that his Brain hath undergone an unlucky Shake; which even his Brother Modernists themselves, like Ungrates, do whisper so loud, that it reacheth up to the very Garret I am now writing in.
 the

LASTLY, Whosoever pleaseth to look into the Fountains of Enthusiasm, from whence, in all Ages, have eternally proceeded such fatening Streams, will find the Spring-head to have been as troubled and muddy as the Current; Of such great Emolument is a Tincture of this Vapour, which the World calleth Madness, that without its Help the World would not only be deprived of those two great Blessings, Conquests and Systems, but even all Mankind would happily be reduced to the same Belief in Things invisible. Now, the former Possulation being held, that it is of no Import from what Originals this Vapour proceedeth, but either in what Angle it striketh and spreadeth over the Understanding, or upon what System of Brain it ascendeth; It will be a very delicate Point, to cut the Feather, and divide the several Reasons to a nice and curious Reader, how this numerical Difference in the Brain can produce Effects of so vast a Difference from the same Vapour, as to be the sole Point of Individuation between Alexander the Great, Jack of Leyden, and Monsieur Des Cartes. The present Argument is the most abstracted that ever I engaged in, it straineth my Faculties to their highest Stretch; and I desire the Reader to attend with utmost Propensity; For, I now proceed to unravel this knotty Point.

* THERE is in Mankind a certain * * * *

Hic multa desi-derantur.

* * * * And this I take to be a clear Solution of the Matter.

HAVING therefore so narrowly passed through this intricate Difficulty, the Reader will, I am sure, agree with me in the Conclusion; that if the Moderns mean by Madness only a Disturbance or Transposition of the Brain, by Force of certain Vapours issuing from the lower Faculties; Then has this Madness been the Parent of all those mighty Revolutions that have happened in Empire, in Philosophy, and in Religion. For, the Brain, in its natural Position and State of Serenity, disposeth its Owner to pass his Life in the common Forms, without any Thought of subduing Multitudes to his own Power, his Reasons, or his Visions; and the more he shapeth his Understanding by the Pattern of Human Learning, the less he is inclined to form Parties after his particular Notions; because that instructeth him in his private Infirmities, as well as in the stubborn Ignorance of the People. But when a Man's Fancy gets astride on his Reason, when Imagination is at Cuffs with the Senses, and common Understanding, as well as common Sense, is kicked out of Doors; the first Profelyte he maketh, is Himself, and when that is once compassed, the Difficulty is not so great in bringing over others; A strong Delusion always operating from without, as vigorously as from within. For,

Cant

* Here is another Defect in the Manuscript, but I think the Author did not see, and that the Master, which thus drained his Faculties, was not worth a Solution; and it were well, if all Metaphysical Cobweb Problems were so otherwise answered.

Cant and Vision are to the Ear and the Eye, the same that Tickling is to the Touch. Those Entertainments and Pleasures we most value in Life, are such as Dupe and play the Wag with the Senses. For, if we take an Examination of what is generally understood by Happiness, as it hath Respect, either to the Understanding or the Senses, we shall find all its Properties and Adjuncts will herd under this short Definition: That, it is a perpetual Possession of being well Deceived. And first, with Relation to the Mind or Understanding; it is manifest, what mighty Advantages Fiction hath over Truth; and the Reason is just at our Elbow; because Imagination can build nobler Scenes, and produce more wonderful Revolutions than Fortune or Nature will be at Expence to furnish. Nor is Mankind so much to blame in his Choice, thus determining him, if we consider that the Debate merely lies between Things past, and Things conceived; and so the Question is only this; Whether Things, that have Place in the Imagination, may not as properly be said to Exist, as those that are seated in the Memory; which may be justly held in the Affirmative, and very much to the Advantage of the former, since this is acknowledged to be the Womb of Things, and the other allowed to be no more than the Grave. Again, if we take this Definition of Happiness, and examine it with Reference to the Senses, it will be acknowledged wonderfully adapted. How fading and insipid do all Objects accost us that are not conveyed in the Vehicle of Delusion? How thrunk is every Thing, as it appears in the Glass of Nature. So, that if it were not for the Assistance of artificial Mechans, false Lights, refracted Angles, Varnish, and Tinsel; there would be a mighty Level in the Felicity and Enjoyments of Mortal Men. If this were seriously considered by the World, as I have a certain Reason to suspect it hardly will; Men would no longer reckon among their high Points of Wildom, the Art of exposing weak

weak Sides, and publishing Infirmities; an Employment in my Opinion, neither better nor worse than that of Unmasking, which, I think, hath never been allowed fair Usage, either in the World or the Playhouse.

In the Proportion that Credulity is a more peaceful Possession of the Mind than Curiosity, so far preferable is that Wisdom, which converseth about the Surface, to that pretended Philosophy, which enters into the Depth of Things, and then comes gravely back with Informations and Discoveries, that in the Inside they are good for nothing. The two Senses, to which all Objects first address themselves, are the Sight and the Touch; these never examine farther than the Colour, the Shape, the Size, and whatever other Qualities dwell, or are drawn by Art upon the outward Bodies; and then cometh Reason officiously, with Tools for cutting, and opening, and mangling, and piercing, offering to demonstrate, that they are not of the same Consistence quite through. Now I take all this to be the last Degree of perverting Nature; one of whose Eternal Laws it is, to put her best Furniture forward. And therefore, in order to save the Charges of all such expensive Anatomy for the Time to come; I do here think fit to inform the Reader, that in such Considerations as these; Reason is certainly in the Right; and that in most Corporal Beings, which have fallen under my Cognizance, the Outer hath been infinitely preferable to the In: Whereof I have been further convinced from some late Experiments. Last Week I saw a Woman flayed, and you will hardly believe how much it altered her Person for the worse. Yesterday I ordered the Carcass of a Beast to be stript in my Presence, when we were all amazed to find so many unsuspected Faults under the suit of Cloaths: Then I laid open his Brain, his Heart, and his Spleen; But, I plainly perceived at every Operation, that the farther we proceeded, we found the Defects

Defects encrease upon us in Number and Bulk: From all which I justly formed this Conclusion to myself; that whatever Philosopher or Projector can find out an Art to solder and patch up the Flaws and Imperfections of Nature, will deserve much better of Mankind, and teach us a more useful Science, than that, so much in present Esteem, of widening and exposing them (like him who held Anatomy to be the ultimate End of Physick) and he, whose Fortunes and Dispositions have placed him in a convenient Station to enjoy the Fruits of this noble Art; He that can with Epicurus content his Ideas with the Films and Images that fly off upon his Senses from the Superficies of Things; Such a Man, truly wise, draineth off Nature, leaving the Sour and the Dregs for Philosophy and Reason to lap up. This is the sublime and refined Point of Felicity, called, the Possession of being well deceived: the Serene, Peaceful State of being a Fool among Knaves.

BUT to return to Madness. It is certain, that, according to the System I have above deduced; every Species thereof proceedeth from a Redundancy of Vapours; therefore, as some Kinds of Phrenzy give double Strength to the Sinews, so there are of other Species, which add Vigour, and Life, and Spirit to the Brain: Now, it usually happens, that these active Spirits, getting Possession of the Brain, resemble those that haunt other waste and empty Dwellings, which, for want of Business, either vanish, and carry away a Piece of the House, or else stay at home and fling it all out of the Windows. By which are mystically displayed the two principal Branches of Madness, and which some Philosophers, not considering so well as I, have mistook to be different in their Causes, overhastily assigning the first to Deficiency, and the other to Redundance.

I THINK it therefore manifest, from what I have here advanced, that the main Point of Skill and Address

Address is to furnish Employment for this Redundancy of Vapour, and prudently to adjust the Season of it; by which Means it may certainly become of Cardinal and Catholick Emolument in a Common-wealth. Thus one Man, chusing a proper Juncture, leapeth into a Gulph, from whence proceedeth a Hero, and is called the Saver of his Country; Another achieves the same Enterprize, but, unluckily Timing it, hath left the Brand of Madness, fixed as a Reproach upon his Memory; Upon so nice a Distinction are we taught to repeat the Name of Cæsar with Reverence and Love; that of Empedocles with Hatred and Contempt. Thus, also it is usually conceived, that the Elder Brutus only personated the Fool and Madmen, for the Good of the Publick: But this was nothing else, than a Redundancy of the same Vapour, long misapplied, called by the Latins,

* Tacit. * Ingenium per neglectum; Or, (to translate it as nearly as I can) a Sort of Phrensy, never in its right Element, until you take it up in Business of the State.

UPON all which, and many other Reasons of equal Weight, although not equally curious; I do here gladly embrace an Opportunity I have long sought for, of recommending it as a very noble Undertaking, to Sir Edward Seymour, Sir Christopher Manners, Sir J---n B---ls, John Hore, Esq; and other Patriots concerned, that they would move for Leave to bring in a Bill, for appointing Commissioners to inspect into B. Ham, and the Parts adjacent; who shall be empowered to send for Persons, Papers, and Records: To examine into the Merits and Qualifications of every Student and Professor; to observe with utmost Exactness their several Dispositions and Behaviour; by which Means, duly distinguishing and adapting their Talents, they might produce admirable Instruments for the several Offices in a State, Ecclesiastical, Civil, and Military;

litary; proceeding in such Methods as I shall here humbly propose. And, I hope, the Gentle Reader will give some Allowance to my great Solitudes in this important Affair, upon Account of the high Esteem I have ever born that honourable Society, whereof I had some time the Happiness to be an unworthy Member.

Is any Student tearing his Straw in piece-meal, swearing and blaspheming, biting his Grate, foaming at the Mouth, and emptying his Pisspot in the Spectator's Faces? Let the Right Worshipful, the Commissioners of Inspection give him a Regiment of Dragoons, and send him into Flanders among the Ross. Is another eternally talking, sputtering, gaping, bawling, in a Sound without Period or Article? What wonderful Talents are here misapplied! Let him be furnished immediately with a green Bag and Papers, † A Lawyer's Coach and † three Pence in his Pocket, and away with him to Westminster-Hall. Hire.

You will find a Third, gravely taking the Dimensions of his Kennel; a Person of Foresight and Insight, although kept quite in the Dark; for why, like Moses, *Eccc * cornuta erat ejus facies*. He walketh daily in one Pace, intreateth your Fenny with due Gravity and Ceremony; talketh much of hard Times, and Taxes, and the Whore of Babylon; Bars up the wooden Window of his Cell constantly at eight of the Clock: Dreams of Fire, and Shoplifters, and Court-Customers, and privileged Places. Now what a Figure would all these Acquirements amount to, if the Owner were sent into the City among his Brethren! Behold a Fourth, in much and deep Conversation with himself, biting his Thumb at proper Junctures; his Countenance nance chequered with Business and Design: sometimes walking very fast, with his Eyes nailed to a Paper that he holdeth in his Hands: A great Saver of Time, somewhat thick of Hearing, very short of Sight, but more of Memory. A Man ever in Haste, a great Hatcher and Breeder of Business, and excellent at the famous Art of whispering Nothing. A huge Idolater of Monosyllables and Procrastination; so ready to Give his Word to every Body, that he never keeps it. One that hath forgot the common Meaning of Words, but an admirable Retainer of the Sound. Extremely subject to the Looseness, for his Occasions are perpetually calling him away. If you approach his Grate in his familiar Intervals; Sir, says he, Give me a Penny, and I'll sing you a Song: But give me the Penny first. (Hence comes the common Saying, and commoner Practice of parting with Money for a Song.) What a complete System of Court-skill is here described in every Branch of it, and all utterly lost with wrong Application? Accost the Hole of another Kennel, (first stopping your Nose,) you will behold a surly, gloomy, nasty, slovenly Mortal, raking in his own Dung, and dabling in his Urine. The best Part of his Diet is the Reversion of his own Ordure, which, expiring into Steams, whirleth perpetually about, and at last reinfundeth. His Complexion is of a dirty Yellow, with a thin scattered Beard, exactly agreeable to that of his Dyet upon its first Declination; like other Insects, who, having their Birth and Education in an Excrement, from thence borrow their Colour and their Smell. The Student of this Apartment is very sparing of his Words, but somewhat over-liberal of his Breath; he holdeth his Hand out ready to receive your Penny, and immediately, upon receipt, withdraws to his former Occupations. Now is it not amazing to think, the Society of Men of Letters should have no more Concern for the Recovery of so useful a Member;

* Cornutus, is either horned or flaming, and by this Term, Moses is described in the vulgar Latin of the Bible.

Member; who, if one may judge from these Appearances, would become the greatest Ornament to that illustrious Body? Another Student struteth up fiercely to your Teeth, puffing with his Lips, half squeezing out his Eyes, and very graciously holdeth you out his Hand to kiss. The Keeper desires you not to be afraid of this Professor, for he will do you no Hurt: To him alone is allowed the Liberty of the Anti-chamber, and the Orator of the Place gives you to understand, that this solemn Person is a Taylor run mad with Pride. This considerable Student is adorned with many other Qualities, upon which, at present, I shall not farther enlarge.

- - - - - * Hark in your Ear - - - - - I am strangely mistaken, if all his Address, his Motions, and his Airs, would not then be very natural, and in their proper Element.

I SHALL not descend so minutely, as to insist upon the vast Number of Beaux, Fiddlers, Poets, and Politicians, that the World might recover by such a Reformation? But what is more material, besides the clear Gain redounding to the Commonwealth, by so large an Acquisition of Persons to employ, whose Talents and Acquirements, if I may be so bold to affirm it, are now buried, or at least misapplied: It would be a mighty Advantage accruing to the Publick from this Enquiry, that all these would very much excel, and arrive at great Perfection in their several Kinds; which, I think, is manifest from what I have already shewn, and shall inforce by this one plain Instance; that, even I myself, the Author of these momentous Truths, am a Person, whose Imaginations are hard-mouthed, and exceedingly disposed to run away with his Reason, which I have observed from long Experience

K

* I cannot conjecture what the Author means here, or how this Chaffin could be filled, although it is capable of more than one Interpretation.

rience, to be a very light Rider, and easily shock off: upon which Account, my Friends will never trust me alone without a solemn Promise, to vent my Speculations in this, or the like Manner, for the universal Benefit of human kind; which, perhaps, the gentle, courteous, and candid Reader, brimful of that modern Charity and Tenderneſs, usually annexed to his Office, will be very hardly persuaded to believe.

S E C T. X.

A T A L E of a T U B.

IT is an unanswerable Argument of a very refined Age, the wonderful Civilities that have passed of late Years between the Nation of Authors, and that of Readers. There can hardly * pop out a Play, a Pamphlet, or a Poem, without a Preface full of Acknowledgment to the World, for the general Reception and Applause they have given it, which the Lord knows where, or when, or how, or from whom it was received. In due Deference to so laudable a Custom, I do here return my humble Thanks to His Majesty and both Houses of Parliament; to the Lords of the King's most honourable Privy Council; to the Reverend the Judges; to the Clergy, and Gentry, and Yeomanry of this Land: But in a more especial Manner, to my worthy Brethren and Friends at Wall's Coffee-house, and Gresham College, and Warwick-lane, and Moor-fields, and Scotland-yard, and Westminster-Hall, and Guild-hall: In short, to all Inhabitants and Retainers whatsoever, either in Court, or Church, or Camp, or City, or Country; for their generous and universal Acceptance of this divine Treatise. I accept their Approbation and good Opinion with extream Gratitude, and, to the utmost of my poor Capacity, shall take hold of all Opportunities to return the Obligation.

I AM also happy, that Fate hath sung me into so blessed an Age for the mutual Felicity of Book-sellers and Authors, whom I may safely affirm to be

K 2

at

* This is literally true, as we may observe in the Prefaces to most Plays, Poems, &c.

at this Day the only two satisfied Parties in England. Ask an Author how his last Piece hath succeeded? Why truly, he thanks his Stars, the World has been very favourable, and he has not the least Reason to complain: And yet, by G--, he wrote it in a Week, at Bits and Starts, when he could steal an Hour from his urgent Affairs; as it is a hundred to one, you may see farther in the Preface, to which he refers you; and for the rest, to the Bookseller. There you go as a Customer, and make the same Question: He blesses his God, the Thing takes wonderfully; he is just printing a second Edition, and has but Three left in his Shop. You beat down the Price: Sir, we shall not differ; and in Hopes of your Custom another Time, lets you have it as reasonable as you please: Ant, pray send as many of your Acquaintance as you will, I shall, upon your Account, furnish them all at the same Rate.

Now, it is not well enough considered to what Accidents and Occasions the World is indebted for the greatest Part of those noble Writings, which hourly start up to entertain it. If it were not for a rainy Day, a drunken Vigil, a Fit of the Spleen, a Course of Physick, a sleepy Sunday, an ill Run at Dice, a long Taylor's Bill, a Beggar's Purse, a factious Head, a hot Sun, costive Diet, want of Books, and a just Contempt of Learning. But for these Events, I say, and some others too long to recite (especially a prudent Neglect of taking Brimstone inwardly) I doubt, the Number of Authors and of Writings would dwindle away to a Degree most woful to behold. To confirm this Opinion, hear the Words of the famous Troglodyte Philosopher: It is certain (said he) some Grains of Folly are of course annexed, as part of the Composition of human Nature, only the Choice is left us, whether we please to wear them Inlaid or Embossed; and we need not go very far to seek how that is usually determined, when we remember, it is with human

human Faculties as with Liquors, the lightest will be ever at the Top.

THERE is in this famous Island of Britain a certain paltry Scribler, very voluminous, whose Character the Reader cannot wholly be a Stranger to. He deals in a pernicious Kind of Writings, called Second Parts, and usually passeth under the Name of The Author of the First. I easily foresee, that as soon as I lay down my Pen, this nimble Operator will have stole it, and treat me as inhumanly as he hath already done Dr. Bl---re, L---ge, and many others who shall here be nameless: I therefore fly for Justice and Relief into the Hands of that great Rectifier of Saddles, and Lower of Mankind, Dr. B---ly, begging he will take this enormous Grievance into his most modern Consideration: And if it should so happen, that the Furniture of an Ass, in the Shape of a Second Part, must for my Sins be clapt, by a Mistake, upon my Back, that he will immediately please, in the Presence of the World, to lighten me of the Burthen, and take it home to His own House, till the true Beast thinks fit to call for it.

In the mean time, I do here give this publick Notice, that my Resolutions are, to circumscribe within this Discourse the whole Stock of Matter I have been so many Years providing. Since my Vein is once opened, I am content to exhaust it all at a Running, for the peculiar Advantage of my dear Country, and for the universal Benefit of Mankind. Therefore hospitably considering the Number of my Guests, they shall have my whole Entertainment at a Meal; and I scorn to set up the Leavings in the Cupboard. What the Guests cannot eat may be given to the Poor, and the * Dogs under the Table

K 3

may

* By Dogs, the Author means common injudicious Criticks, as he explains it himself before, in his Digression upon Criticks. (Page 39.)

may gnaw the Bones. This I understand for a more generous Proceeding, than to turn the Company's Stomach, by inviting them again To-morrow to a scurvy Meal of Scraps.

If the Reader fairly considers the Strength of what I have advanced in the foregoing Section, I am convinced it will produce a wonderful Revolution in his Notions and Opinions; and he will be abundantly better prepared to receive and to relish the concluding Part of this miraculous Treatise. Readers may be divided into three Classes, the Superficial, the Ignorant, and the Learned: And I have with much Felicity fitted my Pen to the Genius and Advantage of each. The Superficial Reader will be strangely provoked to Laughter; which clears the Breast and the Lungs, is Sovereign against the Spleen, and the most innocent of all Diureticks. The Ignorant Reader (between whom and the former the Distinction is extremely nice) will find himself disposed to stare; which is an admirable Remedy for ill Eyes, serveth to raise and enliven the Spirits, and wonderfully helps Perpiration. But the Reader truly Learned, chiefly for whose Benefit I wake when others sleep, and sleep when others wake, will here find sufficient Matter to employ his Speculations for the rest of his Life. It were much to be wished, and I do here humbly propose for an Experiment, that every Prince in Christendom will take seven of the deepest Scholars in his Dominions, and shut them up close for seven Years, in seven Chambers, with a Command to write seven ample Commentaries on this comprehensive Discourse. I shall venture to affirm, that whatever Difference may be found in their several Conjectures, they will be all, without the least Distortion, manifestly deducible from the Text. Mean time, it is my earnest Request, that so useful an Undertaking may be entered upon (if their Majesties please) with all convenient Speed; because I have a strong Inclination, before I leave the World, to taste a Blessing, which we mysterious Writers can seldom reach till we have got into our Graves. Whether it is, that Fame, being a Fruit grafted on the Body, can hardly grow, and much less ripen, till the Stock is in the Earth; or, whether she be a Bird of Prey, and is lured among the rest to pursue after the Scent of a Carcass; or, whether she conceiveth her Trumpet soundeth best and farthest when she standeth on a Tomb, by the Advantage of a rising Ground, and the Echo of a hollow Vault.
the

It is true, indeed, the Republick of dark Authors, after they once found out this excellent Expedient of Dying, have been peculiarly happy in the Variety as well as Extent of their Reputation. For, Night being the universal Mother of Things, wise Philosophers hold all Writings to be fruitful in the Proportion they are dark: And therefore the * true illuminated (that is to say, * A Name the Darkest of all) have met with such of the Rosy-numberless Commentators, whose School-crucians. lastick Midwifry hath delivered them of Meanings, that the Authors themselves, perhaps, never conceived, and yet may very justly be allowed the lawful Parents of them: * The Words of such Writers being like Seed, which, however scattered at Random, when they light upon a fruitful Ground, will multiply far beyond either the Hopes or Imagination of the Sower.

And therefore, in order to promote so useful a Work, I will here take Leave to glance a few Innuendos, that may be of great Assistance to those sublime Spirits, who shall be appointed to labour in an universal Comment upon this wonderful Discourse. And, First, † I have couched a very profound Mystery

* Nothing is more frequent than for Commentators to force Interpretations, which the Author never meant.

† This is what the Cabbalists among the Jews have done

stery in the Number of O's multiplied by Seven, and divided by Nine. Also, if a devout Brother of the Rosy Crofs will pray fervently for sixty-three Mornings, with a lively Faith, and then transpose certain Letters and Syllables according to Prescription, in the second and fifth Section; they will certainly reveal into a full Receipt of the Opus Magnum. Lastly, whoever will be at the Pains to calculate the whole Number of each Letter in this Treatise, and sum up the Difference exactly between the several Numbers, assigning the true natural Cause for every such Difference; the Discoveries in the Product will plentifully reward his Labour. But then he must beware of † Bythus and Sige, and be sure not to forget the Qualities of * Acamoth; A cuius lacrymis lumeſca

done with the Bible, and pretend to find wonderful Mysteries by it.

† I was told by an eminent Divine, whom I consulted on this Point, that these two barbarous Words, with that of Acamoth and its Qualities, as here set down, are quoted from Irenæus. This he discovered by searching that antient Writer for another Quotation of our Author, which he hath placed in the Title Page, and refers to the Book and Chapter; the Curious were very inquisitive, whether these barbarous Words, Basilina Eacabusa, &c. are really in Irenæus, and upon Enquiry it was found, they were a sort of Cant or Jargon of certain Hereticks, and therefore very properly prefixed to such a Book as this of our Author.

* To the above-mentioned Treatise, called Anthroposophia Theomagica, there is another annexed, called Anima magica Abſcondita, written by the same Author Vaughan, under the Name of Eugenius Philalethes, but in neither of those Treatises is there any Mention of Acamoth or its Qualities, so that this is nothing but Amusement, and a Ridicule of dark, unintelligible Writers; only the Words, A cuius lacrymis xc.

humecta prodit Substantia, a risu lucida, a tristitia solida, & a timore mobilis, wherein †Vid. Anima † Eugenius Philalethes hath committed magica ab- an unpardonable Mistake. scondita.

Sec. are as we have said, transcribed from Irenæus, although I know not from what part. I believe one of the Author's Designs was to set curious Men a hunting through Indexes, and enquiring for Books out of the common Road.

S E C T.

S E C T. XI.

A T A L E of a T U E.

AFTER so wide a Compass as I have wandered, I do now gladly overtake, and close in with my Subject, and shall henceforth hold on with it in an even Pace to the End of my Journey, except some beautiful Prospect appears within Sight of my Way; whereof, although at present I have neither Warning nor Expectation, yet upon such an Accident, come when it will, I shall beg my Reader's Favour and Company, allowing me to conduct him through it along with myself. For in Writing, it is as in Travelling, if a Man is in haste to be at Home, (which I acknowledge to be none of my Case, having never so little Business, as when I am there) if his Horse be tired with long Riding, and ill Ways, or be naturally a Jade, I advise him clearly to make the straightest and the commonest Road, be it ever so dirty; but then surely we must own such a Man to be a scurvy Companion at best; he spatters himself and his Fellow-Travellers at every Step: All their Thoughts and Wishes, and Conversation turn entirely upon the Subject of their Journey's End; and at every Splash, and Plunge, and Stumble, they heartily wish one another at the Devil.

On the other side, when a Traveller and his Horse are in Heart and Plight, when his Purse is full, and the Day before him; he takes the Road only where it is clean and convenient; entertaineth his Company there as agreeably as he can; but, on the first Occasion, carries them along with him to every delightful Scene in View, whether of Art, or Nature, or of both; and if they chance to refuse out of Stupidity or Weariness; let them jog on by themselves and be d---n'd; he will overtake them them at the next Town; at which arriving, he rides furiously through; the Men, Women, and Children run out to gaze, a hundred † noisy Curs run barking after him, of which if he honours the boldest with a Lash of his Whip, it is rather out of Sport than Revenge: But should some fouler Mungrel dare too near an Approach, he receiveth a Salute on the Chops by an accidental Stroke from the Courser's Heels, (nor is any Ground lost by the Blow) which sendeth him yelping and limping home.

I now proceed to sum up the singular Adventures of my renowned Jack; the State of whose Dispositions and Fortunes, the careful Reader doth, no doubt, most exactly remember, as I last parted with them in the Conclusion of a former Section. Therefore, his next Care must be, from two of the foregoing, to extract a Scheme of Notions, that may best fit his Understanding for a true Relish of what is to ensue.

JACK had not only calculated the first Revolution of his Brain so prudently, as to give Rise to that Epidemick Sect of Æolijs, but succeeding also into a new and strange Variety of Conceptions, the Fruitfulness of his Imagination led him into certain Notions, which, although in Appearance very unaccountable, were not without their Mysteries and their Meanings, nor wanted Followers to countenance and improve them. I shall therefore be extremely careful and exact in recounting such material Passages of this Nature, as I have been able to collect, either from undoubted Tradition, or indefatigable Reading; and shall describe them as graphically as it is possible, and as far as Notions of that Height and Latitude can be brought within the Compass of a Pen. Nor do I
at

† By these are meant what the Author calls, The True Criticks, Page 39.

at all question, but they will furnish Plenty of noble Matter for such, whose converting Imaginations dispose them to reduce all Things into Types; who can make Shadows, no Thanks to the Sun, and then mold them into Substances, no Thanks to Philosophy; whose peculiar Talent lieth in fixing Tropes and Allegories to the Letter, and refining what is Literal into Figure and Myſtery.

JACK had provided a fair Copy of his Father's Will, engrossed in Form upon a large Skin of Parchment; and, resolving to act the Part of a most dutiful Son, he became the fondest Creature of it imaginable. For, although, as I have often told the Reader, it consisted wholly in certain plain, easy Directions about the Management and Wearing of their Coats, with Legacies and Penalties, in case of Obedience or Neglect; yet he began to entertain a Fancy, that the Matter was deeper and darker, and therefore must needs have a great deal more of Myſtery at the Bottom. Gentlemen, said he, I will prove this very Skin of Parchment to be Meat, Drink, and Cloth, to be the Philosopher's Stone, and universal Medicine. * In consequence of which Raptures, he resolved to make use of it in the most necessary as well as the most poultry Occasions of Life. He had a Way of working it into any Shape he pleased; so that it served him for a Night-cap when he went to Bed, and for an Umbrello in rainy Weather. He would lap a Piece of it about a sore Toe, or when he had Fits, burn two Inches under his Nose; or if any Thing lay heavy on his Stomach, scrape off, and swallow as much of the Powder as would lie on a Silver Penny, they were all infallible Remedies. With Analogy to these Refinements, his common Talk and Conversation, * run wholly in the Phrase of his Will, and he circumscribed the utmost of his Eloquence within that Compass, not daring to let slip a Syllable without Authority from thence. Once, at a strange House, he was suddenly taken short, upon an urgent Juncture, whereon it may not be allowed too particularly to dilate; and being not able to call to mind, with that Suddenness the Occasion required, an authentick Phrase for demanding the Way to the Backside, he chose rather, as the more prudent Course, to incur the Penalty in such Cases usually annexed. Neither was it possible for the united Rhetorick of Mankind to prevail with him to make himself clean again: Because, having consulted the Will upon this Emergency, he met with a † Passage near the Bottom (whether foisted in by the Transcriber, is not known) which seemed to forbid it.

* The Author here lashes those Pretenders to Purity, who place so much Merit in using Scripture Phrases on all Occasions.

He made it a Part of his Religion, never to say † Grace to his Meat, nor could all the World persuade him, as the common Phrase is, to || eat his Victuals like a Christian.

* The Protestant Dissenters use Scripture Phrases in their serious Discourses and Compositions, more than the Church of England Men, accordingly Jack is introduced making his common Talk and Conversation to run wholly in the Phrase of his Will. W. Wotton.

† I cannot guess the Author's Meaning here, which I would be very glad to know, because it seemeth to be of Importance.

‡ The sordid Way of Receiving the Sacrament among the Fanatics.

|| This is a common Phrase to express Eating cleanly, and is meant for an Inveective against that indecent Manner among some People in Receiving the Sacrament; so in the Lines before, which is to be understood of the Dissenters enjoying to kill at the Sacrament.

He bore a strange kind of Appetite to * Snap-Drum, and to the livid Snuffs of a burning Candle, which he would catch and swallow with an Agility, wonderful to conceive; and by this Procedure maintained a perpetual Flame in his Belly, which issuing in a glowing Stream from both his Eyes, as well as his Nostrils, and his Mouth, made his Head appear in a dark Night like the Scull of an Ass, wherein a roguish Boy hath conveyed a Farthing Candle, to the Terror of His Majesty's Liege Subjects: Therefore, he made use of no other Expedient to light himself home, but was wont to say, That a wise Man was his own Lanthorn.

He would shut his Eyes as he walked along the Streets, and if he happened to bounce his Head against a Post, or fall into the Kennel (as he seldom missed either to do one or both) he would tell the glibbing Prentices, who looked on, that he submitted with entire Resignation, as to a Trip, or a Blow of Fate, with whom he found by long Experience how vain it was either to wrestle or to run; and who durst undertake to do either, would be sure to come off with a stinging Fall, or a bloody Nose. It was ordained, told he, some few Days before the Creation, that my Nose and this very Post should have a Rencontre; and, therefore, Nature thought fit to send us both into the World in the same Land, and to make us Countrymen and Fellow Citizens. Now, had my Eyes been open, it is very likely, the Blow might have been a great deal worse; for every day a confirmed Slip is daily got by Man, with all his eyesight about him? Besides, the Eyes of the Undersstanding see best, when those of the Senses are out of the Way; and therefore, blind Men are observed to tread their Steps with much more Caution, and Circumspection, and Judgment, than those who rely with too much Confidence upon the Virtue of the Signal Nerve, which every little Accident shaketh out of Order, and a Drop or a Film can wholly disconcert; like a Lanthorn among a Pack of roaring Bullies, when they scour the Streets, exposing its Owner, and itself, to outward Kicks and Buffets, which both might have escaped, if the Vanity of appearing would have suffered them to walk in the Dark. But, farther; if we examine the Conduct of these boasted Lights, it will prove yet a great deal worse than their Fortune: It is true, I have broke my Nose against this Post, because Fortune either forgot, or did not think it convenient to twitch me by the Elbow, and give me Notice to avoid it. But let not this encourage either the present Age or Posterity, to trust their Noses into the keeping of their Eyes, which may prove the fairest Way of losing them for good and all. For, O ye Eyes, ye blind Guides, miserable Guardians are Ye of our frail Noses; Ye, I say, who fasten upon the just Precipice in View, and then tow our wretched willing Bodies after You, to the very Brink of Destruction: But, alas, that Brink is rotten, our Feet slip, and we tumble down prone into a Gulph, without one hospitable Shrub in the Way to break the Fall; a Fall, to which not any Nose of mortal Make is equal, except that of the Giant * Laur- * Wide Don calco, who was Lord of the Silver Quixot.. Bridge. Most properly, therefore, O Eyes, and with great Justice, may You be compared to those foolish Lights, which conduct blind through Dirt and Darkness, until they fall into a deep Pit or a noisom Bog.

111

* I cannot well find the Author's Meaning here, unless it be the hot, untimely, blind Zeal of Enthusiasts.

THIS I have produced as a Scantling of Jack's great Eloquence, and the Force of his Reasoning upon such abstruse Matters.

He was besides a Person of great Design and Improvement in Affairs of Devotion, having introduced a new Deity, who hath since met with a vast Number of Worshippers; by some called Babel, by others, Chaos; who had an antient Temple of Gothick Structure upon Salisbury Plain; famous for its Shrine, and Celebration by Pilgrims.

* WHEN he had some Roguish Trick to play, he would down with his Knees, up with his Eyes, and fall to Prayers, although in the midst of the Kennel. Then it was that those, who understood his Pranks, would be sure to get far enough out of his Way: And whenever Curiosity attracted Strangers to laugh, or to listen, he would of a sudden, with one Hand out with his Gear, and piss full in their Eyes, and, with the other, all bespatter them with Mud.

† In Winter he went always loose and unbuttoned, and clad as thin as possible, to let in the ambient Heat; and in Summer lapped himself close and thick to keep it out.

‡ In all Revolutions of Government, he would make his Court for the Office of Hangman-General; and in the Exercise of that Dignity, wherein he was very dextrous, would make use of || no other Vizard than a long Prayer.

HE had a Tongue so musculous and subtil, that he could twist it up into his Nose, and deliver a strange Kind of Speech from thence. He was also the first in these Kingdoms, who began to improve the Spanish Accomplishment of Braying; and, having large Ears perpetually exposed and erected, he carried his Art to such a Perfection, that it was a Point of great Difficulty to distinguish

* The Villainies and Cruelties committed by Enthusiasts and Fanaticks among us were all performed under the Disguise of Religion and long Prayers.

† They affect Differences in Habit and Behaviour.

‡ They are severe Persecutors, and all in a Form of Cant and Devotion.

|| Cromwell and his Confederates went, as they called it, to seek God, when they resolved to murder the King.

guish, either by the View or the Sound, between the Original and the Copy.

He was troubled with a Disease, reverse to that called the Stinging of the Tarantula; and would run a Dog mad at the Noise of Musick, especially a Pair of Bag-piper. But he would cure himself again, by taking two or three Turns in Westminster-hall, or Billingsgate, or in a Boarding-school, or the Royal-Exchange, or a State Coffee-house.

He was a Person that † feared no Colours, but mortally hated all, and upon that Account bore a cruel Aversion against Painters, insomuch, that in his Paroxysms, as he walked the Streets, he would have his Pockets loaden with Stones, to pelt at the Signs.

HAVING, from this Manner of Living, frequent Occasion to scash himself, he would often leap over Head and Ears into the Water, although it were in the midst of the Winter, but was always obliged to come out again much warmer, if possible, than he went in.

He was the first that ever found out the Secret of contriving a † Superficious Medicine to be conveyed in at the Ear: it was a Compound of Sal-petre and Balm of Gilead, with a little Pilgrim's Salve.

He wore a large Plaster of artificial Cauls on his Stomach, with the fervor of which he could set him in a quitting. He the famous Blark, upon Application of a red hot Iron.

L 3

H:

This is to expose our Dissenters Aversion from Instrumental Musick in Churches. W. Wotton.

† They quarrel at the most innocent Decency and Ornament, and defaced the Statues and Paintings on all the Churches in England.

† Farriack Preaching, composed either of Hell and Damnation, or a fulsome Description of the Joys of Heaven, both in such a dirty, nauseous Style, as to be well resembled to Pilgrim's Salve.

* HE would stand in the Turning of a Street, and, calling to those who passed by, would cry to one; Worthy Sir, do me the Honour of a good Slap in the Chaps: To another, Honest Friend, pray favour me with a handsom Kick on the Arse: Madam, shall I entreat a small Box on the Ear, from your Ladyship's fair Hands? Noble Captain, Lend a reasonable Thwack, for the Love of God, with that Cane of yours over these poor Shoulders. And when he had by such earnest Sollicitations made a Shift to procure a Basting sufficient to swell up his Fancy and his Sides, he would return home extremely comforted, and full of terrible Accounts of what he had undergone for the Publick Good. Observe this Stroke, (said he, shewing his bare Shoulders,) a plaguy Janitary gave it me this very Morning at seven a Clock, as, with much ado, I was driving off the Great Turk. Neighbours, mind this broken Head deserbeth a Plaster; had poor Jack been tender of his Noddle, you would have seen the Pope, and the French King, long before this Time of Day, among your Wives and your Warehouses. Dear Christians, the Great Mogul was come as far as White Chappel, and you may thank these poor Sides, that he hath not (God blejs us) already swallowed up Man, Woman, and Child.

† It was highly worth observing the singular Effects of that Aversion, or Antipathy, which Jack

* The Fanaticks have always had a Way of affecting to run into Persecution, and count vast Merit upon every little Hardship they suffer.

† The Papists and Fanaticks, although they appear the most averse from each other, yet bear a near Resemblance in many Things, as hath been observed by Learned Men.

Ibid. The Agreement of our Dissenters and the Papists in that which Bishop Stillingsfleet called, The Fanaticism of the Church of Rome, is ludicrously described for several Pages together by Jack's Likeness

Jack and his Brother Peter seemed, even to an Affestation, to bear against each other. Peter had lately done some Rogueries that forced him to abscond; and he seldom ventured to stir out before Night, for fear of Bayliffs. Their Lodgings were at the two most distant Parts of the Town from each other; and whenever their Occasions, or Humours called them abroad, they would make Choice of the oddest unlikely Times, and most uncouth Rounds they could invent; that they might be sure to avoid one another: Yet, after all this, it was their perpetual Fortune to meet. The Reason of which is easy enough to apprehend: For, the Phrenzy and the Spleen of both, having the same Foundation, we may look upon them as two Pair of Compasses, equally extended, and the fixed Foot of each, remaining in the same Center; which, although moving contrary Ways at first, will be sure to encounter somewhere or other in the Circumference. Besides, it was among the great Misfortunes of Jack, to bear a huge Personal Resemblance with his Brother Peter. Their Humour and Dispositions were not only the same, but there was a close Analogy in their Shape, and Size, and their Mien. Insomuch, as nothing was more frequent than for a Bayliff to seize Jack by the Shoulders, and cry, Mr. Peter, You are the King's Prisoner. Or, at other Times, for one of Peter's nearest Friends to accost Jack with open Arms, Dear Peter, I am glad to see thee, pray send me one of your best Medicines for the Worms. This, we may suppose, was a mortifying Return of those Pains and Proceedings, Jack had laboured in so long: And finding, how directly opposite all his Endeavours had answered to the sole End and Intention, which he had proposed to himself, how could ness to Peter, and their being often mistaken for each other, their frequent Meeting, when they least intended it. W. Wotton.

could it avoid having terrible Effects upon a Head and Heart so furnished as his? However, the poor Remainders of his Coat, bore all the Punishment: The orient Sun never entered upon his diurnal Progress, without missing a Piece of it. He hired a Taylor to stitch up the Collar so close, that it was ready to choak him, and squeezed out his Eyes at such a Rate, as one could see nothing but the White. What little was left of the main Substance of the Coat, he rubbed every Day, for two Hours, against a rough-cast Wall, in order to grind away the Remnant of Lace and Embroidery; but at the same Time went on with so much Violence, that he proceeded a Heathen Philosopher. Yet, after all he could do of this kind, the Success continued still to disappoint his Expectation. For, as it is the Nature of Rags, to bear a kind of mock Resemblance to Finery; there being a sort of fluttering Appearance in both, which is not to be distinguished at a Distance, in the Dark, or by short-sighted Eyes; So, in those Junctures, he faded with Jack and his Tatters, that they offered to the first View a ridiculous Flaming, which, affixing the Resemblance in Perion and Am, thwarted all his Projects of Separation, and left so near a Similitude between them, as frequently deceived the very Disciples and Followers of both.

* * * * *

* * * * * Desum
 * * * * * nonnulla.
 * * * * *

THE old Schizemian Proverb said well, That it is with Men, as with Asses; neque enim possunt tenere fastum, nisi habent aures in auribus. Yet, I think, we may affirm, that it hath been verified by repeated Experience, Effugiet tamen Lat. sceleratus vincula Proteus.

It is good, therefore, to read the Maxims of our Ancestors, with great Allowances to Times and Persons: For, if we look into primitive Records, we shall find, that no Revolutions have been so great, or so frequent, as those of human Ears. In former Days, there was a curious Invention to catch and keep them; which, I think, we may justly reckon among the Artes perditæ: And how can it be otherwise, when, in these latter Centuries, the very Species is not only diminished to a very lamentable Degree, but the poor Remainder is also degenerated so far, as to mock our skilfullest Tennure? For, if the only sitting of one Ear in a Stag, hath been found sufficient to propagate the Defect through a whole Forest; why should we wonder at the greatest Consequences, from so many Loppings and Mutilations, to which the Ears of our Fathers and our own, have been of late so much exposed: It is true, indeed, that while this Island of ours was under the Dominion of Grace, many Endeavours were made to improve the Growth of Ears once more among us. The Proportion of Largeness, was not only looked upon as an Ornament of the Outward Man, but as a Type of Grace in the Inward. Besides, it is held by Naturalists, that if there be a Protuberancy of Parts in the Superior Region of the Body, as in the Ears and Nose, there must be a Parity also in the Inferior: And therefore, in that truly pious Age, the Males in every Assembly, according as they were gifted, appeared very forward in exposing their Ears to view, and the Regions about them; because * *Hip- * Lib. de aere* ocrates tells us, that when the Vein locis & a- behind the Ear happens to be cut, a quis.
Man becomes an Eunuch: And the Females were nothing backwarder in beholding and edifying by them: Whereof those, who had already used the Means, looked about them with great Concern, in hopes of conceiving a suitable Offspring spring by such a Prospect: Others, who stood Candidates for Benevolence, found there a plentiful Choice, and were sure to fix upon such as discovered the largest Ears, that the Breed might not dwindle between them. Lastly, the devout Sisters, who looked upon all extraordinary Dilatations of that Member, as Protrusions of Zeal, or spiritual Excrescencies, were sure to honour every Head they sat upon, as if they had been Marks of Grace; but, especially, that of the Preacher, whose Ears were usually of the prime Magnitude; which, upon that Account, he was very frequent and exact in exposing with all Advantages to the People: In his Rhetorical Paroxysms, turning sometimes to hold forth the one, and sometimes to hold forth the other: From which Custom, the whole Operation of Preaching is to this very Day, among their Professors, styled by the Phrase of Holding forth.

SUCH was the Progress of the Saints for advancing the Size of that Member; and it is thought, the Success would have been every way answerable, if, in Process of Time, * a cruel King had not arose, who raised a bloody Persecution against all Ears above a certain Standard: Upon which, some were glad to hide their flourishing Sprouts in a black Border, others crept wholly under a Periwig: Some were slit, others cropped, and a great Number sliced off to the Stumps. But of this more hereafter, in my general History of Ears; which I design very speedily to bestow upon the Publick.

FROM this brier Survey of the falling State of Ears, in the last Age, and the small Care had to advance their antient Growth in the present; it is manifest, how little Reason we can have to rely upon a Hold so short, so weak, and so slippery; and that whoever desires to catch Mankind fast, must must have Recourse to some other Methods. Now, he that will examine Human Nature with Circumspection enough, may discover several Handles, whereof the * Six Senses afford one a Piece, beside a great Number that are screwed to the Passions, and some few rivetted to the Intellect. Among these last Curiosity is one, and, of all others, affords the firmest Grasp: Curiosity, that Spur in the Side, that Bridle in the Mouth, that Ring in the Nose, of a lazy, an impatient, and grunting Reader. By this Handle it is, that an Author should seize upon his Readers; which as soon as he hath once compassed, all Resistance and Struggling are in vain; and they become his Prisoners as close as he pleases, till Weariness or Dulness force him to let go his Gripe.

* This was King Charles the Second, who, at his Restoration, turned out all the Dissenting Teachers that would not conform.

And therefore, I the Author of this miraculous Treatise, having hitherto, beyond Expectation, maintained by the aforesaid Handle a firm Hold upon my gentle Readers, it is with great Reluctance that I am at length compelled to remit my Grasp; leaving them, in the Perusal of what remaineth, to that natural Ositancy inherent in the Tribe. I can only assure thee, Courteous Reader, for both our Comforts, that my Concern is altogether equal to thine, for my Unhappiness in losing, or mislaying among my Papers the remaining Part of these Memoirs; which consisted of Accidents, Turns, and Adventures, both new, agreeable, and surprizing; and, therefore, calculated, in all due Points, to the delicate Taste of this our noble Age. But, alas with my utmost Endeavours, I have been able only to retain a few of the Heads. Under which there was a full Account, how Peter got a Protection out of the King's Bench; and of a * Reconcilement between

* In the Reign of King James the Second, the Presbyterians, by the King's Invitation, joined with the Papists.

tween Jack and him, upon a Design they had in a certain rainy Night to trepan Brother Martin into a Spunging-House, and there strip him to the Skin. How Martin, with much ado, shewed them both a fair Pair of Heels. How a new Warrant came out against Peter: Upon which, how Jack left him in the Lurch, stole his Protection, and made use of it himself. How Jack's Tatters came into Fashion in Court and City; How he * got upon a great Horse, and eat † Custard. But the Particulars of all these, with several others, which have now slid out of my Memory, are lost, beyond all Hopes of Recovery. For which Misfortune, leaving my Readers to condole with each other, as far as they shall find it to agree with their several Constitutions; but conjuring them by all the Friendship that hath passed between Us, from the Title-page to this, not to proceed so far as to injure their Healths, for an Accident past Remedy; I now go on to the Ceremonial Part of an accomplished Writer, and therefore, by a Courtly Modern, least of all others to be omitted.

pists against the Church of England, and addressed him for the Repeal of the penal Laws and Test. The King, by his Dispensing Power, gave Liberty of Conscience, which both Papists and Presbyterians made use of; but upon the Revolution, the Papists being down of Course, the Presbyterians freely continued their Assemblies, by Virtue of King James's Indulgence, before they had a Toleration by Law; this I believe the Author means by Jack's stealing Peter's Protection, and making use of it himself.

* Sir Humphry Edwyn, a Presbyterian, was some Years ago Lord-Mayor of London, and had the Indulgence to go in his Formalities to a Conventicle, with the Ensign of his Office.

† Custard a famous Dish at a Lord Mayor's Feast.

T H E C O N C L U S I O N.

G O I N G too long is a Cause of Abortion as effectual, although not so frequent, as Going too short; and holdeth true especially in the Labours of the Brain. Well fare the Heart of that noble * Jesuit, who first adventured to confess in Print, that leans. Books must be suited to their several Seasons, like Dress, and Dyet, and Diversions: And better fare our noble Nation, for refining upon this among other French Modes. I am living fast, to see the Time when a Book, that misleth its Tide, shall be neglected, as the Moon by Day, or like Mackarel a Week after the Season. No Man hath more nicely observed our Climate, than the Bookseller who bought the Copy of this Work; he knoweth to a Tittle what Subjects will best go off in a dry Year, and which it is proper to expose foremost, when the Weather-glass is filled to much Rain. When he had seen this Treatise, and consulted his Almanack upon it; he gave me to understand, that he had manifestly considered the two principal Things, which were the Bulk, and the Subject; and found, it would never take but at a long long Vacation, and then only in Case it should happen to be a hard Year for Turnips. Upon which I desired to know, considering my urgent Necessities, what he thought might be acceptable this Month. He looked Westward, and said, I doubt we shall have a Fit of bad Weather; however, if you could prepare some pretty little Banter, (but not in Verse) or a small Treatise upon the ----- it would run like Wild-fire. But, if it hold up, I have already hired an Author to write something against Dr. Bently, which I am sure will turn to Account.

M

At length we agreed upon this Expedient; that when a Customer comes for one of these, and desires in Confidence to know the Author; he will tell him very privately, as a Friend, naming which ever of the Wits shall happen to be that Week in the Vogue; and if Durfy's last Play should be in Course, I had as lieve he may be the Person as Congreve. This I mention, because I am wonderfully well acquainted with the present Relish of Courteous Readers; and have often observed, with singular Pleasure, that a Fly, driven from a Honey-pot, will immediately, with very good Appetite alight, and finish his Meal on an Excrement.

I HAVE one Word to say upon the Subject of profound Writers, who are grown very numerous of late: And, I know very well, the judicious World is resolved to list me in that Number. I conceive therefore, as to the Business of being profound, that it is with Writers, as with Wells; a Person with good Eyes may see to the Bottom of the deepest, provided any Water be there; and that often, when there is nothing in the World at the Bottom, besides Dryness and Dirt, although it be but a Yard and a half under Ground, it shall pass, however, for wondrous deep, upon no wiser a Reason than because it is wondrous Dark.

I AM now trying an Experiment very frequent among Modern Authors, which is, to write upon Nothing, when the Subject is utterly exhausted, to let the Pen still move on; by some called, the Ghost of Wit, delighting to walk after the Death of its Body. And to say the Truth, there seemeth to be no Part of Knowledge in fewer Hands, than that of discerning when to have done. By the Time that an Author hath writ out a Book, he and his Readers are become old Acquaintants, and grow very loth to part: So that I have sometimes known it to be in Writing, as in Visiting, where the Ceremony of taking Leave hath employed more Time than the whole Conversation before. The Conclusion of a Treatise resembles the Conclusion of Human Life, which hath sometimes been compared to the End of a Feast; where few are satisfied to depart, ut plenus vite conviva: For Men will sit down after the fullest Meal, although it be only to doze, or to sleep out the rest of the Day. But, in this latter, I differ extremely from other Writers; and shall be too proud, if by all my Labours I can have any Ways contributed to the Repose of Mankind in † Times so turbulent and unquiet as these. Neither do I think such an Employment so very alien from the Office of a Wit, as some would suppose. For among a very polite Nation in

* Greece, there were the same Temples built, and consecrated to Sleep * Træzenii Pausan, l. 2. and the Muses, between which two Deities they believed the strictest Friendship was established.

I HAVE one concluding Favour to request of my Reader; that he will not expect to be equally diverted and informed by every Line or every Page of this Discourse, but give some Allowance to the

M 2

Author's

† This was writ before the Peace of Reswick.

Author's Spleen, and short Fits or Intervals of Dulness, as well as his own; and lay it seriously to his Conscience, whether, if he were walking the Streets, in dirty Weather, or a rainy Day, he would allow it fair Dealing in Folks at their Ease from a Window to critick his Gait, and ridicule his Dress at such a Juncture.

IN my Disposure of Employments of the Brain, I have thought fit to make Invention the Master, and give Method and Reason the Office of its Lac-quays. The Cause of this Distribution was, from observing it my peculiar Case, to be often under a Temptation of being Witty upon Occasion, where I could be neither Wise nor Sound, nor any Thing to the Matter in Hand. And I am too much a Servant of the modern Way, to neglect any such Opportunities, whatever Pains or Improperities I may be at to introduce them. For, I have observed, that from a laborious Collection of Seven Hundred Thirty Eight Flowers, and shining Hints of the best modern Authors, digested with great Reading into my Book of Common-places, I have not been able, after five Years, to draw, hook, or force into common Conversation, any more than a Dozen. Of which Dozen the one Moiety failed of Success, by being dropped among unsuitable Company; and the other cost me so many Strains, and Traps, and Ambages to introduce, that I at length resolved to give it over. Now, this Disappointment, (to discover a Secret) I must own, gave me the first Hint of setting up for an Author; and, I have since found among some particular Friends, that it is become a very general Complaint, and hath produced the same Effects upon many others. For, I have remarked many a forwardly Word to be wholly neglected or despised in Discourse, which hath passed very smoothly, with some Consideration and Esteem, after its Preferment and Sanction in Print. But now, since, by the Liberty and Encouragement couragement of the Press, I am grown absolute Master of the Occasions and Opportunities to expose the Talents I have acquired; I already discover, that the Issues of my Observanda begin to grow too large for the Receipts. Therefore, I shall here pause a while, until I find, by feeling the World's Pulse, and my own, that it will be of absolute Necessity for us both to resume my Pen.

Page 126. To front of Battle of Books.

A Full and True

ACCOUNT

OF THE

BATTLE,

Fought last FRIDAY,

BETWEEN THE

ANTIEN T and the MODERN

BOOKS

IN St. JAMES'S

LIBRARY.

DUBLIN:

Printed in the Year MDCCCLVI.

✓

THE BOOKSELLER
TO THE READER.

THE following Discourse, as it is unquestionably of the same Author, so it seemeth to have been written about the same Time with the former, I mean, the Year 1697, when the famous Dispute was on Foot, about antient and modern Learning. The Controversy took its Rise from an Essay of Sir William Temple's upon that Subject; which was answered by W. Wotton, B. D. with an Appendix by Dr. Bentley, endeavouring to destroy the Credit of Æsop and Phalaris for Authors, whom Sir William Temple had, in the Essay before-mentioned, highly commended. In that Appendix, the Doctor falls hard upon a new Edition of Phalaris, put out by the Honourable Charles Boyle (now Earl of  Orrery*;) to which Mr. Boyle replied at large, with great Learning and Wit; and the Doctor voluminously rejoined. In this Dispute, the Town highly resented to see a Person of Sir William Temple's Character and Merits roughly used by the two Reverend Gentlemen aforesaid, and without any Manner of Provocation. At length, there appearing no End of the Quarrel, our Author telleth us, that the Books in St. James's Library, looking upon themselves as Parties principally concerned, took up the Controversy, and came to a decisive Battle: But the Manuscript, by the Injury of Fortune, or Weather, being in several Places imperfect, we cannot learn to which Side the Victory fell.

up

* Father of John, Earl of Corke and Orrery.

I MUST warn the Reader, to beware of applying to Persons what is here meant only of Books, in the most literal Sense. So, when Virgil is mentioned, we are not to understand the Person of a famous Poet, called by that Name, but only certain Sheets of Paper, bound up in Leather, containing in Print the Works of the said Poet, and so of the rest.

THE
P R E F A C E
OF THE AUTHOR.

SATYR is a Sort of Glass, wherein Beholders do generally discover every Body's Face but their own; which is the chief Reason for that kind Reception it meets in the World, and that so very few are offended with it. But if it should happen otherwise, the Danger is not great; and I have learned, from long Experience, never to apprehend Mischief from those Understandings I have been able to provoke: For Anger and Fury, though they add Strength to the Sinews of the Body, yet are found to relax those of the Mind, and to render all its Efforts feeble and impotent.

THERE is a Brain that will endure but one Scumming: Let the Owner gather it with Discretion, and manage his little Stock with Husbandry; but,
of

of all Things, let him beware of bringing it under the Lash of his Betters; because, That will make it all bubble up into Impertinence, and he will find no new Supply: Wit, without Knowledge, being a Sort of Cream, which gathers in a Night to the Top, and by a skilful Hand may be soon whipt into Froth; but once scummed away, what appears underneath will be fit for nothing but to be thrown to the Hogs.

A FULL and TRUE
 A C C O U N T
 O F T H E
 B A T T L E,
 Fought last FRIDAY, &c.

WHOEVER examines with due Circumspection into the Annual Records of Time, will find it remarked, That War is the Child of Pride; and Pride the Daugh- ter of Riches; the former of which Assertions may be soon granted; but one cannot so easily subscribe to the latter: For Pride is nearly related to Beggary and Want; either by Father or Mother, and sometimes by both: And, to speak naturally, it very seldom happens among Men to fall out, when all have enough: Invasions usually travelling from North to South, that is to say, from Poverty to Plenty.
 The most ancient and natural Grounds of Quarrels are Lust and Jealousy; which, although we may allow to be Brethren or collateral Branches of Pride, are certainly the Issues of Want. For, to speak in the Phrase of Writers upon Politicks, we may observe in the Republick of Dogs, (which in its Original seemeth to be an Insultation of the Man.)
 N that

* Riches produceth Pride; Pride is War's Ground,
 &c. Vid. Ephem. de Mar, Clark Opt. Edit.

that the whole State is ever in the profoundest Peace after a full Meal; and that Civil Broils arise among them, when it happens for one great Bone to be seized on by some leading Dog, who either divides it among the Pets, and then it falls to an Oligarchy, or keeps it to himself, and then it runs up to a Tyranny. The same Reasoning also holds Place among them, in those Dissensions we behold upon a Turpescency in any of their Females. For, the Right of Possession lying in common, (it being impossible to establish a Property in so delicate a Case) Jealousies and Suspitions do so abound, that the whole Commonwealth of that Street is reduced to a manifest State of War of every Citizen against every Citizen; until some one of more Courage, Conduct, or Fortune than the rest, seizeth and enjoys the Prize. Upon which naturally ariseth Plenty of Heart-burning, and Envy, and Snarling against the happy Dog. Again, if we look upon any of these Republicks engaged in a Foreign War, either of Invasion or Defence, we shall find, the same Reasoning will serve, as to the Grounds and Occasions of each; and that Poverty, or Want, in some Degree or other, (whether real, or in Opinion, which makes no Alteration in the Case) hath a great Share, as well as Faith, on the Part of the Aggressor.

Now, whoever will please to take this Scheme, and either reduce or adapt it to an intellectual State, or Commonwealth of Learning, will soon discover the first Ground of Disagreement between the two great Parties at this Time in Arms; and may form just Conclusions upon the Merits of either Cause. But the Issue or Events of this War are not so easy to conjecture at: For the present Quarrel is so enflamed by the warm Heads of either Faction, and the Pretensions somewhere or other so exorbitant, as not to admit the least Overtures of Accommodation. This Quarrel first began (as I have heard it affirmed by an old Dweller in the Neighbourhood) about a small

a small Spot of Ground, ling and bring upon one of the two Tops of the Hill Parnassus; the highest and largest of which had, it seemeth, been Time out of Mind in quiet Possession of certain Tenants called the Antients; and the other was held by the Moderns. But these, disliking their present Station, sent certain Ambassadors to the Antients, complaining of a great Nuisance, how the Height of that Part of Parnassus quite spoiled the Prospect of theirs, especially towards the East; and therefore, to avoid a War, offered them the Choice of this Alternative; either that the Antients would please to remove themselves and their Effects down to the lower Summit, which the Moderns would graciously surrender to them, and advance in their Place; or else, that the said Antients will give leave to the Moderns to come with Shovels and Mattocks, and level the said Hill, as low as they shall think it convenient. To which the Antients made Answer; How little they expected such a Message as this, from a Colony, whom they had admitted, out of their own free Grace, to so near a neighbourhood. That, as to their own Seat, they were Aborigines of it; and therefore, to talk with them of a Removal, or Surrender, was a Language they did not understand. That, if the Height of the Hill, on their Side, shortened the Prospect of the Moderns, it was a Disadvantage they could not help; but desired them to consider, whether that Injury (if it be any) were not largely recompensed by the Shade and Shelter it afforded them. That, as to the leveling or digging down, it was either Folly or Ignorance to propose it, if they did, or did not know, how that Side of the Hill was an entire Rock, which would break their Tools and Hearts, without any Damage to itself. That they would therefore advise the Moderns, rather to raise their own Side of the Hill, than dream of pulling down that of the Antients; to the former of which they would not only give Licence, but also largely contribute. All this was reflected by the Moderns with much Indignation, who still insisted upon one of the two Expedients; and so this Difference broke out into a long and obstinate War, maintained on the one Part by Resolution, and by the Courage of certain Leaders and Allies; but, on the other, by the Greatness of their Number, upon all Defeats affording continual Recruits. In this Quarrel, whole Rivulets of Ink have been exhausted, and the Virulence of both Parties enormously augmented. Now, it must here be understood, that Ink is the great missile Weapon in all Battles of the Learned; which, conveyed through a Sort of Engine, called a Quill, infinite Numbers of these are darted at the Enemy, by the valiant on each Side, with equal Skill and Violence, as if it were an Engagement of Porcupines. This malignant Liquor was compounded by the Engineer who invented it, of two Ingredients, which are Gall and Cyperus, by its Bitterness and Venom to suit, in some Degree, as well as to foment the Genius of the Combatants. And as the Grecians, after an Engagement, when they could not agree about the Victory, were wont to set up Trophies on both Sides, the beaten Party being content to be at the same Expence, to keep itself in Countenance, (a laudable and antient Custom happily revived of late in the Art of War) so the Learned, after a sharp and bloody Dispute, do on both Sides hang out their Trophies too, which ever comes by the worst. These Trophies have largely inscribed on them the Merits of the Cause; a full impartial Account of such a Battle, and how the Victory fell clearly to the Party that set them up. They are known to the World under several Names; as, Disputes, Arguments, Rejoinders, Brief Considerations, Answers, Replies, Remarks, Reflections, Objections, Comutations. For a very few Days they are fixed up in all publick Places, either by themselves or their zines they call Libraries, there to remain in a Quarter purposely assigned them, and from thenceforth begin to be called Books of Controversy.

Their Title Representatives, for Passengers to gaze at: From whence the chief and largest are removed to certain Magazines

In these Books is wonderfully intitled and preserved the Spirit of each Warrior while he is alive; and, after his Death, his Soul transmigrates there, to inform them. This, at least, is the more common Opinion: But, I believe, it is with Libraries, as with other Cœmeteries, where some Philosophers affirm, that a certain Spirit, which they call Genium Hominis, hovers over the Monument, until the Body is corrupted, and turneth to Dust or to Worms, but then vanisheth or dissolveth: So, we may say, a restless Spirit haunts over every Book, until Dust or Worms have seized upon it; which to some may happen in a few Days, but to others later; and therefore, Books of Controversy, being of all others haunted by the most disorderly Spirits, have always been confined in a separate Lodge from the rest; and, for fear of mutual Violence against each other, it was thought prudent by our Ancestors to bind them to the Peace with strong Iron Chains. Of which Invention the original Occasion was this; when the Works of Scotus first came out, they were carried to a certain great Library, and had Lodging appointed them; but this Author was no sooner settled, than he went to visit his Master Aristotle, and there both concerted together to seize Plato by main Force, and turn him out from his antient Station among the Divines, where he had peaceably dwelt near eight hundred Years. The Attempt succeeded, and the two Churpers have reigned ever since in his Stead; but, to maintain Quiet for the future, it was decreed, that all Books of the larger size should be held fast with a Chain.

By this Expedient, the publick Peace of Libraries might certainly have been preserved, if a new Species of controversial Books had not arose of late Years, intitled with a most malignant spirit, from the War above-mentioned, between the Learned, about the higher Summit of Parnassus.

WHEN these Books were first admitted into the publick Libraries, I remember to have said upon Occasion to several Persons concerned, how I was sure they would create Broils wherever they came, unless a World of Care were taken: And therefore I advised, that the Champions of each Side should be coupled together, or otherwise mixed, that, like the blending of contrary Poisons, their Malignity might be employed among themselves. And, it seems, I was neither an ill Prophet, nor an ill Counsellor; for it was nothing else but the Neglect of this Caution, which gave Occasion to the terrible Fight, that happened on Friday last, between the Antient and Modern Books in the King's Library. Now, because the Talk of this Battle is so fresh in every Body's Mouth, and the Expectation of the Town so great to be informed in the Particulars; I, being possessed of all Qualifications requisite in an Historian, and retained by neither Party, have resolved to comply with the urgent Importunity of my Friends, by writing down a full impartial Account thereof.

The Guardian of the Regal Library, a Person of great Valour, but chiefly renowned for his † Humanity, had been a fierce Champion for the Moderns, and, in an Engagement upon Parnassus, had vowed, with his own Hands, to knock down the Antient Chief, who guarded a small Pass on the Superior Rock; but, endeavouring to climb up, was cruelly obstructed by his own unhappy Weight and Tendency towards his Center: a Quality, to which those of the Modern Party are extreme subject; for, being light headed, they have in Speculation a wonderful Agility, and conceive nothing too high for them to mount; but in reducing to Practice discover

† The Honourable Mr. Boyle, in the Preface to his Edition of Phalaris, says, he was refused a Manuscript by the Library Keeper, pro solita Humanitate sua.

discover a mighty Pressure about their Posteriors and their Heels. Having thus failed in his Design, the disappointed Champion bore a cruel Rancour to the Antients, which he resolved to gratify, by shewing all Marks of his Favour to the Books of their Adversaries, and lodging them in the fairest Apartments; when, at the same Time, whatever Book had the Boldness to own itself for an Advocate of the Antients, was buried alive in some obscure Corner, and threatened, upon the least Displeasure, to be turned out of Doors. Besides, it so happened, that about this Time there was a strange Confusion of Place among all the Books in the Library, for which several Reasons were assigned. Some imputed it to a great Heap of learned Dust, which a perverse Wind blew off from a Shelf of Moderns into the Keeper's Eyes. Others affirmed, he had a Humour to pick the Worms out of the Schoolmen, and swallow them fresh and fasting; whereof some fell upon his Spleen, and some climbed up into his Head, to the great Perturbation of both. And lastly, others maintained, that, by walking much in the dark about the Library, he had quite lost the Situation of it out of his Head; and therefore, in replacing his Books, he was apt to mistake, and clap Descartes next to Aristotle; poor Plato had got between Hobbes and the Seven Wise Master, and Virgil was hemmed in with Dryden on one Side, and Withers on the other.

MEAN while, those Books, that were Advocates for the Moderns, chose out one from among them, to make a Progress through the whole Library, examine the Number and Strength of their Party, and concert their Affairs. This Messenger performed all Things very industriously, and brought back with him a List of their Forces, in all fifty Thousand, consisting chiefly of Light Horse, heavy armed Foot, and Mercenaries; whereof the Foot were in general but poorly armed, and worse clad; their Horses large, but extremely out of Condition and Heart; however, ever, some few, by trading among the Antients, had furnished themselves tolerably enough.

WHILE Things were in this Ferment, Discord grew extremely high, hot Words passed on both Sides, and ill Blood was plentifully bred. Here a solitary Antient, squeezed up upon a whole Shelf of Moderns, offered fairly to dispute the Case, and to prove by manifest Reasons, that the Priority was due to them, from long Possession, and in regard of their Prudence, Antiquity, and above all, their great Merits towards the Moderns. But these denied the Premises, and seemed very much to wonder, how the Antients could pretend to insist upon their Antiquity, when it was so plain (if they went to that) that the Moderns were much the † According more † Antient of the two. As for any to the modern Obligations they owed to the Antients, Paradox. they renounced them all. It is true, said they, we are informed, some few of our Party have been so mean to borrow their Subsistence from you; but the rest, infinitely the greater Number, (and especially, we French and English), were so far from stooping to so base an Example, that there never passed, until this very Hour, six Words between us. For our Horses are of our own breeding, our Arms of our own forging, and our Cloaths of our own cutting out and sewing. Plato was by Chance upon the next Shelf, and observing those that spoke to be in the ragged Plight mentioned a while ago, their Jakes lean and foundered, their Weapons of rotten Wood, their Armour rusty, and nothing but Rags underneath; he laughed aloud, and in his pleasant Way, swore, by G—, he believed them.

Now, the Moderns have not proceeded in their late Negotiation with Secrecy enough to escape the Notice of the Enemy. For those Advocates, who had begun the Quarrel, by sitting first on foot the Dispute of Precedency, talked so loud of coming to a Battle, that Temple happened to overhear them, and gave immediate Intelligence to the Antients.

who thereupon drew up their scattered Troops together, resolving to act upon the Defensive; upon which, several of the Moderns fled over to their Party, and, among the rest, Temple himself. This Temple having been educated, and long conversed among the Antients, was, of all the Moderns, their greatest Favourite, and became their greatest Champion.

THINGS were at this Crisis, when a material Accident fell out. For, upon the highest Corner of a large Window there dwelt a certain Spider, swollen up to the first Magnitude, by the Destruction of infinite Numbers of Flies, whose Spoils lay scattered before the Gates of his Palace, like human Bones before the Cave of some Giant. The Avenues to his Castle were guarded with Turnpikes and Palisadoes, all after the Modern Way of Fortification. After you had passed several Courts, you came to the Center, wherein you might behold the Constable himself in his own Lodgings, which had Windows fronting to each Avenue, and Ports to sally out upon all Occasions of Prey or Defence. In this Mansion he had for some Time dwelt in Peace and Plenty, without Danger to his Person by Swallows from above, or to his Palace by Brooms from below; when it was the Pleasure of Fortune to conduct thither a wandering Bee, to whose Curiosity a broken Pane in the Glass had discovered itself; and in he went, where expatiating a while, he at last happened to alight upon one of the outward Walls of the Spider's Citadel; which, yielding to the unequal Weight, sunk down to the very Foundation. Thrice he endeavoured to force his Passage, and thrice the Center shook. The Spider within, feeling the terrible Convulsion, supposed at first, that Nature was approaching to her final Dissolution; or else, that Beelzebub, with all his Legions, was come to revenge the Death of many thousands of his Subjects, whom his Enemy had slain and devoured. However, he at length valiantly resolved to issue forth, and

and meet his Fate. Mean while, the Bee had acquitted himself of his Toils, and, posted securely at some Distance, was employed in cleansing his Wings, and disengaging them from the ragged Remnants of the Cobweb. By this Time the Spider was adventured out, when beholding the Chafins, and Ruins, and Dilapidations of his Fortrefs, he was very near at his Wit's End, he stormed and swore like a Madman, and swelled until he was ready to burst. At length casting his Eye upon the Bee, and wisely gathering Causes from Events, (for they knew each other by Sight) A Plague split you, said he, for a giddy Son of a Whore; is it you, with a Vengeance, that have made this Litter here? Could not you look before you, and be d---n'd? Do you think I have nothing else to do (in the Devil's Name) but to Mend and Repair after your Arse? Good Words, Friend, said the Bee, (having pruned himself, and being disposed to drole) I will give you my Hand and Word to come near your Kennel no more; I was never in such a confounded Pickle since I was born. Sirrah, replied the Spider, if it were not for breaking an old Custom in our Family, never to stir abroad against an Enemy, I should come and teach you better Manners. I pray, have Patience, said the Bee, or you will Spend your Substance, and for ought I see you may stand in need of it all, towards the Repair of your House. Rogue, Rogue, replied the Spider, yet, methinks, you should have more Respect to a Person, whom all the World allows to be so much your Betters. By my Truth, said the Bee, the Comparison will amount to a very good Jest, and you will do me a Favour to let me know the Reason, that all the World is pleased to use in so hopeful a Dispute. At this, the Spider, having swelled himself into the Size and Posture of a Disputant, began his Argument in the true Spirit of Controversy, with a Resolution to be heartily scurrilous and angry, to urge on his own Reasons, without the least Regard to the Answers or Objections of his Opposite; and fully pre-determined in his Mind against all Conviction.

NOT to disparage myself, said he, by the Comparison with such a Rascal; what art thou but a Vagabond, without House or Home, without Stock or Inheritance? born to no Possession of your own, but a Pair of Wings, and a Drone-Pipe. Your Livelihood is an universal Plunder upon Nature; a Freebooter over Fields and Gardens; and, for the Sake of Stealing, will rob a Nettle as readily as a Violet. Whereas I am a domestic Animal, furnished with a native Stock within myself. This large Castle (to shew my Improvements in the Mathematicks) is all built with my own Hand, and the Materials extracted altogether out of my own Person.

I am glad, answered the Bee, to hear you grant, at least, that I am come honestly by my Wings and my Voice; for then, it seems, I am obliged to Heaven alone for my Flights and my Musick; and Providence would never have bestowed on me two such Gifts, without designing them for the noblest Ends. I visit, indeed, all the Flowers and Blossoms of the Field and the Garden; but whatever I collect from thence, enriches myself, without the least Injury to their Beauty, their Smell, or their Taste. Now, for you and your Skill in Architecture, and other Mathematicks, I have little to say: In that Building of yours, there might, for ought I know, have been Labour and Method enough; but, by awful Experience for us both, it is too plain the Materials are nought, and, I hope, you will henceforth take Warning, and consider Duration and Matter as well as Method and Art. You boast, indeed, of being obliged to no other Creature, but of drawing and spinning out all from yourself; that is to say, if we may judge of the Liquor in the Vessel by what issues out, you possess a good plentiful Store of Dirt and Poison in your Breast; and although I would by no means lessen or disparage your genuine Stock of either, yet I doubt you are somewhat obliged for an Increase of both to a little foreign Assistance. Your inherent Portion of Dirt doth not fail of Acquisitions, by Sweepings exhaled from below; and one Insect furnishes you with a Share of Poison to destroy another.

another. So that, in short, the Question comes all to this, Whether is the nobler Being of the two, That, which by a lazy Contemplation of four Inches round, by an over-weening Pride, which, feeding and engendering on itself, turns all into Excrement and Venom, producing nothing at all but Flybane and a Cobweb; or That, which, by an universal Range, with long Search, much Study, true Judgment, and Distinction of Things, brings home Honey and Wax.

THIS Dispute was managed with such Eagerness, Clamour, and Warmth, that the two Parties of Books in Arms below stood silent a while, waiting in Suspence what would be the Issue; which was not long undetermined: For the Bee, grown impatient at so much Loss of Time, fled strait away to a Bed of Roses, without looking for a Reply; and left the Spider, like an Orator, collected in himself, and just prepared to Lurk out.

It happened upon this Emergency, that Æsop broke Silence first. He had been of late most barbarously treated by a strange Effect of the Regent's Humanity, who had tore off his Title-Page, sorely defaced one half of his Leaves, and chained him fast among a Shelf of Moderns; where soon discovering how high the Quarrel was like to proceed, he tried all his Arts, and turned himself to a thousand Forms; at length, in the borrowed Shape of an Ajs, the Regent mistook him for a Modern; by which means, he had Time and Opportunity to escape to the Antients, just when the Spider and the Bee were entering into their Contest; to which he gave his Attention with a World of Pleasure; and, when it was ended, swore in the loudest Key, that in all his Life he had never known two Cases so parallel and adapt to each other, as That in the Window, and This upon the Shelves. The Disputants, said he, have admirably managed the Dispute between them, have taken in the full Strength of all that is to be said on both Sides, and exhausted the Substance of every Argument pro and con. It is but to adjust the Reason-

ings

ings of both to the present Quarrel, then to compare and apply the Labours and Fruits of each, as the Bee has learnedly deduced them, and we shall find the Conclusion fall plain and close upon the Moderns and Us. For, pray, Gentlemen, was ever any Thing so Modern as the Spider in his Air, his Turns, and his Paradoxes? He argues in the Behalf of You his Brethren, and Himself, with many Boastings of his native Stock, and great Genius; that he spins and spits wholly from himself, and scorns to own any Obligation or Assistance from without. Then he displays to you his great Skill in Architecture, and Improvement in the Mathematicks. To all this, the Bee, as an Advocate retained by us the Antients, thinks fit to answer, That if one may judge of the great Genius or Inventions of the Moderns, by what they have produced, you will hardly have the Countenance to bear you out in boasting of either. Erect your Schemes with as much Method and Skill as you please; yet, if the Materials be nothing but Dirt, spun out of your own Entrails (the Guts of Modern Brains) the Edifice will conclude at last in a Cobweb; the Duration of which, like that of other Spiders Webs, may be imputed to their being forgotten, or neglected, or hid in a Corner. For any Thing else of Genuine that the Moderns may pretend to, I cannot recollect; unless it be a large Vein of Wrangling and Satyr, much of a Nature and Substance with the Spider's Poison; which, however, they pretend to spit wholly out of themselves, is improved by the same Arts, by feeding upon the Insects and Vermin of the Age. As for Us, the Antients, We are content with the Bee, to pretend to nothing of our own, beyond our Wings and our Voice; that is to say, our Flights and our Language: For the rest, whatever we have got has been by infinite Labour, and Search, and ranging through every Corner of Nature: The Difference is, that instead of Dirt and Poison we have rather chose to fill our Hives with Honey and Wax, thus furnishing Mankind with the two noblest of Things, which are Sweetness and Light.

It is wonderful to conceive the Tumult arisen among the Books, upon the Close of this long Defecant of Ajop: Both Parties took the Hint, and heightened their Animosities so on a sudden, that they resolved it should come to a Battle. Immediately, the two main Bodies withdrew under their several Ensigns to the farther Parts of the Library, and there entered into Cabals, and Consults upon the present Emergency. The Moderns were in very warm Debates upon the Choice of their Leaders, and nothing less than the Fear impending from their Enemies could have kept them from Mutinies upon this Occasion. The Difference was greatest among the Horse, where every private Trooper pretended to the chief Command, from Tasso and Milton, to Dryden and Withers. The Light-Horse were commanded by Coezley and Despreaux. There came the Boxy-men under their valiant Leaders, Des-Cartes, Gassendi, and Hobbes, whose Strength was such, that they could shoot their Arrows beyond the Atmosphere, never to fall down again, but turn, like that of Evauder, into Meteors, or like the Cannon-bell into Stars. Paracelsus brought a Squadron of Stink-Pot-Flingers from the snowy Mountains of Rhatia. There came a vast Body of Dragoons, of different Nations, under the leading of Harvey, their great Aga; Part armed with Scythes, the Weapons of Death; Part with Launces and long Knives, all steeped in Poison; Part shot Bullets of a most malignant Nature, and used white Powder, which infallibly killed without Report. There came several Bodies of heavy-armed Foot, all Mercenaries, under the Ensigns of Guiccardine, Davila, Polydore Virgil, Buchanan, Mariana, Cambden, and others. The Engineers were commanded by Regiomontanus and Wilkins. The rest were a confused Multitude, led by Scotus, Aquinas, and Bellarmin, of mighty Bulk and Stature, but without either Arms, Courage, or Discipline. In the last Place, came infinite Swarms of * Calones, a disorderly Rout led by Leſtrange; Rogues and Raggamuffins, that follow the Camp for nothing but the Plunder; all without Coats to cover them.

came

THE Army of the Antients was much fewer in Number; Homer led the Horse, and Pindar the Light-Horse; Euclid was chief Engineer: Plato and Aristotle commanded the Bow-men, Herodotus and Livy the Foot, Hippocrates the Dragoons. The Allies, led by Vossius and Temple, brought up the Rear.

ALL Things violently tending to a decisive Battle, Fame, who much frequented, and had a large Apartment formerly assigned her in the Regal Library, fled up ſtraight to Jupiter, to whom ſhe delivered a faithful Account of all that paſſed between the two Parties below, (for, among the Gods, ſhe always tells Truth.) Jove, in great Concern, convoketh a Council in the Milky-Way. The Senate aſſembled, he declares the Occaſion of convening them; a bloody Battle juſt impendent between two mighty Armies of Antient and Modern Creatures, called Books, wherein the Celeſtial Inter-eſt was but too deeply concerned. Momus, the Patron of the Moderns, made an excellent Speech in their Favour, which was answered by Pallas, the Protectreſs of the Antients. The Aſſembly was divided in their Affections, when Jupiter commanded the Book of Fate to be laid before him. Immediately were brought by Mercury three large Volumes in Folio, containing Memoirs of all Things paſt, preſent, and to come. The Claiſps were of Silver double gilt; the Covers of celeſtial Turkey Leather, and the Paper ſuch as here on Earth might almoſt paſs for Vellum. Jupiter, having ſilently read the Decree, would communicate the Import to none, but preſently ſhut up the Book.

O 2

WITHOUT

* These are Pamphlets, which are not bound or covered.

WITHOUT the Doors of this Assembly there attended a vast Number of light, nimble Gods, menial Servants to Jupiter: These are his ministering Instruments in all Affairs below. They travel in a Caravan, more or less together, and are fastened to each other like a Link of Gally-slaves, by a light Chain, which passeth from them to Jupiter's great Toe: And yet, in receiving or delivering a Message, they may never approach above the lowest Step of his Throne, where he and they whisper to each other through a long hollow Trunk. These Deities are called by mortal Men Accidents or Events; but the Gods call them Second Causes. Jupiter having delivered his Message to a certain Number of these Divinities, they flew immediately down to the Pinnacle of the Regal Library, and, consulting a few Minutes, entered unseen, and disposed the Parties according to their Orders.

MEAN while, Momus fearing the worst, and calling to mind an antient Prophecy, which bore no very good Face to his Children the Moderns, bent his Flight to the Region of a malignant Deity, called Criticisin. She dwelt on the Top of a snowy Mountain in Nova Zembla; there Momus found her extended in her Den, upon the Spoils of numberless Volumes half devoured. At her right Hand sat Ignorance, her Father and Husband, blind with Age; at her left, Pride her Mother, dressing her up in the Scraps of Paper herself had torn. There was Opinion her Sister, light of Foot, hoodwinked, and headstrong, yet giddy, and perpetually turning. About her played her Children, Noise and Impudence, Dulness and Vanity, Positiveness, Pedantry, and Ill-Manners. The Goddess herself had Claws like a Cat; her Head, and Ears, and Voice, resembled those of an Ass; her Teeth fallen out before; her Eyes turned inward, as if she looked only upon herself; her Diet was the overflowing of her own Gall; her Spleen was so large, as to stand prominent like like a Dug of the first Rate, nor wanted Excrencies in form of Teats, at which a Crew of ugly Monsters were greedily sucking; and, what is wonderful to conceive, the Bulk of Spleen encreased faster than the Sucking could diminish it. Goddess, said Momus, can you sit idly here, while our devout Worshippers, the Moderns, are this Minute entering into a Battle, and, perhaps, now lying under the Swords of their Enemies, who then hereafter will ever sacrifice, or build Altars to our Divinities? Haste therefore to the British Isle, and, if possible, prevent their Destruction, while I make Factions among the Gods, and gain them over to our Party.

MOMUS, having thus delivered himself, stayed not for an Answer, but left the Goddess to her own Relentment: Up she rose in a Rage, and, as it is the Form upon such Occasions, began a Soliloquy, It is I (said she) who gave Wisdom to the Infants and Idiots; by me Children grow wiser than their Parents. By me Beaux become Politicians, and Schoolboys Judges of Philosophy. By me Sophisters debate, and conclude upon the Depths of Knowledge; and Coffee-house Wits instinct by me can correct an Author's Style, and display his minutest Errors, without understanding a Syllable of his Matter or his Language. By me Striplings spend their Judgment, as they do their Estate, before it comes into their Hands. It is I, who have deposed Wit and Knowledge from their Empire over Poetry, and advanced myself in their stead. And shall a few upstart Antients dare oppose me?---But come, my aged Parents, and you my Children dear, and thou my beauteous Sister; let us ascend my Chariot, and haste to assist our devout Moderns, who are now sacrificing to us a Hecatomb, as I perceive by that grateful Smell, which from thence reaches my Nostrils.

THE Goddess and her Train having mounted the Chariot, which was drawn by tame Geese, flew over infinite Regions, shedding her Influence in due Places, till at length she arrived at her beloved Island of Britain; but in hovering over its Metropolis, what Blessings did she not let fall upon her Seminaries of Gresham and Covent-Garden? And now she reached the fatal Plain of St. James's Library, at what Time the two Armies were upon the Point to engage; where entering with all her Caravan unseen, and landing upon a Case of Shelves, now desert, but once inhabited by a Colony of Virtuosos, she stayed a while to observe the Posture of both Armies.

BUT here, the tender Cares of a Mother began to fill her Thoughts, and move in her Breast. For, at the Head of a Troop of modern Bow-men, she cast her Eyes upon her Son Watton; to whom the Fates had assigned a very short Thread. Watton, a young Hero, whom an unknown Father of mortal Race, begot by stolen Embraces with this Goddess. He was the darling of his Mother, above all her Children, and she resolved to go and comfort him. But first, according to the good old Custom of Deities, she cast about to change her Shape, for fear the Divinity of her Countenance might dazzle his mortal Sight, and over-charge the rest of his Senses. She therefore gathered up her Person into an Octavo Compass: Her Body grew white and arid, and split in Pieces with Driness; the thick turned into Pastboard, and the thin into Paper, upon which her Parents and Children artfully strewed a black Juice or Decoction of Gall and Soot, in Form of Letters; her Head, and Voice, and Spleen, kept their primitive Form; and that which before was a Cover of Skin did still continue so. In which Guise she marched on towards the Moderns, undistinguishable in Shape and Dress from the Divine Bently, Watton's dearest Friend. Brazie Watton, said the Goddess, Why do our Troops stand idle here, to spend their present Vigour and Opportunity of this Day? Away let us haste to the Gene- vals, and advise to give the Onset immediately. Having spoke thus, she took the ugliest of her Monsters, full glutted from her Spleen, and flung it invisibly into his Mouth; which, flying strait up into his Head, squeezed out his Eye-balls, gave him a distorted Look, and half overturned his Brain. Then she privately ordered two of her beloved Children, Dulness and Ill-Manners, closely to attend his Person in all Encounters. Having thus accoutred him she vanished in a Mist, and the Hero perceived it was the Goddess his Mother.

THE destined Hour of Fate being now arrived, the Fight began; whereof before I dare adventure to make a particular Description, I must, after the Example of other Authors, petition for a hundred Tongues, and Mouths, and Hands, and Pens; which would all be too little to perform so immense a Work. Say, Goddess, that presidest over History, who it was first advanced in the Field of Battle. Paracelsus, at the Head of his Dragoons, observing Galen in the adverse Wing, darted his Javelin with a mighty Force, which the brave Ancient received upon his Shield, the Point breaking in the second Fold.

His pauca desunt.

They bore the wounded Aga
on their Shields to his Chariot

Desunt nonnulla.

THEN Aristotle, observing Bacon advance with a furious Mien, drew his Bow to the Head, and let fly his Arrow, which missed the valiant Modern, and went hissing over his Head; but Des Cartes it hit: The Steel Point quickly found a Defect in his Head-piece; it pierced the Leather and the Pastboard, and went in at his right Eye. The Torture of the Pain whirled the valiant Bore-man round, until Death, like a Star of superior Influence, drew

*Ingens hiatus hic
in MS.*

drew him into his own Vortex.

when Homer appeared at the Head of the Cavalry, mounted on a furious Horse, with Difficulty managed by the Rider himself, but which no other Mortal durst approach: He rode among the Enemies Ranks, and bore down all before him. Say, Goddess, whom he slew first, and whom he slew last. First, Gondibert advanced against him, clad in heavy Armour, and mounted on a staid sober Gelding, not so famed for his Speed as his Docility in kneeling, whenever his Rider would mount or alight. He had made a

* Vide Homer.

Vow to Pallas, that he would never leave the Field, until he had spoiled. * Homer of his Armour; Madman, who had never once seen the Weaver, nor understood his Strength. Him Homer overthrew, Horse and Man to the Ground, there to be trampled and choaked in the Dirt. Then, with a long Spear, he slew Denham, a stout Modern, who from his † Father's Side derived his Lineage from Apollo, but his Mother was of mortal Race. He fell, and hit the Earth. The Celestial Part of him Apollo took, and made it a Star, but the Terrestrial lay wallowing upon the Ground. Then Homer flew Wally with a Kick of his Horse's Heel; he took Pallas of his mighty Force out of his Saddle, then hurried on at Emmeline, with the same Elbow dashing out both their Brains.

On the left Wing of the Horse, Vigil appeared in shining Armour, completely fitted to his Body; he was mounted on a dapple grey Steed, the Slow-

† Sir John Denham's Epithets are very unequal, extremely good, and very bad, so that his Detractors said, he was not the true Author of Cooper's Hill.

ness of whose Pace was an Effect of the highest Mettle and Vigour. He cast his Eye on the adverse Wing, with a Desire to find an Object worthy of Valour, when, behold, upon a sorrel Gelding of a monstrous Size, appeared a Foe, issuing from among the thickest of the Enemy's Squadrons, but his Speed was less than his Noise; for his Horse, old and lean, spent the Dregs of his Strength in a high Trot, which, although it made slow Advances, yet caused a loud clashing of his Armour, terrible to hear. The two Cavaliers had now approached within the Throw of a Lance, when the Stranger desired a Parley, and lifting up the Vizard of his Helmet, a Face hardly appeared from within, which, after a Pause, was known for that of the renowned Dryden. The brave Antient suddenly started, as one possessed with Surprize and Disappointment together: For, the Helmet was nine times too large for the Head, which appeared situate far in the hinder Part, even like the Lady in a Lobster, or like a Mouse under a Canopy of State, or like a shriveled Beau from within the Pent-house of a modern Perriwig: And the Voice was suited to the Visage, sounding weak and remote. Dryden in a long Harangue soothed up the good Antient, called him Father, and, by a large Deduction of Genealogies, made it plainly appear, that they were nearly related. Then he humbly proposed an Exchange of Armour, as a lasting Mark of Hospitality between them. Virgil consented (for the Goddess's Diffidence came unseen, and cast a Mist before his Eyes) Vide Homer, although his was of Gold, and cost a hundred Beeves, the other's but of rusty Iron. However this glittering Armour became the Modern yet worse than his own. Then they agreed to exchange Horses; but when it came to the Trial, Dryden was afraid, and utterly unable to mount Alter hiatus in mount. * * * * *

MS.

Lucan appeared upon a fiery Horse, of admirable Shape, but head-strong, bearing the Rider where he list, over the Field; he made a mighty Slaughter among the Enemy's Horse; which Destruction to stop, Blackmore a famous Modern (but one of the Mercenaries) strenuously opposed himself, and darted a Javelin, with a strong Hand, which, falling short of its Mark, struck deep in the Earth. Then Lucan threw a Lance; but Æsculapius came unseen, and turned off the Point. Brave Modern, said Lucan, I perceive some God protects you, for never did my Arm so deceive me before: But what Mortal can contend with a God? Therefore let us fight no longer, but present Gifts to each other. Lucan then bestowed the Modern a Pair of Spurs, and Blackmore gave Lucan a Bridle.

Pauca desunt. * * * * *
Greech; but, the Goddess Dulness took a Cloud, formed into the Shape of Horace, armed and mounted, and placed it in a flying Posture before him. Glad was the Cavalier to begin a Combat with a flying Fog, and pursued the Image, threatening loud: till at last it led him to the peaceful Bower of his Father Ogleby, by whom he was disarmed, and assigned to his Repose.

THEN Pindar flew ----, and ----, and Oldham, and ---, and Ara the Amazon light of Foot; never advancing in a direct Line, but wheeling with incredible Agility and Force, he made a terrible Slaughter among the Enemy's Light-horse. Him when Cowley observed, his generous Heart burned within him, and he advanced against the fierce Antient, imitating his Address, and Pace, and Career, as well as the Vigour of his Horse, and his own Skill would allow. When the two Cavaliers had approached approached within the Length of three Javelins; first Cowley threw a Lance, which missed Pindar, and passing into the Enemy's Ranks, fell ineffectual to the Ground. Then Pindar darted a Javelin so large and weighty, that scarce a Dozen Cavaliers, as Cavaliers are in our degenerate Days, could raise it from the Ground: Yet he threw it with Ease, and it went by an unerring Hand, singing through the Air; nor could the Modern have avoided present Death, if he had not luckily opposed the Shield that had been given him by Venus. And now both Heroes drew their Swords, but the Modern was so aghast and disordered, that he knew not where he was; his Shield dropped from his Hands, thrice he fled, and thrice he could not escape; at last he turned, and lifting up his Hands, in the Posture of a Suppliant, Godlike Pindar, said he, spare my Life, and possess my Horse with these Arms; besides the Ransom which my Friends will give, when they hear I am alive, and your Prisoner. Dog, said Pindar, let your Ransom stay with your Friends; but your Carcase shall be left for the Fowls of the Air, and the Beasts of the Field. With that he raised his Sword, and with a mighty Stroke cleaved the wretched Modern in twain, the Sword pursuing the Blow; and one half lay panting on the Ground, to be trod in Pieces by the Horses Feet, the other half was born by the frighted Steed through the Field. This Venus took, and washed it seven Times in Ambrosia, then struck it thrice with a Sprig of Amarant; upon which the Leather grew round and soft, and the Leaves turned into Feathers, and being gilded before continued gilded still; so it became a Dove, and she harnessed it to her her Chariot.

* I do not approve the Author's Judgement in this, for I think Cowley's Pindaricks are much preferable to his Miltreiss.

Hiatus valde deflexus in MS.

DAY being far spent, and the numerous Forces of the Moderns half inclining to a Retreat, there issued forth from a Squadron of their

The Episode heavy armed Foot a Captain, whose of Bentley Name was Bentley; in Person, the and Wotton. most deformed of all the Moderns;

Tall, without Shape or Comeliness; Large, but without Strength or Proportion. His Armour was patched up of a thousand incoherent Pieces; and the Sound of it, as he marched, was loud and dry, like that made by the Fall of a Sheet of Lead, which an Etesian Wind bloweth suddenly down from the Roof of some Steeple. His Helmet was of old rusty Iron, but the Vizard was Brass, which, tainted by his Breath, corrupted into Copperas, nor wanted Gall from the same Fountain; so that, whenever provoked by Anger or Labour, an atramentous Quality, of most malignant Nature, was seen to distil from his Lips. In his † right Hand he grasped a Flail, and (that he might never be unprovided of an offensive Weapon) a Vessel of Ordure in his left: Thus, compleatly armed, he advanced with a slow and heavy Pace, where the modern Chiefs were holding a Consult upon the Sum of Things; who, as he came onwards, laughed to behold his crooked Leg, and hump Shoulder, which his Boot and Armour vainly endeavouring to hide, were forced to comply with, and expose. The Generals made use of him for his Talent of Railing; which, kept within Government, proved frequently of great service to their Cause,

† The Person here spoken of is famous for letting Ay at every Body without Distinction, and using mean and foul Scurrilities.

Cause, but at other Times did more Mischief than Good; for at the least Touch of Offence, and often without any at all, he would, like a wounded Elephant, convert it against his Leaders.

Such, at this Juncture, was the Disposition of Bentley, grieved to see the Enemy prevail, and dissatisfied with every Body's Conduct but his own. He humbly gave the modern Generals to understand, that he conceived with great Submission, they were all a Pack of Rogues, and Fools, and Sons of Whores, and d--mned Cowards, and confounded Loggerheads, and illiterate Whelps, and nonsensical Scoundrels: That if himself had been constituted General, those presumptuous Dogs, the Antients, would long before this have been beaten out of the Field. You, said he, sit here idle, but Vile Homer.

when I, or any other valiant Mo- de Therfite.

den, kill an Enemy, you are sure to seize the Spoil. But I will not march one Foot against the Foe. till you allow me, that whatever I take or kill, his Arms I shall quietly possess. Bentley having spoke thus, Scalliger bestowing him a sour Look; Miserable Preacher, said he, Eloquent only in those own Eyes, who vailest without Wit, or Truth, or Discretion. The Malignity of thy Temper perverteth Nature, thy Learning maketh thee more barbarous, thy Study of Humanity more Inhuman; thy Converse amongst Poets more grovelling, my, and dull. All Arts of civilizing others render thee rude and untractable; Courts have taught thee ill Manners, and polite Conversation has finished thee a Pedant. Besides, a greater Coward thanst thou in the Army. But never despond, I pass my Word, whatever Spoil thou takest shall certainly be thy own; although, I hope, that vile Carcase will first become a Prey to Kites and Worms.

BENTLEY durst not reply; but, half choaked with Spleen and Rage, withdrew, in full Resolution of performing some great Achievement.

With him, for his Aid and Companion, he took his beloved Wetton; resolving, by Policy or Surprise, to attempt some neglected Quarter of the Antients Army. They began their March over Carcasses of their slaughtered Friends; then to the Right of their own Forces; then wheeled Northward, until they came to Aldrovandus's Tomb, which they passed on the Side of the declining Sun. And now they arrived with Fear towards the Enemy's Out-guards; looking about, if, haply, they might spy the Quarters of the wounded, or some straggling Sleepers, unarmed and remote from the rest: As when two Mungrel-Curs, whom native Greediness, and domestick Want, provoke, and join in Partnership, although fearful, nightly to invade the Folds of some rich Grazier; they, with Tails depressed, and lolling Tongues, creep soft and slow; meanwhile, the conscious Moon, now in her Zenith, on their guilty Heads, darteth perpendicular Rays; nor dare they bark, although much provoked at her resplendent Visage, whether seen in Puddle by Reflexion, or in Sphere direct; but one surveys the region round, while the other scout the Plain, if, haply, to discover, at Distance from the flock, some Carcase half devoured, the Refuse of gorged Wolves, or ominous Ravens. So marched this lovely loving Pair of Friends, not with less Fear and Circumspection; when, at Distance, they might perceive two shining Suits of Armour, hanging upon an Oak, and the Owners not far off in a profound Sleep. The two Friends drew Lots, and the pursuing of this Adventure fell to Bentley; on he went, and in his Van Confusion and Awaze; while Horror and Affright brought up the Rear. As he came near; behold, two Heroes of the Antients Army, Phalaris and Assy, lay fast asleep: Bentley would fain have dispatched them both, and, pressing close, aimed his Pistol at Phalaris's Breast. But, then, the Goddess Affright, interposing, caught the Modern in her icy Arms, and dragged him from the Danger she foresaw; for both the dormant Heroes happened to turn at the same Instant, although soundly sleeping, and busy in a Dream.

* For Phalaris was just that Minute dreaming, how a most vile Poetaster had lampooned him, and how he had got him roaring in his Bull. And Ajop dreamed, that as he and the antient Chiefs were lying on the Ground, a wild Ass, broke loose, ran about trampling, and kicking, and dunging in their Faces. Bentley, leaving the two Heroes asleep, seized on both their Armours, and withdrew in quest of his Darling Wotton.

He, in the mean time, had wandered long in search of some Enterprize, until at length he arrived at a small Rivulet, that issued from a Fountain hard by, called, in the Language of mortal Men, Helicon. Here he stopped, and, parched with Thirst, resolved to allay it in this limpid Stream. Thrice, with profane Hands, he essayed to raise the Water to his Lips, and thrice it slipped all through his Fingers. Then he stooped prone on his Breast, but ere his Mouth had kissed the liquid Chrystal, Apollo came, and, in the Channel, held his Shield betwixt the Modern and the Fountain, so that he drew up nothing but Mud. For, although no Fountain on Earth can compare with the Clearness of Helicon, yet there lieth at Bottom a thick Sediment of Slime and Mud: for so Apollo begged of Jupiter, as a Punishment to those who durst attempt to taste it with unhallowed Lips, and for a Lesson to all, not to dare too deep, or far from the Spring.

At the Fountain Head, Wotton discerned two Heroes: The one he could not distinguish, but the other was soon known for Temple, General of the Allies to the Antients. His Back was turned, and

P 2

he

* This is according to Homer, who tells the Dreams of those that were killed in their Sleep.

he was employed in drinking large Draughts in his Helmet from the Fountain, where he had withdrawn himself to rest from the Toils of the War. Wotton, observing him, with quaking Knees, and trembling Hands, spoke thus to himself: Oh, that I could kill this Destroyer of our Army, what Renown should I purchase among the Chiefs! But to issue out against him, Man against Man, Shield
Vide Homer. against Shield, and Lance against Lance; what Modern of us dare?

For he fighteth like a God, and Pallas or Apollo are ever at his Elbow. But, Oh, Mother! if what Fame reporteth be true, that I am the Son of so great a Goddess, grant me to hit Temple with this Lance, that the Stroke may send him to Hell, and that I may return in Safety and Triumph, laden with his Spoils. The first Part of his Prayer the Gods granted, at the Intercession of his Mother and of Minus; but the rest, by a perverse Wind sent from Fate, was scattered in the Air. Then Wotton grasped his Lance, and, brandishing it thrice over his Head, darted it with all his Might, the Goddess his Mother, at the same Time, adding Strength to his Arm. Away the Lance went hizzing, and reached even to the Belt of the averted Antient, upon which lightly grazing, it fell to the Ground. Temple neither felt the Weapon touch him, nor heard it fall; and Wotton might have escaped to his Army, with the Honour of having remitted his Lance against so great a Leader, unrevenged; But Apollo enraged, that a Javelin, flung by the Assistance of so foul a Goddess, should pollute his Fountain, put on the Shape of ----, and softly came to young Boyle, who then accompanied Temple: He pointed, first to the Lance, then to the distant Modern that flung it, and commanded the young Hero to take immediate Revenge. Boyle, clad in a Suit of Armour which had been given him by all the Gods, immediately advanced against the trembling Foe, who now fled before him, as a young Lion, in the Libyan Plains, or Araby Desert, sent by his aged Sire to hunt for Prey, or Health, or Exercise; he scours along, wishing to meet some Tiger from the Mountains, or a furious Boar: It chance a wild Ass, with Brayings importune, affronteth his Ear, the generous Beast, although loathing to distain his Claws with Blood so vile, yet much provoked at the offensive Noise, which Echo, foolish Nymph, like her ill judging Sex, repeateth much louder, and with more Delight than Philomela's Song, he vindicates the Honour of the Forest, and hunts the noisy, long-eared Animal. So Wotton fled, so Boyle pursued. But Wotton heavy-armed, and slow of Foot, began to slack his Course; when his Lover Bentley appeared, returning laden with the Spoils of the two sleeping Antients. Boyle observed him well, and soon discovering the Helmet and Shield of Phalaris, his Friend, both which he had lately with his own Hands new polished and gilded; Rage sparkled in his Eyes, and leaving his Pursuit after Wotton, he furiously rushed on against this new Approacher. Fain would he be revenged on both; but both now fled different Ways: * And as a Woman in a little House, that Vide Homer. gets a painful Livelihood by Spinning; if chance her Geese be scattered o'er the Common, she courteth round the Plain from side to side, compelling here and there the Stragglers to the Flock; they cackle loud, and flutter o'er the Champain. So Boyle pursued, so fled this Pair of Friends; finding at length their Flight was vain, they bravely joined, and drew themselves in Phalanx.
 now

P 3

lanx.

* This is also after the manner of Homer: The Woman getting a painful Livelihood by Spinning hath nothing to do with the Similitude, nor is it excusable without just Answer.

lanx. First, Bentley threw a Spear with all his Force, hoping to pierce the Enemy's Breast; but Pallas came unseen, and in the Air took off the Point, and clapped on one of Lead, which, after a dead Bang against the Enemy's Shield, fell blunted to the Ground. Then Boyle, observing well his Time, took a Lance of wonderful Length and Sharpness; and as this Pair of Friends compacted stood close side to side, he wheeled him to the right, and with unusual Force darted the Weapon. Bentley saw his Fate approach, and flanking down his Arms close to his Ribs, hoping to save his Body, in went the Point, passing through Arm and Side, nor stopped, or spent its Force, until it had also pierced the valiant Wotton, who, going to sustain his dying Friend, shared his Fate. As when a skilful Cook hath trussed a Brace of Woodcocks, he, with Iron Skewers, pierces the tender Sides of both their Legs and Wings, close pinioned to their Ribs; so was this Pair of Friends transfixed, until down they fell, joined in their Lives, joined in their Deaths; so closely joined, that Charon would mistake them both for one, and wait them over Styx for half his Fare. Farewel, beloved, loving Pair; few Equals have you left behind: And happy and immortal still you be, if all my Wit and Eloquence can make you so.

And now

D. Bentley

A DISCOURSE

CONCERNING THE

Mechanical Operation

OF THE

S P I R I T.

IN A

L E T T E R

TO A

F R I E N D.

A

F R A G M E N T.

DUBLIN

Printed in the Year MDCCLVI.

THE BOOKSELLER'S
Advertisement.

THE following Discourse came into my Hands perfect and entire. But there being several Things in it which the present Age would not very well bear, I kept it by me some Years, resolving it should never see the Light. At length, by the Advice and Assistance of a judicious Friend, I retrenched those Parts that might give most Offence, and have now ventured to publish the Remainder: Concerning the Author, I am wholly ignorant; neither can I conjecture, whether it be the same with that of the two foregoing Pieces, the Original having been sent me at a different Time, and in a different Hand. The learned Reader will better determine; to whose Judgment I entirely submit it.

A
DISCOURSE

Concerning the MECHANICAL OPERATION of the SPIRIT, &c.

For T. H. Esquire, at his Chambers in the Academy of the Beaux Esprits, in New-Holland.

SIR,

IT is now a good while since I have had in my Head something, not only very material, but absolutely necessary to my Health, that the World should be informed in. For, to tell you a Secret, I am able to contain it no longer. However

This Discourse is not altogether equal to the two Former, the best Parts of it being omitted; whether the Bookseller's Account be true, that he durst not print the rest, I know not, nor indeed is it easy to determine whether he may be relied on, in any Thing he says of this, or the former Treatises, only as to the Time they were writ in, which, however, appears more from the Discourses themselves than his Relation.

ever, I have been perplexed for some time, to resolve what would be the most proper Form to send it abroad in. To which End, I have three Days been courting through Westminster-hall, and St. Paul's Church-yard, and Fleetstreet to peruse Titles; and I do not find any which holdeth so general a Vogue, as that of A Letter to a Friend: Nothing is more common than to meet with long Epistles addressed to Persons and Places, where, at first thinking, one would be apt to imagine it not altogether so necessary or convenient; such as, a Neighbour at next Door, a mortal Enemy, a perfect Stranger, or a Person of Quality in the Clouds; and these upon Subjects, in Appearance, the least proper for Conveyance by the Post; as, long Schemes in Philosophy; dark and wonderful Mysteries of State; Laborious Dissertations in Criticism and Philosophy, Advice to Parliaments, and the like.

Now, Sir, to proceed after the Method in present Wear. (For let me say what I will to the contrary, I am afraid you will publish this Letter, as soon as ever it cometh to your Hands;) I desire you will be my Witness to the World, how careless and sudden a Scribble it has been; That it was but Yesterday, when You and I began accidentally to fall into Discourse on this Matter: That I was not very well, when we parted; That the Post is in such Haste, I have had no manner of Time to digest it into Order, or correct the Style; and if any other modern Excuses, for Haste and Negligence, shall occur to you in reading, I beg you to insert them, faithfully promising they shall be thankfully acknowledged.

PRAY, Sir, in your next Letter to the Troquois Virtuosi, do me the Favour to present my humble Service to that illustrious Body, and assure them, I shall send an Account of those Phænomena, as soon as we can determine them at Gresham.

I HAVE

I HAVE not had a Line from the Literati of Tobinambou, these three last Ordinaries.

AND now, Sir, having dispatched what I had to say of Forms, or of Business, let me intreat, you will suffer me to proceed upon my Subject; and to pardon me, if I make no further Use of the epistolary Stile, until I come to conclude.

SECTION. I.

IT is recorded of Mahomet, that, upon a Visit he was going to pay in Paradise, he had an Offer of several Vehicles to conduct him upwards; as fiery Chariots, winged Horses, and celestial Sedans; but he refused them all, and would be born to Heaven upon nothing but his Ass. Now, this Inclination of Mahomet, as singular as it seems, hath been since taken up by a great Number of devout Christians; and, doubtless, with very good Reason. For, since That Arabian is known to have borrowed a Moiety of his religious System from the Christian Faith; it is but just he should pay Reprisals to such as would challenge them; wherein the good People of England, to do them all Right, have not been backward. For, although there is not any other Nation in the World so plentifully provided with Carriages for that Journey, either as to Safety or Ease; yet there are Abundance of us, who will not be satisfied with any other Machine, beside this of Mahomet.

FOR my own Part, I must confess to bear a very singular Respect to this Animal, by whom I take human Nature to be most admirably held forth in all its Qualities as well as Operations: And, therefore, fore, whatever in my small Reading occurs, concerning this our Fellow-Creature, I do never fail to set it down by way of Common-place; and when I have Occasion to write upon human Reason, Politicks, Eloquence, or Knowledge, I lay my Memorandums before me, and insert them with a wonderful Facility of Application. However, among all the Qualifications ascribed to this distinguished Brute, by antient or modern Authors, I cannot remember this Talent of bearing his Rider to Heaven hath been recorded for a Part of his Character, except in the two Examples mentioned already: Therefore, I conceive the Methods of this Art to be a Point of useful Knowledge in very few Hands, and which the learned World would gladly be better informed in: This is what I have undertaken to perform in the following Discourse. For, towards the Operation already mentioned, many peculiar Properties are required, both in the Rider and the Ass; which I shall endeavour to set in as clear a Light as I can,

BUT, because I am resolved, by all means, to avoid giving Offence to any Party whatever; I will leave off discoursing so closely to the Letter as I have hitherto done, and go on for the future by way of Allegory, although in such a manner, that the judicious Reader may, without much straining, make his Applications as often as he shall think fit. Therefore, if you please from henceforward, instead of the Term Ass, we shall make use of gilded, or enlightened Teacher; and the Word Rider we will exchange for that of Paraphrase Auditor, or any other Denomination of the like Import. Having settled this weighty Point; the great Subject of Enquiry before us is to examine, by what Methods this Teacher arriveth at his Gifts, or Spirit, or Light; and by what Intercourse between him and his Assembly, it is cultivated and supported.

In all my Writings, I have had constant Regard to this great End, not to omit and apply them to particular particular Occasions and Circumstances of Time, of Place, or of Person, but to calculate them for universal Nature, and Mankind in general. And of such Catholick Use I esteem this present Diffinition; for I do not remember any other Temper of Body, or Quality of Mind, wherein all Nations and Ages of the World have so unanimously agreed, as that of a Fanatick Strain, or Tincture of Enthusiasm; which improved by certain Persons or Societies of Men, and by them practised upon the rest, hath been able to produce Revolutions of the greatest Figure in History; as will soon appear to those who know any Thing of Arabia, Perſia, India, or China, of Morocco and Peru: Farther, it hath possessed as great a Power in the Kingdom of Knowledge, where it is hard to assign one Art or Science, which hath not annexed to it some Fanatick Branch: Such are the Philosopher's-Stone; * The Grand Elixir; the Planetary Worlds; the Squaring of the Circle; the Summum bonum; Utopian Common-wealths; with some others of less or subordinate Note; which all serve for nothing else, but to employ or amuse this Grain of Enthusiasm, dealt into every Composition.

* Some Writers hold them for the same, others not.

BUT, if this Plant hath found a Root in the Fields of Empire, and of Knowledge, it hath fixed deeper, and spread yet farther upon Holy Ground. Wherein, although it hath passed under the general Name of Enthusiasm, and perhaps arisen from the same Original, yet hath it produced certain Branches of a very different Nature, however often mistaken for each other. The Word in its universal Acceptation may be defined, Alighting up of the Soul or its Faculties above Matter. This Description will hold good in general; but I am only to understand it, as applied to Religion; wherein there are three general Ways of exalting the

Q

Soul,

Soul, or transporting it beyond the Sphere of Matter. The first is the immediate Act of God, and is called. Prophecy or Inspiration. The second is the immediate Act of the Devil, and is termed Possession. The third is the Product of natural Causes, the Effect of strong Imagination, Spleen, violent Anger, Fear, Grief, Pain, and the like. These three have been abundantly treated on by Authors, and therefore shall not employ my Enquiry. But the fourth Method of Religious Enthusiasm, or launching out of the Soul, as it is purely an Effect of Artifice and Mechanick Operation, hath been sparingly handled, or not at all, by any Writer; because, although it is an Art of great Antiquity, yet having been confined to few Persons, it long wanted the Advancements and Refinements, which it afterwards met with, since it hath grown so Epidemick, and fallen into so many cultivating Hands.

It is therefore upon this Mechanical Operation of the Spirit, that I mean to treat, as it is at present performed by our British Workmen. I shall deliver to the Reader the Result of many judicious Observations upon the Matter; tracing, as near as I can, the whole Course and Method of this Trade, producing parallel Instances, and relating certain Discoveries that have luckily fallen in my Way.

I HAVE said, that there is one Branch of Religious Enthusiasm, which is purely an Effect of Nature; whereas, the Part I mean to handle is wholly an Effect of Art, which, however, is inclined to work upon certain Natures and Constitutions, more than others. Besides, there is many an Operation, which in its Original was purely an Artifice, but, through a long Succession of Ages, hath grown to be natural. Hippocrates tells us, that among our Ancestors, the Scythians, there was a Nation called Long-heads, which at first began by a Custom among Midwives and

* Macrotcephali.

Nurses

Nurses of molding, and squeezing, and bracing up the Heads of Infants; by which means, Nature, shut out at one Passage, was forced to seek another, and, finding room above, shot upwards in the Form of a Sugar-Loaf; and being directed that Way, for some Generations, at last found it out of herself, needing no Assistance from the Nurse's Hand. This was the Original of the Scythian Long-heads, and thus did Custom from being a second Nature proceed to be a first: To all which there is something very analogous amongst us of this Nation, who are the undoubted Posterity of that refined People. For, in the Age of our Fathers, there arose a Generation of Men in this Island, called Round-heads, whose Race is now spread over three Kingdoms, yet, in its Beginning, was merely an Operation of Art, produced by a Pair of Scizars, a Squeeze of the Face, and a black Cap. These Heads, thus formed into a perfect Sphere in all Assemblies, were most exposed to the View of the Female Sort, which did influence their Conceptions so effectually, that Nature, at last, took the Hint, and did it of herself, so that a Round-head hath been ever since as familiar a Sight among us, as a Long-head among the Scythians.

UPON these Examples, and others easy to produce, I desire the curious Reader to distinguish, First, between an Effect grown from deus sine Nature, and one that is natural from its Beginning; Secondly, between an Effect wholly natural, and one which has only a natural Foundation, but where the Superstructure is entirely artificial. For the first and last of these I understand to come within the Districts of my Subject; and, having obtained these Allowances, they will serve to remove any Objections that may be raised hereafter against what I shall advance.

THE Practitioners of this famous Art proceed in general upon the following Fundamental: That, the Corruption of the Senses is the Generation of the Spirit: Because the Senses in Men are so many Avenues to the Fort of Reason, which in this Operation is wholly blocked up. All Endeavours must be therefore used, either to divert, bind up, stupify, fluster, and amuse the Senses, or else to juggle them out of their Stations; and while they are either absent, or otherwise employed, or engaged in a Civil War against each other, the Spirit enters and performs its Part.

Now, the usual Methods of managing the Senses upon such Conjectures are what I shall be very particular in delivering, as far as it is lawful for me to do, but, having had the Honour to be initiated into the Mysteries of every Society, I desire to be excused from divulging any Rites, wherein the Profane must have no Part.

BUT here, before I can proceed farther, a very dangerous Objection must, if possible, be removed: For it is positively denied by certain Criticks, that the Spirit can by any means be introduced into an Assembly of Modern Saints, the Disparity being so great in many material Circumstances, between the Primitive Way of Inspiration, and that which is practised in the present Age. This they pretend to prove from the second Chapter of the Acts, where, comparing both, it appears; First, that the Apostles were gathered together with one Accord in one Place; by which is meant, an universal Agreement in Opinion, and Form of Worship; a Harmony (say they) so far from being found between any two Conventicles among Us, that it is in vain to expect it between any two Heads in the same. Secondly, the Spirit instructed the Apostles in the Gift of speaking several Languages; a Knowledge so remote from our Dealers in this Art, that they neither understand Propriety of Words, or Phrases in their own. Lastly, (say these Objectors) the Modern Artificers do utterly exclude all Approaches of the Spirit, and bar up its antient Way

Way of entering, by covering themselves so close, and so industriously a-top. For they will needs have it as a Point clearly gained, that the Gloves Tongues never sat upon the Apostles Heads, while their Hats were on.

Now, the Force of these Objections seemeth to consist in the different Acceptation of the Word, Spirit: Which if it be understood for a supernatural Assistance, approaching from without, the Objectors have Reason, and their Assertions may be allowed; but the Spirit we treat of here proceeding entirely from within, the Argument of these Adversaries is wholly eluded. And upon the same Account, our Modern Artificers find it an Expedient of absolute Necessity to cover their Heads as close as they can, in order to prevent Perspiration, than which nothing is observed to be a greater Spender of Mechanick Light, as we may, perhaps, further shew in a convenient Place.

To proceed therefore upon the Phænomenon of Spiritual Mechanism, it is here to be noted, that in forming and working up the Spirit the Assembly hath a considerable Share, as well as the Preacher; the Method of this Arcaenum is as follows. They violently strain their Eyeballs inward, half closing the Lids; then, as they sit, they are in a perpetual Motion of Ses-sive, making long Hums at proper Periods, and continuing the Sound at equal Height, chusing their Time in those Intermissions, while the Preacher is at Ebb. Neither is this Practice, in any Part of it, so singular or improbable, as not to be true. I in distant Regions, from Reading and Observation. For, first, the

* Jaguis, or enlightened Saints of Peruvia India, see all their Visions, by help Mém. de M. of an acquired Straining and Pressing of the Eyes. Secondly, the Art of Ses-sive on a Beam, and swinging by Session upon a Cord, in order to raise artificial Ex-

* Guagini tastes, hath been derived to us from our * Scythian Ancestors, where it is practised at this Day among the Women. Lastly, the whole Proceeding, as I have here related it, is performed by the Natives of Ireland, with a considerable Improvement; and it is granted, that this noble Nation hath, of all others, admitted fewer Corruptions, and degenerated least from the Purity of the old Tartars. Now, it is usual for a Knot of Irish Men and Women, to abstract themselves from Matter, bind up all their Senses, grow visionary and spiritual, by Influence of a short Pipe of Tobacco, handed round the Company; each preserving the Smoke in his Mouth; until it cometh again to his Turn to take in fresh: At the same Time, there is a Concert of a continued gentle Hum, repeated and renewed by Instinct, as Occasion requireth, and they move their Bodies up and down, to a Degree, that sometimes their Heads and Points lie parallel to the Horizon. Mean while, you may observe their Eyes turned up in the Posture of one, who endeavours to keep himself awake; by which, and many other Symptoms among them, it manifestly appears, that the Reasoning Faculties are all suspended and superseded, that Imagination hath usurped the Seat, scattering a thousand Deliriums over the Brain. Returning from this Digression, I shall describe the Methods by which the Spirit approacheth. The Eyes being disposed according to Art, at first, you can see nothing, but, after a short Pause, a small glimmering Light begins to appear, and dance before you. Then, by frequently moving your Body up and down, you perceive the Vapours to ascend very fast, until you are perfectly dosed and flustered like one who drinketh too much in a Morning. Mean while, the Preacher is also at Work: He begins a loud Hum, which pierceth quite through; this is immediately returned by the Audience, and you find yourself prompted to imitate them them, by a mere spontaneous Impulse, without knowing what you do. The Interstitia are duly filled up by the Preacher, to prevent too long a Pause, under which the Spirit would soon faint and grow languid.

THIS is all I am allowed to discover about the Progress of the Spirit, with Relation to that Part, which is born by the Assembly; but in the Methods of the Preacher, to which I now proceed, I shall be more large and particular.

S E C T. II.

YOU will read it very gravely remarked in the Books of those illustrious and right eloquent Penmen, the Modern Travellers; that the fundamental Difference in Point of Religion, between the wild Indians and Us, lies in this; that we worship God, and they worship the Devil. But there are certain Criticks, who will by no means admit of this Distinction; rather believing, that all Nations whatsoever adore the true God, because they seem to intend their Devotions to some invisible Power, of greatest Goodness and Ability to help them, which perhaps will take in the brightest Attributes ascribed to the Divinity. Others, again, inform us; that those Idolaters adore two Principles; the Principle of Good, and that of Evil: Which, indeed, I am apt to look upon as the most universal Notion, that Mankind, by the mere Light of Nature, ever entertained of Things invisible. How this Idea hath been managed by the Indians and Us, and with what Advantage to the Understandings of either, may well deserve to be examined. To me the Difference appeareth little more than this, That they are put oftener upon their Knees by their Fears, and We by our Desires; that the former set them a Praying, and Us a *Curse*ing.

a Cursing. What I applaud them for is their Discretion in limiting Devotions and their Deities to their several Districts, not ever suffering the Liturgy of the White God to cross or interfere with that of the Black. Not so with Us, who pretending by the Lines and Measures of our Reason, to extend the Dominion of one invisible Power, and contract that of the other, have discovered a gross Ignorance in the Natures of Good and Evil, and most horribly confounded the Frontiers of both. After Men have lifted up the Throne of their Divinity to the Cælum Empyream, adorned with all such Qualities and Accomplishments as themselves seem most to value and possess; after they have sunk their Principle of Evil to the lowest Center, bound him with Chains, loaded him with Curses, furnished him with viler Dispositions than any Rakehell of the Town, accoutred him with Tail, and Horns, and huge Claws, and Saucer Eyes; I laugh aloud, to see these Reasoners, at the same Time, engaged in wise Dispute, about certain Walks and Purlicus, whether they are in the Verge of God or the Devil, seriously debating, whether such and such Influences come into Mens Minds, from above or below; whether certain Passions and Affections are guided by the Evil Spirit or the Good.

Dum fas atque nefas exiguo sine libidinum

Discernunt avidi----

Thus do Men establish a Fellowship of Christ with Belial, and such is the Analogy they make between clowen Tongues and clowen Feet. Of the like Nature is the Disquisition before us; it hath continued these hundred Ycars an even Debate, whether the Deportment and the Cant of our English Enthusiastic Preachers were Possession or Inspiration, and a World of Argument hath been drained on either Side, perhaps, to little Purpose. For, I think, it is in Life as in Tragedy, where it is held a Conviction of great Defect, both in Order and Invention, to interpose the Assistance of preternatural Power without an absolute and last Necessity. However, it is a Sketch of human Vanity, for every Individual to imagine the whole Universe is interested in his meanest Concern. If he hath got cleanly over a Kennel, some Angel, unseen, descended on purpose to help him by the Hand; if he hath knocked his Head against a Post, it was the Devil, for his Sins, let loose from Hell, on purpose to buffet him. Who, that sees a little paultry Mortal droning and dreaming, and drivelling to a Multitude, can think it agreeable to common good Sense, that either Heaven or Hell should be put to the Trouble of Influence or Inspection upon what he is about? Therefore, I am resolv'd immediately to weed this Error out of Mankind, by making it clear, that this Mystery of vending spiritual Gifts, is nothing but a Trade, acquired by as much Instruction, and mastered by equal Practice and Application as others are. This will best appear, by describing and deducing the whole Process of the Operation, as variously as it hath fallen under my Knowledge or Experience.

out

* * * * *

Here the whole Scheme of spiritual Mechanism was deduced and explained, with an Appearance of great Reading and Observation; but it was thought neither safe nor convenient to Print it.

* * * * *

* * * * *

HERE it may not be amiss to add a few Words upon the laudable Practice of wearing quilted Caps; which is not a Matter of meer Custom, Humour, or Fashion, as some would pretend, but an Institution of great Sagacity and Use; these, when moistened with Sweat, stop all Perspiration, and, by reverberating the Heat, prevent the Spirit from evaporating any way but at the Mouth; even as a skillful Housewife, that covers her Still with a wet Clout

Clout for the same Reason, and finds the same Effect. For it is the Opinion of choice Virtuosi, that the Brain is only a Crowd of little Animals, but with Teeth and Claws extreamly sharp, and, therefore, cling together in the Contexture we behold, like the Picture of Hobbes's Leviathan, or like bees in perpendicular Swarm upon a Tree, or like a Carrion corrupted into Vermin, still preserving the Shape and Figure of the Mother Animal. That all Invention is formed by the Morfure of two or more of these Animals upon certain capillary Nerves, which proceed from thence, whereof three Branches spread into the Tongue, and two into the right Hand. They hold also, that these Animals are of a Constitution extreamly cold; that their Food is the Air we attract, their Excrement Phlegm; and that what we vulgarly call Rheum, and Colds, and Distillations, is nothing else but an epidemical Looseness, to which that little Commonwealth is very subject, from the Climate it lies under. Farther, that nothing less than a violent Heat can disentangle these Creatures from their hamated Station of Life, or give them Vigour and Humour to imprint the Marks of their little Teeth. That if the Morfure be Hexagonal, it produceth Poetry; the Circular giveth Eloquence; if the Bite hath been Conical, the Person, whose Nerve is so affected, shall be disposed to write upon Politicks; and so of the rest.

I SHALL now discourse briefly, by what kind of Practices the Voice is best governed, towards the Composition and Improvement of the Spirit; for, without a competent Skill in tuning and toning each Word, and Syllable, and Letter, to their due Cadence, the whole Operation is incompleat, misleth entirely of its Effect on the Hearers, and puts the Workman himself to continual Pains for new Supplies without Success. For it is to be understood, that, in the Language of the Spirit, Cant and Drone-
ing

ing supply the Place of Sense and Reason, in the Language of Men: Because, in Spiritual Harangues, the Disposition of the Words, according to the Art of Grammar, hath not the least Use, but the Skill and Influence wholly lye in the Choice and Cadence of the Syllables; even as a discreet Composer, who, in setting a Song, changes the Words and Order so often, that he is forced to make it Non sense, before he can make it Musick. For this Reason, it hath been held by some, that the Art of Canting is ever in greatest Perfection when managed by Ignorance: Which is thought to be enigmatically meant by Plutarch, when he telleth us, that the best musical Instruments were made from the Bones of an Ass. And the profounder Criticks upon that Passage are of Opinion the Word, in its genuine Signification, meaneth no other than a Jaw-bone; although some rather think it to have been the Os sacrum: But, in so nice a Case, I shall not take upon me to decide: The Curious are at Liberty to pick from it whatever they please.

THE first Ingredient towards the Art of Canting is a competent Share of inward Light; that is to say, a large Memory, plentifully fraught with Theological Polysyllables and mysterious Texts from Holy Writ, applied and digested by those Methods and mechanical Operations already related; the Bearers of this Light resembling Lanterns, compact of Leaves from old Geneva Bibles; which Invention Sir Humphry Edw-n, during his Mayoralty, of happy Memory, highly approved and advanced; affirming the Scripture to be now fulfilled, where it says, Thy Word is a Lantern to my Feet, and a Light to my Paths.

Now the Art of Canting consisteth in skilfully adapting the Voice to whatever Words the Spirit delivers, that each may strike the Ears of the Audience with its most significant Cadence. The Force or Energy of this Eloquence is not to be found, as among an-tient

tient Orators, in the Disposition of Words to a Sentence, or the turning of long Periods ; but, agreeable to the modern Refinements in Musick, is taken up wholly in dwelling and dilating upon Syllables and Letters. Thus it is frequent for a single Vowel to draw Sighs from a Multitude ; and for a whole Assembly of Saints to sob to the Musick of one solitary Liquid. But these are Trifles ; when even Sounds inarticulate are observed to produce as forcible Effects. A Master Workman shall bize his Nose so powerfully, as to pierce the Hearts of his People, who are disposed to receive the Excrements of his Brain with the same Reverence as the Issue of it. Hawking, Spitting, and Belching, the Defects of other Mens Rhetorick, are the Flowers, and Figures, and Ornaments of his. For the Spirit, being the same in all, it is of no Import through what Vehicle it is conveyed.

It is a Point of too much Difficulty to draw the Principles of this famous Art within the Compass of certain adequate Rules. However, perhaps, I may one Day oblige the World with my Critical Essay upon the Art of Canting, Philosophically, Physically, and Musically considered.

BUT, among all Improvements of the Spirit, wherein the Voice hath born a Part, there is none to be compared with that of conveying the Sound through the Nose, which, under the Denomination of * Snuffling, hath passed with so great Applause in the World. The Originals of this Institution are very dark ; but having been initiated into the Mystery of it, and Leave being given me to publish it to the World, I shall deliver as direct a Relation as I can.

THIS

* The Snuffling of Men, who have lost their Noses by lewd Courses, is said to have given Rise to that Tone, which our Dissenters did too much affect.

W. Wotton

THIS Art, like many other famous Inventions, owed its Birth, or, at least, Improvement and Perfection, to an Effect of Chance; but was established upon solid Reasons, and hath flourished in this Island ever since with great Lustre. All agree, that it first appeared upon the Decay and Discouragement of Bagpipes, which, having long suffered under the mortal Hatred of the Brethren, tottered for a Time, and at last fell with Monarchy. The Story is thus related.

As yet, Snuffing was not; when the following Adventure happened to a Banbury Saint. Upon a certain Day, while he was far engaged among the Tabernacles of the Wicked, he felt the outward Man put into odd Commotions, and strangely pricked forward by the Inward; an Effect very usual among the Modern Inspired. For some think, that the Spirit is apt to feed on the Flesh, like hungry Wines upon raw Beef. Others rather believe, there is a perpetual Game at Leap-Frog between both; and sometimes the Flesh is uppermost, and sometimes the Spirit; adding, that the former, while it is in the State of a Rider, wears huge Rippon Spurs, and when it comes to the Turn of being Bearer, is wonderfully head-strong and hard-mouthed. However it came about, the Saint felt his Vessel full extended in every Part (a very natural Effect of strong Inspiration); and the Place and Time falling out so unluckily, that he could not have the Conveniency of Evacuating upwards, by Repetition, Prayer, or Lecture, he was forced to open an inferior Vent. In short, he wrestled with the Flesh so long, that he at length subdued it, coming off with honourable Wounds, all before. The Surgeon had now cured the Parts primarily affected; but the Disease, driven from its Post, flew up into his Head, and, as a skilful General, valiantly attacked in his Trenches, and beaten from the Field, by flying

VOL. XI. R Marches,

Marches, withdraws to the Capital City, breaking down the Bridges to prevent Pursuit ; so the Disease, repelled from its first Station, fled before the Rod of Hermes, to the upper Region, there fortifying itself ; but, finding the Foe making Attacks at the Nose, broke down the Bridge, and retired to the Head Quarters. Now the Naturalists observe, that there is in human Noses an Idiosyncrasy, by Virtue of which, the more the Passage is obstructed, the more our Speech delights to go through, as the Musick of a Flagelate is made by the Stops. By this Method, the Twang of the Nose becomes perfectly to resemble the Snuffle of a Bagpipe, and is found to be equally attractive of British Ears ; whereof the Saint had sudden Experience, by practising his new Faculty with wonderful Success in the Operation of the Spirit : For, in a short Time, no Doctrine passed for Sound and Orthodox, unless it were delivered through the Nose. Strait, every Pastor copied after this Original ; and those, who could not otherwise arrive to a Perfection, spirited by a noble Zeal, made use of the same Experiment to acquire it. So that, I think, it may be truly affirmed, the Saints owe their Empire to the Snuffling of one Animal, as Darius did his to the Neighing of another ; and both Stratagems were performed by the same Art ; for we read, how the

* Herodot. * Persian Beast acquired his Faculty, by covering a Mare the Day before.

I SHOULD now have done, if I were not convinced, that whatever I have yet advanced upon this Subject is liable to great Exception. For, allowing all I have said to be true, it may still be justly objected, that there is in the Commonwealth of artificial Enthusiasm some real Foundation for Art to work upon in the Temper and Completion of Individuals, which other Mortals seem to want.

Observe

Observe but the Gesture, the Motion, and the Countenance of some choice Professors, though in their most familiar Actions you will find them of a different Race from the rest of human Creatures. Remark your commonest Pretender to a Light within, how dark, and dirty, and gloomy he is without; as Lanthorns, which, the more Light they bear in their Bodies, cast out so much the more Soot, and Smoak, and fuliginous Matter to adhere to the Sides. Listen but to their ordinary Talk, and look on the Mouth that delivers it, you will imagine you are hearing some antient Oracle, and your Understanding will be equally informed. Upon these, and the like Reasons, certain Objectors pretend to put it beyond all Doubt, that there must be a Sort of preternatural Spirit, possessing the Heads of the Modern Saints: And some will have it to be the Heat of Zeal, working upon the Drugs of Ignorance, as other Spirits are produced from Lees by the Force of Fire. Some again think, that when our earthly Tabernacles are disordered and desolate, shaken and out of Repair, the Spirit delights to dwell within them, as Houses are said to be haunted, when they are forsaken and gone to decay.

To set this Matter in as fair a Light as possible, I shall here, very briefly, deduce the History of Fanaticism, from the most early Ages to the present. And if we are able to fix upon any one material or fundamental Point, wherein the chief Professors have universally agreed, I think we may reasonably lay hold on That, and assign it for the great Seed or Principle of the Spirit.

THE most early Traces we meet with of Fanatics in antient Story are among the Agyptians, who instituted those Rites known in Greece by the Names of Orgya, Panegyres, or Dionysia, whether introduced there by Orpheus and Melampus, we shall not dispute at present, nor, in all Likelihood, at any Time for the future. These Feasts

Diod. Sic. were celebrated to the Honour of L. 1. Plat. Osiris, whom the Grecians called Dionysius, and is the same with Bacchus. Osiride. Which hath betrayed some superficial

Readers to imagine, that the whole Business was nothing more than a Set of roaring, scouring Companions, overcharged with Wine; but this is a scandalous Mistake foisted on the World by a Sort of Modern Authors, who have too literal an Understanding; and, because Antiquity is to be traced backwards, do therefore, like Jews, begin their Books at the wrong End, as if Learning were a Sort of Conjuring. These are the Men, who pretend to understand a Book, by scouting through the Index, as if a Traveller should go about to describe a Palace, when he had seen nothing but the Privy; or like certain Fortune-tellers in Northern America, who have a Way of reading a Man's Destiny, by peeping in his Breech. For, at the Time

* Herald. l. 2. of instituting these Mysteries, * there was not one Vine in all Egypt, the Natives drinking nothing but Ale; which Liquor seemeth to have been far more antient than Wine, and has the Honour of owing its Invention and Progress, not only to the † Egyptian

† Diod. Sic. Osiris, but to the Grecian Bacchus, who, l. 1. & 3. in their famous Expedition, carried the Receipt of it along with them, and gave it to the Nations they visited or subdued. Besides, Bacchus himself was very seldom, or never drunk; for it was recorded of him, † Id. l. 4. that he was the first † Inventor of the Mitre, which he wore continually on his Head (as the whole Company of Bacchanals did) to prevent Vapours and the Head-ach after hard Drinking. And for this Reason (say some) the

Scarlet

Scarlet Whore, when she makes the Kings of the Earth drunk with her Cup of Abomination, is always sober herself, though she never baulks the Glass in her Turn, being, it seems, kept upon her Legs by the Virtue of her Triple Mitre. Now these Feasts were instituted in Imitation of the famous Expedition Osiris made through the World, and of the Company that attended him, whereof the Bacchanalian Ceremonies were See the Particulars in so many Types and Symbols. From which Account it is manifest, that Diod. Sic. the Fanatick Rites of these Bacchanals l. 1. § 3. cannot be imputed to Intoxications by Wine, but must needs have had a deeper Foundation. What this was, we may gather large Hints from certain Circumstances in the Course of their Mysteries. For, in the first Place, there was in their Processions an entire Mixture and Confusion of Sexes; they affected to ramble about Hills and Desarts: Their Garlands were of Ivy and Vine, Emblems of Cleaving and Clinging; or of Fir, the Parent of Turpentine. It is added, that they imitated Saturs, were attended by Goats, and rode upon Asses, all Companies of great Skill and Practice in Affairs of Gallantry. They bore for their Ensigns certain curious Figures, perched upon long Poles, made into the Shape and Size of the Virga genitalis, with its Appurtenances, which were to many Shadows and Emblems of the whole Mystery, as well as Prophecies set up by the Female Conquerors. Lastly, in a certain Town of Africa, the whole Solemnity, * stripped of all its Types, was * Dionysia performed in puris naturalibus, the Vo- Brauronia. taries, not flying in Coveys, but sorted into Couples. The same may be farther conjectured from the Death of Orpheus, one of the Institutors of these Mysteries, who was torn in Pieces by

Women, because he refused † to † Vide Photi- communicate his Orgyes to them; which um in ex- others explained, by telling us, he had cerptis e Co- castrated himself upon Grief, for the none. Loss of his Wife.

OMITTING many others of less Note, the next Fanaticks we meet with, of any Eminence, were the numerous Sects of Hereticks, appearing in the five first Centuries of the Christian Æra, from Simon Magus and his Followers, to those of Eutychus. I have collected their Systems from infinite Reading, and comparing them with those of their Successors in the several Ages since, I find there are certain Bounds set even to the Irregularities of Human Thought, and those a great deal narrower than is commonly apprehended. For, as they all frequently interfere, even in their wildest Ravings, so there is one fundamental Point, wherein they are sure to meet, as Lines in a Center, and that is the Community of Women: Great were their Sollicitudes in this Matter, and they never failed of certain Articles in their Schemes of Worship, on purpose to establish it.

THE last Fanaticks of Note were those which started up in Germany, a little after the Reformation of Luther, springing, as Mushrooms do, at the End of a Harvest; such were John of Leyden, David George, Adam Neuster, and many others, whose Visions and Revelations always terminated in leading about half a Dozen Sisters, apiece, and making that Practice a fundamental Part of their System. For, human Life is a continual Navigation, and, if we expect our Vessels to pass with Safety through the Waves and Tempests of this fluctuating World, it is necessary to make a good Provision of the Flesh, as Seamen lay in Store of Beef for a long Voyage.

Now

Now from this brief Survey of some principal Sects among the Fanatics in all Ages (having omitted the Mahometans and others, who might also help to confirm the Argument I am about) to which I might add several among ourselves, such as the Family of Love, Sweet Singers of Israel, and the like; and, from reflecting upon that fundamental Point in their Doctrines, about Women, wherein they have so unanimously agreed, I am apt to imagine, that the Seed or Principle which has ever put Men upon Visions in things Invisible, is of a Corporal Nature: For the profounder Chemists inform us, that the strongest Spirits may be extracted from Human Flesh. Besides, the Spinal Marrow, being nothing else but a Continuation of the Brain, must needs create a very free Communication between the Superior Faculties and those below: And thus the Thorn in the Flesh serves for a Spur to the Spirit. I think it is agreed among Physicians, that nothing affects the Head so much as a tertiginous Humour, repelled and elated to the upper Region, found by daily Practice to run frequently up into Madness. A very eminent Member of the Faculty assured me, that when the Quakers first appeared, he seldom was without some Female Patients among them for the furor-----Persons of a visionary Devotion, either Men or Women, are, in their Complexion, of all others, the most amorous: For Zeal is frequently kindled from the same Spark with other Fires, and, from inflaming Brotherly Love, will proceed to raise that of a Gallant. If we inspect into the usual Progress of modern Courtship, we shall find it to consist in a devout Turn of the Eyes, called Ogling; an artificial Form of Canting and Whining by Rote, every Interval, for Want of other Matter, made up with a Shrug or a Hum, a Sigh or a Groan; the Style compact of insignificant Words, Incoherences and Repetitions. These I take to be the most accomplished Rules of Address to a Mistress ; and where are these performed with more Dexterity than by the Saints ? Nay, to bring this Argument yet closer, I have been informed by certain sanguine Brethren of the first Class, that in the Height and Orgasms of their Spiritual Exercise it has been frequent with them † † † † † ; immediately after which, they found the Spirit to relax and flag of a sudden with the Nerves, and they were forced to hasten to a Conclusion. This may be farther strengthened, by observing, with Wonder, how unaccountably all Females are attracted by visionary or enthusiastick Preachers, although never so contemptible in their outward Mein ; which is usually supposed to be done upon Considerations purely spiritual, without any carnal Regards at all. But I have Reason to think, the Sex hath certain Characteristicks, by which they form a truer Judgment of human Abilities and Performings, than we ourselves can possibly do of each other. Let that be as it will, thus much is certain, that however spiritual Intrigues begin, they generally conclude like all others ; they may branch upwards towards Heaven, but the Root is in the Earth. Too intense a Contemplation is not the Business of Flesh and Blood ; it must, by the necessary Course of Things, in a little Time let go its Hold, and fall into Matter. Lovers, for the Sake of Celestial Converse, are but another Sort of Platonicks, who pretend to see Stars and Heaven in Ladies Eyes, and to look or think no lower, but the same Pit is provided for both : And they seem a perfect Moral to the Story of that Philosopher, who, while his Thoughts and Eyes were fixed upon the Constellations, found himself seduced by his lower Parts into a Ditch.

I HAD somewhat more to say upon this Part of the Subject; but the Post is just going, which forceth me in great Haste to conclude,

Pray, burn this Letter as soon as it comes to your Hands.

S I R,

Yours, &c.

F I N I S.

BOOKS printed and sold by GEORGE FAULKNER, Printer and Bookseller in Essex-street.

T HE Universal History, in 7 Vols. Folio (which may be bound in 9) with Maps, Cuts, Notes, Chronological and other Tables, Price, neatly bound,	l.	s.	d.
	9	2	0
Ditto in 20 Vols. Octavo, bound,	5	10	0
The Works of J. SWIFT, D.D.D.S.P.D. in 8 Vols. 8vo. neatly bound,	2	0	0
Ditto in Twelves, neatly bound,	1	1	8
The Letters of Pliny the Younger, with Observations on each Letter; and an Essay on Pliny's Life, addressed to Charles Lord Boyle, by John Earl of Orrery, in 2 Vols. 8vo.	0	11	4 ^b
The Present State of Europe	0	5	5
The Spirit of Laws. Translated from the French of the celebrated M. de Secondat, Baron de Montesquieu, in 2 Vols. Octavo,	0	10	10
Peter Wilkins, 2 Vols. 12mo.	0	4	10
The History of Pompey the Little; or the Life and Adventures of a Lap-Dog,	0	2	2
The History of Jasper Banks, commonly called the Handsome Man, in 2 Vols.	0	2	8 ^b
Life of Madam Maintenon,	0	2	2
Hildrop's Contempt of the Clergy,	0	1	7 ^b
Chambers's Dictionary, 2 Vols. Folio,	4	11	0
Supplement to ditto, 2 Vols. Folio,	4	11	0
Clarissa,

B O O K S.

l. s. d.

Voltaire's Letters concerning the English Nation, 12mo.	0	1	1
A Vindication of the Divinity and Mankind of our Saviour Jesus Christ; as also of the Godhead of the Holy Ghost; and of the Divine Religious Worship that is respectively due to them both,	0	2	2
The Conduct of a Married Life,	0	2	1
Thoughts on Religion, and other various Subjects, by M. Pascal, 8vo.	0	4	4
History of the Holy Bible, by Question and Answer, 8vo.	0	5	5
The Pantheon, or History of the Heathen Gods,	0	2	6
The Winter Evening Tales, containing 17 delightful Novels,	0	2	1
Messieurs Port-Royals Greek Grammar, recommended by all the Universities in Europe	0	6	6
The Compleat Family-Piece, with Directions for Hunting, Hawking, Fishing, Fowling, Conserve, Confectionary, Cookery, Physic and Surgery,	0	3	1
Dissertation on Parties,	0	2	8 ^h
Political Tracts,	0	2	8 ^h
Oldcastle's Remarks on the History of England,	0	2	8 ^h
Letters on the Spirit of Patriotism,	0	2	2
N. B. The four Books abovementioned were written by Lord Bolingbroke.
Rudiments of Antient History,	0	2	8 ^h
Ellis's Modern Husbandman, 3 Vols. 8vo.	0	16	1
Customs and Manners of the Romans,	0	2	8 ^h
The History of Lewis XI. King of France, 2 Vols. 12mo. By M. Duclos,	0	5	5
Heads of Self-Examination for a King. By Mons. de Fenelon,	0	2	2
			An

B O O K S.

	l. s. d.
An Essay on the Cause and Decline of Foreign Trade. By Sir Matthew Decker,	0 2 2
Pharlamond, or the New Knight-Errant, &c. 2 Vols. 12mo. By Mr. Marivaux,	0 4 4
The PRECEPTOR; containing a general Course of Education, wherein the first Principles of polite Learning are laid down, in a Way more suitable for trying the Genius, and advancing the Instruction of all Persons. In 12 Parts. Illustrated with Maps, and a great Number of other useful Plates, engraved by the best Hands, 2 Vols.	0 11 4 ^b
Ditto, with the Maps coloured,	0 11 11
Berwick's Life,	0 2 8 ^b
Life of King David,	0 5 5
Joseph Andrews,	0 2 8 ^b
Uncertainty of the Signs of Death,	0 1 8
Gualtherus and Grifelda,	0 1 8
Theobald's Shakespear, 7 Vols. 12mo.	1 7 0
Matho, or the Cosmotheoria Puerilis, 2 Vols.	0 5 5
Truth in a Mask,	0 2 2
Simpson's Algebra,	0 6 6
Gordon's Geographical Grammar,	0 5 0
The Rambler, 6 Vols. 12mo.	0 13 0
Ditto bound, 3 Vols.	0 11 4 ^b
Scarron's Works, 2 Vols. 12mo.	0 5 5
Swift's Letters, 12mo.	0 2 8
Turkish Spy at Paris, 8 Vol. 12mo.	0 17 4
Pope's Essay on Man,	0 1 1
Oeconomy of Human Life,	0 1 1
Fables for the Fair Sex,	0 1 1
Mead on the Small Pox,	0 1 1
The Cellar-Book, or the Butler's Assistant,	0 1 1

b
h b
b
b
b
5
3
4 1 1 1 1